NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—AQUA AMARELLA restores the Human Hair to its pristine hue, no matter at what age. JOHN GOSNELL and Co. have at length, with the aid of one of the most eminent Chemists, succeeded in perfecting this wonderful liquid. It is now offered to the public in a more concentrated form, and at a lower price. Sold in bottles, 3s. each; also 5s., 7s. 6d., and 15s. each, including brush. London: Angel-passage, 93, Upper Thames-street, E.C.

CLEVELAND'S WALNUT POMADE
Cures Baldness, produces Whiskers, darkens Red and restores Grey Hair to its natural colour.

Vice-Chancellor Stuart, in granting an injunction protecting Cleveland's Pomade, said:—"It is clear that Cleveland's is the only real and original Walnut Pomade which appears to have been made for twenty years, and I regret I cannot restrain defendants from pirating the name of Walnut, which, being a general one, any dishonest person can adopt."

Sold in pots at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., and 3s. 6d. By post for twenty-four stamps. Order "Cleveland's" of any Chemist in the World.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss [which cannot fail to fit] forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
Good Appetite.—Excellent Digestion.—In the majority of persons loss of appetite is the first indication of departing health, and should at once receive attention, or actual disease will follow. For the cure of disordered digestion and liver complaints, Holloway's excellent Pills are probably unrivalled, certainly unsurpassed. The invalid will never experience disappointment or failure in the removal of his ailment by means of these purifying Pills. On reaching the stomach they immediately correct heartburn, flatulency, and undue acidity; they secure the secretion of perfect bile, and, passing into the intestinal canal, they gently arouse it to natural activity, without producing pain, irritation, or exhaustion. For these reasons, Holloway's Pills are peculiarly well adapted for a family aperient.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. WOOD stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 12, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."

Each Packet is tin-lined, and labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

J. E. and Co. also prepare the above Cocoa with Condensed Milk. Sold in Tins, labelled "Epps's Milky Cocoa." J. E. and Co. also prepare Epps's Cacaoine, a very thin evening drink, and Epps's Milky Cacaoine.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 18; Agra and Madras, July 16; Calcutta, July 15.

AN expedition against the Loshais has at length been set down for next cold season. The Government has adopted Lord Napier's plan of campaign, but has cut down to some extent his estimates of outlay. It is to be hoped that the consequent saving will not spoil in any way the thoroughness of the work cut out for our troops. Major Macdonald and Mr. Edgar will take an important part in the operations. In view of the climate and the jungles they will have to pass through, it is proposed to obtain most of the coolies from the Santhal districts, many of whom will doubtless be induced to stay behind afterwards as labourers on the plantations of Sylhet and Cachar.

THE Persian Gulf has been keeping up its old character for heat and unhealthiness. At Lingah, Bahrein on the Arab shore, and in the Turkish camp at Khatif cholera has begun its deadly work, while scores of sailors in the men-of-war on the Gulf have succumbed to cholera, sunstroke or heat-apoplexy. Among the victims to cholera was Dr. Hart, Acting Surgeon to the Magpie, at Bahrein, on whose Sheikh he had just been attending for that or some other disease. We hear loud complaints of the needless suffering caused by the absence of all cooling arrangements on board ships originally intended for the Canadian Lakes. If these complaints be well founded, they point to an amount of blundering which would never have been tolerated in the days of the old Indian Navy.

THE Indian papers give some fresh details regarding the progress of affairs in Afghanistan. On the murder of Feramorz Khan, the Ameer's generalissimo, a lucid light seems to be thrown from the report that he had quarrelled with Aslam Khan, his suspected murderer, about the plan of operations against Yakoob Khan. The former, it seems, was for advancing boldly towards Herat, while Aslam Khan, as if speaking for his brother, the Ameer, insisted on some course less openly hostile to Yakoob Khan. If he murdered Feramorz Khan, what then was his object? To favour Yakoob against his father, or to smoothe the road to their reconciliation? Be that as it may, we learn by telegram that Aslam Khan was to reach Kabul a prisoner on 18th July, and be brought up in irons on the same day before the Durbar. As for Yakoob Khan, his conferences with his father had not come to an end by the latest telegraphic tidings from Calcutta.

ACCORDING to a Calcutta telegram of August 12, Sayad Turki and his antagonist Ibrahim have come to terms regarding certain provinces of Muscat; the latter retaining Sohar, while the former receives Saweyk and Memoh. The same telegram reports Bokhara tranquil, and its king still resident at Shahr-i-Sabz. In India the rumour prevails that Abdurrahman Khan has been made King of Bokhara by the Russians, but in some well-informed quarters this story is regarded with suspicion, if not with downright disbelief. It is admitted however that Abdurrahman was at Samarkand on the 16th June, and it is generally believed that Russia has made peace with Bokhara.

WE are glad to hear that the command of the Allahabad Division, vacated by General Fraser-Tytler, has been offered to Sir Henry Tombs, of the Bengal Artillery, one of our foremost heroes at the siege of Delhi, to say nothing of former services in Gwalior and on the Sutlej, of his subsequent exploits under Sir Colin Campbell in Oude and Rohilkund, and of his timely successes in the Bhotan campaign.

THE reply of the Indian Government to Sir G. Balfour has at length been published. We hope to reprint it in our next issue. For the present we have only room to state that General Balfour is charged with exaggerating the value and extent of the reductions in military strength since 1862, with overlooking the difference in money between the value of each soldier in 1863 and his value now, and in making insufficient allowance for those new sources of outlay since 1862, which now amount to £2,396,830. Thus, according to General Norman, the present expenditure is lower by about £5,000 than it would be on the rates of outlay in 1862. These new figures however need careful pondering, and we shall not be surprised to see General Balfour return to the charge like a giant refreshed.

THE question of the rightful heir to the Gaddhi of the late Gaikwar of Baroda has after all been settled by the course of nature in favour of his brother, Malharao. The widow of the late sovereign gave birth to a daughter who clinched the Rani's disappointment by dying a few hours afterwards. Great accordingly were the rejoicings in the palace of Malharao, who has at length completed the not uncommon Eastern process of stepping from a prison to a throne. It appears that the new Gaikwar has likewise proved true to his Eastern breeding in the rewards he is said to have heaped on the astrologers who had foretold the birth of a daughter, not of a son.

BOMBAY has been enlivened by four days of spirited debating among the Town Justices on the question of a thorough reform in the Municipal Government. Mr. Knight, the well-known journalist, being stopped from reading off his speech, fell back on his own unprepared eloquence, and turned his command of ready utterance to such good account as to elicit the admiring comments of his opponent, Mr. James Taylor, who spoke next. Some sharp oratorical blows were exchanged among the speakers; Mr. Crawford, the Commissioner, accusing Mr. Shahpoorjee of wilful misstatements—lies the Persian Minister would have called them—a charge which Mr. Shahpoorjee indignantly repelled. In the course of this little word-battle Mr. Crawford observed that "whenever anyone gave him a foul blow he always tried to hit his opponent straight between the eyes." Beyond this spurt of warm language however Mr. Crawford appears to have made a strong but temperate defence of his conduct as Commissioner. Another speaker roundly charged the Municipality with bankruptcy, and a good deal of general incrimination enlivened the debate. At last it was resolved by a large majority to request the Government to transfer all the financial powers vested in the Bench and its Commissioner to a Town Council of sixteen, six a-piece to be chosen by Government and the Justices, and four by the ratepayers. The Town Hall was crowded day after day during the debate by thousands of excited ratepayers, and the scenes which took place are described as "without precedent or parallel in the history of Bombay."

The emancipation of woman appears to have found a new apostle in a high-caste lady of Madras, who has been lecturing her countrymen and women in Telugu on "Human Being," whatever that may be supposed to mean. The meeting, we are told, was attended by a good many Hindu gentlemen and Pundits. Unlike her English models, the Madras lady forbore from asserting the superiority of women to men. The men, she acknowledged, had the best of it in point of learning, although she quoted a number of female pundits who at various times had been renowned alike for their learning, their "masculine bravery," and their devotion to the Fine Arts. Some of them had even delivered lectures and taught morals to their husbands. The masculine mind at once recurs to Mrs. Caudle as the type of this interesting class, whose turn for lecturing has now taken a wider range, and whose moral teaching disdains the vulgar privacy of wedded life. Of course Mrs. Sree Rungamba Garu strengthened her reference to the "wonderful literary works of various female Pundits in the north and south of India" by an appeal to the recent march of intellect among her strong-minded sisters in Europe and America. In view of their achievements and of the great things already done by the Female Improvement Society in Calcutta, she claimed the right to lecture in aid of woman's advancement in Madras also. The lateness of the hour prevented her from going further into this hopeful subject for that present; but in compliance with the requests of her male admirers, she promised to give a course of lectures which we hope the local journals will be good enough to report for our benefit in becoming detail. A Hindu lady's views of "human being" and woman's rights may afford us a new variation from the stereotyped performances of our own "Ecclesiazusæ" in the West.

The Indian papers continue to give unfavourable news from Persia regarding the famine, in whose existence the Persian Minister in England declines to believe. No relief appears to have been forwarded to the towns of Shiraz, Kasan, and Khorassan, and about five hundred deaths are reported daily from Khorassan alone. The rich people are accused of buying up all the corn that came into the cities. Yezd alone has found temporary relief from the arrival of large supplies of corn from Ispahan. A large emigration has taken place from Faruz, where even the selling of children failed to support life. Yezd has been further fortunate in the removal of its former Governor, who had conspired with the grain dealers to keep up prices. The new Governor at once compelled those who had corn in stock to sell it to the poor at reasonable rates. Before his arrival nearly 25,000 people had left the city, and several scores of deaths occurred daily from sheer want of food. At Nahen those who could not get away remained only to die of hunger. In Ispahan seventy to eighty were dying daily at the end of May, and the sale of children was going on. Similar reports came from Kassain and Kome, and several other places. Numbers of starving fugitives were crowding into Teheran, of whom about fifteen were daily found dead or dying in the streets. Some 18,000 people are said to have perished through hunger or disease in Khorassan. The "beautiful cities" of Bustam, Damgan, and Subjavar have been "reduced to desolation and ruin." The support they have received from their wealthy brethren in Calcutta and Batavia has saved the Armenians of Ispahan from their share of the common suffering. Nor does the record of future prospects tally with the Persian Minister's rose-coloured view of things. The year's crop is said to be extremely scanty, especially in the districts of Dashtustan and Bagdad.

The Madras papers report a serious, if not a deadly affray at Bangalore, in which two officers of the 21st Fusiliers were badly wounded. It appears that Ensigns Frere and Lambart with two privates or sergeants of a Lancer regiment went one evening towards the bungalow of a Mr. Van Ingen, for the purpose, it is said, of taking their revenge on some of Mr. Van Ingen's family who had previously given one of the ensigns a very bad beating for some offence not clearly made out. On seeing their approach one of the ladies in the house gave the alarm. Her father and brothers rushing out, some of them with loaded firearms, a scuffle ensued, in the course of which both officers were badly shot, Mr. Frere's recovery being at one time very doubtful. A magisterial inquiry began on the 3rd July, but the evidence so far throws little light on the cause of the affray. It is apparent however that there was a lady, as usual, in the case; and it may be taken for granted that the two officers had no business in Mr. Van Ingen's compound after dark.

With regard to the death of Major Way, late Political Agent at Muscat, we are glad to hear that the Resident in the Persian Gulf and the Indian Government concur in the opinion expressed by Major Ross, that there was nothing to show that the explosion which caused his death was not the result of pure accident.

The Public Works Department seems to labour under a strange fatality. One after another of the structures reared under its auspices betrays symptoms of premature decay. In addition to the recent failures at Allahabad, Poonah, and Jabalpore, we are now informed that the new barracks at Allahabad are so leaky as to be nearly untenantable, and those at Sagar are on the point of tumbling down altogether. The fronts of these latter are said to be full of cracks more or less serious; many of the arches have to be propped up with wooden supports or built up with solid stone; and from some of them the men have even been ordered out. Mere rubble, without a particle of mortar, is said to have been discovered in some of the pillars. A committee of inquiry has been ordered to sit at Sagar. As the charge for these barracks was £130,000, somebody must have made his profit out of their construction.

In spite of the alleged depression in the trade of India last year, we are glad to note that the seaborne trade of Bengal for that year exceeded that of any of the four previous years, being about a million and a-half better than the trade for 1868-9, and more than nine millions in advance of the total for 1866-7. The truth seems to be that while each merchant is making less than before, owing to the greater number of rivals, the total value of the Calcutta trade is steadily increasing. If the trade with France fell off from 2½ millions to little more than a million, the increased trade with other countries more than made up the difference. Germany's trade with India has risen from ten thousand to more than eighty-five thousand pounds, while the trade with the Mediterranean ports, which in 1866 was worth only ten thousand pounds, now stands at nearly half-a-million, the great bulk of which is due to the export side of India's account. The same remark holds good of the German trade, India's imports from Germany being rated at only eighteen hundred pounds. The remainder of last year's increase was contributed by Great Britain and North America.

In a little pamphlet on "The Dethronement of Law," reprinted from the New Monthly Magazine, the author, a retired Indian officer, pours forth a warning jeremiad over the anarchic tendencies of this democratic age, as seen from the stand point of a "laudator temporis acti." His essay is worth reading for its own sake, as a sober presentment of the dark side of a picture which certainly betrays a good many shadows to any one who regards it only under certain aspects and in relation to certain things. It is idle to ignore the disturbing and disintegrating effects of changes which are going on all over the civilised world. "The old order faileth" and only disorder seems just now to take its place. We are engaged, says Mr. Carlyle, in "shooting Niagara." Look out, says the pamphlet before us, for "an approaching universal dethronement of law." Its author's argument might almost be summed up in those lines of Virgil,

> ". . ubi fas versum atque nefas, quot bella per orbem, > Quam multæ scelerum facies."

It is a wicked and lawless world in short, this of to-day, and the cataclysm is coming sooner or later. Our boasted knowledge is undermining the foundations of morals and religion. Science and democracy are conspiring to upset everything old and good. The reign of chaos, moral, social, and political must be near at hand when even women are rising in revolt against their rightful lord and master, man. In America lawlessness and scepticism are already rampant, and Paris has become a frightful example of the ills that spring from modern progress in the same direction. After all said however, it is only the dark side of the picture that we have been invited to contemplate. So far therefore we hold it to be essentially a one-sided view. Too much altogether is made of particular features, of passing discords which may yet resolve themselves into perfect tune. No allowance is made for the fragmentary look of unfinished work, for real differences of national character and local conditions, for the possible workings of a higher than human law, or the natural process of regeneration through decay. If there is one thing modern science begins to proclaim more loudly than another, it is the supremacy of law throughout nature. If the lovers of old times and creeds could realise the latent power of Science as a moral and spiritual teacher, they would hardly rail against it so vehemently as they do because of its disturbing effects on old theological dogmas, or because of the passing mischief which mere sciolists may entail by rash inferences from half-studied facts. Is it in short either a fair or a pious deduction from things around us, to argue as if some evil principle were enthroned in the place of that Supreme Good whom men in all climes and ages have worshipped under different names? Human law is in fact the expression of superior human strength; it is the will of the strongest reduced to rule. It is impossible therefore that such law should ever be permanently dethroned, so long as men are men, obeying the instinct which has hitherto led them to live together under the sanctions of rules devised by the strongest for the maintenance of law and order within the limits of their power. In times of lawlessness the will of the strongest is sure at length to express itself in Lynch-law. Such being the tendency of human nature, why should we fear the dethronement of that higher law which works in the long run for good throughout the universe.

Military Furloughs, &c.—The following officers have obtained furloughs to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified (in July):—Conductor J. Connolly, of the Ordnance Department, for two years. Lieut. J. W. Bernard (B battery R.H.A., E brigade), from date of departure. Captain and brevet major A. W. Twiss (H. battery 9th brigade), from date of embarkation, for fifteen months, on private affairs. Ensign W. Montgomery, 2nd foot (1st battalion), from date of departure. Lieut. the Hon. E. Gifford, 83rd foot, to Bombay, from date of departure, for ten days. Assist. surg. S. Duckering, 8th N.I., for thirty days from date of departure, to Bombay, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate. Veterinary surgeon G. Blake (18th brigade R.A.), from May 30 to Nov. 30. Second captain and adjutant R. H. Young (6th brigade), from May 30 to Nov. 30. Quartermaster H. Nelson (9th brigade), to Bombay, from date of departure for thirty days, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate. Capt. (brev. major) J. I. Robinson, cadre 5th regt. Bengal light cavalry, for twenty months. Lieut. (brev. capt.) C. R. Oxley, Madras staff corps, for two years. The unexpired portion of the furlough, dated March 17, 1869, to Major F. W. Knight, staff corps, is cancelled from June 3 last, the date of that officer's return to duty. The furlough on private affairs to Colonel J. A. Ballard, Royal (Bombay) engineers, mint master, on Jan. 4 last, is extended for a further period of six months on the same account. Lieut. T. Mayhew, No. 3 batt. 6th brig. R.A., to remain at Bombay for thirty days, from July 4. Capt. St. J. D. Daubeny, to England, from date of embarkation, for fifteen months, on private affairs.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s Forces.—R. F. W. Cumberland, late captain H.M.'s 70th foot, at Nynee Tal, June 28. Mr. T. Cock, late 12th lancers, at Leicester, aged 83, July 29. Capt. H. Girardot, R.H.A., at Dublin, aged 34, July 28. Capt. A. F. Mules, 91st Highlanders, at Honiton, aged 27, July 25.

Bengal.—Dr. H. A. Woolton, late of the Bengal Service, at Dumfries, aged 81, July 26.

Madras.—W. R. Grylls, M.D., civil surgeon, at Coconada, July 1. Gen. Garstin, at Bangalore, July 13.

Bombay.—Dr. Hart, of H.M.'s Euphrates, serving on H.M.'s Magpie, in the Persian Gulf, of cholera, at Bahrein, June 30. Col. Ewen Grant, Bombay S.C., at Blackheath, Aug. 9.

PASSENGERS ARRIVED AT BRINDISI.

Per str. Bangalore, Aug. 8.—From Bombay.—Major Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Ackhard and child, Mr. Watson, Rev. Mr. Royston. Messrs. Turnbull, Gladstone, Parker, Grant, and Sharkey. From Alexandria.—Mr. Lemoign, Mr. Lang. From Hong Kong.—Capt. Suir. From Madras.—Mr. Horsley. From Galle.—Mr. Sharp, Mr. Penny, Mr. Buckannan.

CIVIL ENGINEERS AND THEIR DISABILITIES.

Now that the new college for civil engineers has been fairly started into existence, with almost every promise of a fruitful issue, it is worth while considering what else remains to do before the seed thus sown can ripen into an abundant harvest. One great obstacle to the full success of the new institution will suggest itself to many of those who hope the best from an experiment, which promises to furnish India not only with a succession of trained engineers, but also, as the Duke of Argyll pointed out, with engineers trained in the spirit of English gentlemen. It is all very well to descant with Colonel Chesney upon the advantage of culture as an aid to professional training, and much may no doubt be said for the inducements which an improved scale of pay in India will offer to aspirants for a career in the Public Works Department of that country. But neither improved pay at first starting, nor the possession of that culture by which Colonel Chesney properly sets so much store, will make up for the continuance of those special disabilities under which the civil engineer in India still labours, in common with every English member of the uncovenanted services. The sooner that something is done to remove the inequalities which now divide one class of English public servants from another of the same social composition, the better chance will there be of securing the fittest men for what the Duke of Argyll pronounces "one of the noblest of all professions." If the future graduates of Cooper's-hill are to receive the culture of English gentlemen, they will naturally demand to be treated as such in the land of their future service. That such treatment is still withheld from civil engineers in India must be inferred not only from the complaints that continually reach us on this score, but from a fair comparison of their service-rules with those of covenanted civilians and of military officers in the same or in other departments.

From a paper which concisely sets forth their main grievances, we learn that "the junior ensign in the army or the youngest covenanted civil servant just arrived from England, takes precedence of civil engineers, no matter what their period of service may be or their grade." Here at any rate is one substantial grievance which needs prompt redressing before the best men can be induced to enter the Indian branch of "one of the noblest professions in the world." It is easy to call this a sentimental grievance; but while sentiment continues to govern nine-tenths of the world, it were perilous to deny the force of an argument which appeals yet more strongly to the man of general culture than to him who has no culture to boast of. In a country like India, where all Englishmen are foreigners, and almost every English official bears in native eyes a value corresponding with his official rank, so glaring an inequality claims all the less excuse. It cannot be justified on any firm grounds of expediency or fitness, and, so long as it exists, Colonel Chesney may despair of reaping the full fruits of the experiment he has been chosen to carry out.

The head of a certain Oxford College declined to take in "gentlemen-commoners" on the plea that all his commoners were gentlemen. We commend his principle to the consideration of the Indian Government. In every Indian department where important duties are discharged by officers of the ruling race, or even by natives, it would be only politic to treat those officers as socially equal to each other. It concerns alike their self-respect, their influence with the natives, their efficiency as public servants, that caste distinctions should in their case be carefully ignored. Why should a young ensign or a "sucking civilian" be placed socially higher than the civil engineer or the school-inspector, whose profession is at least as noble, and whose social antecedents may have been quite as good? The oddest thing is that the rule of inequality which marks off one Indian service from another is intensified by the absurdly unfair equality enforced between native and English members of the uncovenanted services in respect of leave and service rules. While the covenanted officer or civilian can recruit mind and body by frequent visits home on ample allowances, the civil engineer has to put up with "the same amount of leave and the same allowances which a native of India enjoys, living in his own country, and perhaps within a few miles of his own house." Can anything be more unfair than conditions like these, which make no difference between natives and Englishmen on a point where the widest possible difference exists? The unfairness surely speaks for itself. If our countrymen have any right to hold office at all in India, and no one would deliberately deny them a certain share in the government of an English dependency, their right to serve their country on terms befitting their own physical needs and capacities rather than those of their Indian compeers remains beyond dispute. They ought at least to have better pay and more facilities for recruiting their health and improving their minds in the land from which they came. It is a cruel mockery of justice to place them on the same theoretic footing as the Indian who lives in a congenial climate, and has not far to go in quest of the new strength implied in a visit to his home and friends. And this mockery is heightened to an intolerable extent by the greater privileges accorded to military engineers. A civil chief engineer of the first class draws on furlough £254 a-year less than a military executive engineer five grades below him in the same department. In fact the difference in this respect between two sets of officials discharging exactly the same duties seems to us wholly unwarrantable on whatever plea. While a military chief engineer of the first class draws £1,000 a-year on furlough, a civil chief engineer of the same grade can draw only £400. The same disproportion works down through every grade, so that a military executive engineer of the first grade draws on furlough £654 a-year against £354 drawn by a civil engineer of the same grade, while an assistant civil engineer of the second grade receives only £130 a-year as furlough pay against £252 drawn by a military engineer of the same standing.

Remember also that the highest amount of furlough pay open to a civil engineer is actually less by £100 a-year than the £500 a-year which a covenanted civilian of the lowest standing can almost always claim. Again, the military engineer can take eight years of furlough during his term of service, whereas the civil engineer is expected to satisfy himself with only two years. While the former can at any time go home on sick leave with English furlough pay, the latter may only take three years of sick leave in all. Neither his furlough nor sick leave can ever count as service qualifying for a pension, whereas his military rival can spend two years in twenty, and three in twenty-five, at home without loss of nominal service. Here surely is a state of things which calls for swift amendment if the new College is to bear fruit worthy of its apparent promise. While inequalities so glaring remain unredressed, what likelihood is there of securing a regular supply of highly-trained young men for a service in which they will be placed on a lower footing of social and pecuniary advantage than the fortunate few who enter the same department by a different door?

THE BRAHMO MARRIAGE BILL.

A singular document has recently arrived from India which throws much light on the internal conflicts of Hindu society, though in a direction precisely opposite to that which the authors would wish to indicate. The English public has heard from time to time of the marriage reforms introduced by the Brahmo Somaj, who have for the last ten years discarded the idolatrous portions of the Hindu marriage ritual, and have thereby forfeited the legality of their marriages. In the year 1868 they applied to Government for an Act that should legalise these unions, and Mr. H. Sumner Maine consequently introduced into the Legislative Council a comprehensive measure, the "Native Marriage Act" (analogous to the English Dissenters' Marriage Act), giving to all non-Christian natives the option of marrying before a civil registrar, while they might afterwards add whatever religious ceremonies they might prefer. This Bill, which had the cordial support of Lord Lawrence, then Viceroy, was strongly opposed by the orthodox Hindus and Parsis, and was ultimately withdrawn in favour of a modified Bill brought forward by Mr. Fitzjames Stephen, the provisions of which are strictly limited to the Brahmos alone, so that no other sections of Hindu society can have any reasonable ground for opposing it. This Bill, as finally presented by the Select Committee on March 27, 1871, is very simple. It requires that the bridegroom should have completed the age of 18 and the bride that of 14, that they should be unmarried (this term is explained as meant to include widows and widowers), that they should be unrelated to each other in any of the degrees prohibited by the customs which they acknowledge, that they should both declare themselves to be members of the Brahmo Somaj, and that the marriage should be solemnised in the presence of three credible witnesses (and with consent of the bride's father or guardian if she be under 18) before a registrar of Brahmo marriages. Further, the Bill legalises past Brahmo marriages (if properly public and strictly monogamous), and declares bigamy a penal offence in all persons married under this Act. A measure so carefully just, so well calculated to organise into definite form the amount of moral and social elevation which has long been urgently demanded by the higher consciences of the native Indian community, while scrupulously avoiding all interference with the outlying masses who are as yet content with heathenism,—deserves every possible encouragement from the friends of human, not to say Christian, civilisation.

But at the eleventh hour opposition from a new quarter has come to the front. The Brahmo Somaj has for several years been divided more or less visibly into two sections—the Conservatives, led by the venerable Debendro Nath Tagore, the chief renovator of the sect after the death of its founder, Ram Mohun Roy, and the Progressives, who, under the leadership of our late visitor, Keshab Chandar Sen, formed themselves in 1866 into the "Brahmo Somaj of India," since when their numbers have increased till they have reached to about twenty-fold those of the "Adi (or original) Brahmo Somaj." The differences between the two sections are not so much doctrinal as practical, and relate chiefly to the attitude taken in matters of social reform; the Conservatives being very anxious not to break more than can possibly be helped with Hindu notions. They do not, therefore, make any important alterations in their marriage customs beyond the omission of idolatrous rites in the nuptial ceremony. The bride is not called upon to say a word, and is merely presented by the father to the bridegroom. The Progressives, on the contrary, give her a fair share in the service, and expurge therefrom a quantity of irrelevant traditional matter.

They also sanction the marriage of widows, and intermarriage between different castes (a permission secured in Mr. Stephen's Bill by simply ignoring caste altogether), and they have done much, and are endeavouring to do more, to discourage the pernicious system of child-marriage. All this meets with no approval from the conservative Brahmos, and they look with alarm on the Bill which would support the parties acting under it in such dangerous innovations. They have therefore presented a petition against it, which is a curious sign of the times. The drift of it is that the tendency of the Bill is to separate the Brahmos from the general Hindu community, which the petitioners do not desire; that they do not believe that the present Brahmo marriages are invalid (an opinion directly opposed to the highest legal authorities of British India); that they approve of the marriage of girls at the age of twelve years; that no law is needed against bigamy and polygamy, as they are rapidly dying out; and, moreover, that such a law "will in many cases operate as a hardship in the instance of those whose wives are suffering from incurable diseases," "and who, under such circumstances, would at present be justified to contract a second marriage, notwithstanding the existence of the first wife." That is to say, polygamy is expiring so rapidly that no law is needed to stamp it as a crime, and that such a law would be very hard upon us when we want to commit that crime ourselves. All this mosaic of bad reasoning and questionable assertion is accompanied with repeated assumptions that the petitioners are the Brahmo Somaj, while "Baboo K. C. Sen and his followers" are described as an insignificant minority, who have no right to represent the Brahmo community. Now, the relative numbers of the Conservatives and the Progressives show these pretensions to be ludicrously misplaced, and, even were those numbers reversed, the case for the Bill would be equally sound, as the measure is a purely permissive one, compelling no man to act under it. It will be just as open to any Brahmo to marry on the old system after the passing of this Act, as it is now for English Dissenters to marry at church instead of at their own chapels.

The real sting to half-hearted native reformers lies in this,—that the Act will necessarily tend to crystallise the hitherto fluctuating variation of social type between Brahmoism and Hinduism; and this is precisely the result which most clearly indicates the importance of the measure. It is a definite step in the ascent of native civilisation; a definite branding of certain evils, physical and moral, and a definite acceptance of a higher standard of social life. Imposed upon no man, it is urgently desired by thousands, and the genuineness of the demand has been proved in the best possible way, by deliberate sacrifices for conscience' sake. That the sturdy Puritanism of English Quakers should have been emulated by "effeminate Bengalis,"—that Indian husbands and fathers should have consented to forfeit social rights and popular favour for the sake of pure moral and religious principles, is a most encouraging feature of modern Indian society. And we cannot doubt that the enlightened Government which has undertaken to rectify the injustice of their present position will see that purpose fulfilled to the last jot and tittle of the law.

TAXATION IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—There would be less to object to in the Local Budgets of India if the ways and means for obtaining money were less censurable. Various attempts have been made to impose direct and indirect taxes for local purposes. The house-tax represents the former, and the Choongee-tax the latter.

Overworked Collectors and Deputy-Commissioners experienced so much trouble in assessing and collecting the house-tax to meet police and sanitary expenses, that they hailed with delight the re-introduction of the Choongee or Octroi-tax, by which they often obtained ten times as much revenue without any trouble at all. Neither Governors, District Officers, nor Local Committees would open their eyes to the fact that Octroi was sucking the life-blood of commerce, and was educating the whole nation in corruption. Bribery, extortion, and smuggling have of late years become almost universal where Choongee has been permitted.

The house-tax failed because no clear rules were given for its assessment, and because it was sometimes confounded with Income-tax. I knew a decayed gentleman with a marble palace in Benares, on whom the assessment was nominal on account of his poverty.

The Income-tax has failed, because Government has never made it the interest of the taxpayers to see that their neighbours were properly taxed. A clumsy attempt was made in Oudh by the imposition of an Income-tax called the Lump assessment. Government decided on the sums which were to be raised in each estate, Talookah and Pergunnah; but these sums were fixed by a percentage on the Land Revenue, and the Talookhdars and their agents were allowed to distribute the burden. The poor were squeezed, and the rich got off cheaply. The Lump assessment of £12,500 on the City of Benares excited the ridicule of those who knew the wealth of that city.

What I wish to urge is that local rates for local purposes in India would succeed, provided that full publicity be given to the assessments, and that the latter be revised publicly by European officers not overwhelmed with other duties. Without publicity neither rates nor income-tax can succeed in India. The whole community must know what every individual pays. I am writing of the natives; European merchants hate to have their affairs known; so an exception might be made in favour of Calcutta and Bombay.

Natives will not object to pay large sums if they know that the taxation is spread fairly over the community, and is absolutely required for educational, police, sanitary, and high-road purposes; but the public opinion of India abhors an income-tax which allows thousands of nefarious non-taxpayers to escape taxation upon the honest portion of the community.—Your obedient servant,

T.

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The Pioneer observes that, according to the published tables, the receipts of the East Indian Railway show a very lamentable falling off, and it is to this circumstance that we presume the impending reductions in the staff are immediately due. Of course the primary reason for retrenching engineers is that there is no engineering to be done; but as this argument has held good in great part for two years, at least, we incline to believe that "the hard times" are the real reason, and that had the traffic receipts shown a handsome or even a satisfactory increase, the staff would have remained intact at its present strength. To the poor traffic receipts, then, the fifteen engineers (for this, we understand, is the number fixed upon) owe their misfortunes; but to what do the traffic receipts owe theirs? We think there are two reasons—there may be more, but two are prominent—the general unhealthiness of trade and the diffidence of the native community. Trade in most of its branches has this year (1870-1) been undoubtedly poor, and the East Indian Railway have suffered thereby; but for the second reason, the want of confidence which natives are beginning to display towards the railway, there is hardly so much excuse. They, the natives, say that the company's tariff is uncertain, and that they cannot be sure, when they start goods on a long journey, how much will be demanded upon them at the end. Whether the company is reasonable or not, we leave to the company to declare. Meanwhile, means of transport other than the rail have come seriously, we fear, into favour with the natives.

THE ROYAL ENGINEERS IN INDIA.

The Madras Athenæum complains that, whilst on the one hand civilian engineers are to a great extent kept out from entering the ranks of the Public Works Department, and engaging in work they are specially fitted for, Royal Engineer officers, on the other hand, are ostracised from the ranks of every other department of the administration of the Indian Empire, and their energies are wholly confined to dabbling in bricks and mortar; to measuring up mud, and to wearing out mind and body, to say nothing of the human light divine, in a superfluity of mystifying account work. Why should all this be? What noble end is it intended to serve? A Royal Engineer, in qualifying for his commission, goes through a long course of military duty, routine as well as scientific, and likewise through a theoretical and partially-practical course of civil engineering. Having gone through these and qualified in this combined course of education, we see no reason why he should, as soon as he sets foot in this country, be told off to work which is exclusively civilian in its nature, be transferred from the social and may be congenial sphere of a garrison town and his regimental mess to solitude in the jungles, and be subjected to the depressing influences of routine of the Department of Public Works. Does aught stand in his way of being permitted, like his military confreres of the Staff Corps, to elect for any one of the various departments of the public service, and be allowed room for the exercise of those tastes and idiosyncrasies which he more particularly displays to develop and work so as to promote the common good? What, for instance is there to debar him entering the Revenue Survey or Settlement, the Adjutant-General's or Quartermaster-General's Department, the Commissariat, the Police, or the Judicial Department, in so far as Cantonment Magistracies and Superintendentships of Jails are concerned, or the Accountant-General's or the Forest Department, or even purely military appointments, such as brigade commands, when length of service and rank entitle him to hold them? Nothing, certainly, that we can see, and we feel sure that, in expressing the foregoing sentiments, we are but speaking the thoughts of a large number of Royal Engineer officers, to whom the proposal of opening up all branches of the public service for their election and choice has only to be made to be closed with at once.

ACCLIMATISATION OF FOREIGN TREES IN INDIA.

The Bombay Gazette is glad to learn that Lord Napier's Government at Madras is alive to the importance of the acclimatisation of valuable foreign trees in India where such acclimatisation seems possible. A short time ago the Madras Governor requested the Secretary of State for India to procure for him a quantity of seeds of various kinds of timber trees from the West Indian Islands, and this requisition will doubtless be promptly complied with, as Lord Kimberly has directed the Governors of Demerara and Honduras to meet Lord Napier's requirements by all means in their power without delay. The acclimatisation of the mahogany tree in the Madras Presidency is the principal object of this requisition, and there appears every reason to hope that the experiment will prove a success. This valuable timber tree, it is well known, grows admirably under conditions of soil and climate obtainable upon the Eastern Coast; and the writer recollects having seen a few years ago at a place called Ankapillay, some thirty miles south of Vizaga. The trees were situate in a native gentleman's garden, but how they came there we could not discover; probably some collector of former days, with a taste for botany, had planted the seeds upon one of his jumabundy tours; at any rate, and whatever their origin, it was impossible to regard their massive trunks without wishing that the experiment of by-gone days had been tried upon a far more extended scale than this. But the mahogany tree appears to thrive well in many parts of the Madras Presidency. We have seen the tree in a flourishing condition at Bangalore, and a Madras contemporary lately informed us that "a large Honduras mahogany tree in the Company's gardens, Mount-road, Madras, has commenced to flower and seed—a fact without a precedent, it is said, in Indian experimental arboriculture." It is certain, then, that the mahogany tree can be acclimatised; the difficulty is the slow growth of the tree, and the time that must elapse for the planter before the timber is fit for felling. Natives love quick returns and handsome profits in their speculations, and, though mahogany plantations may afford them the latter, they may sigh for the former; ergo, it is very doubtful if they will generally lend any active support towards the success of Lord Napier's experiment. But the speculation, if we may so call it, is one for a Government to undertake which can boast of a Forest Department. Mahogany wood, as we all know, commands a high price in the market, and the price will probably rise, rather than decrease, in the future, since it is known that the Honduras forests have long been badly managed, and that waste and extravagance have characterised the proceedings of those interested in the Honduras timber trade. The Madras Government, indeed, proposes to plant for the benefit of posterity. But what then? A Government has higher duties to fulfil than can fall to the lot of private speculators, and Lord Napier is only acting up to the duties imposed upon him in seeking to create a timber trade of a novel description for India, whose profits, it is presumed, another generation will enjoy.

A Fatal Journey.—We regret to hear the melancholy death at Simla, on the 1st of July, of the wife of the Rev. Mr. Carter. It appears Mr. Carter, who had been married only a little more than a month, had taken a trip into the interior with his wife, and they were on their way back from Koteghur, when they were overtaken by the constant rain, and for three days were drenched, their baggage sharing the same fate, so that on their arrival at the bungalows they had no dry clothes to put on. In this way they hastened into Simla, and on arrival were so exhausted that, unmindful of their wet state, they threw themselves on the bed to obtain rest. During the night both were taken ill of fever, and Mrs. Carter died the following day. Mr. Carter is slowly recovering.—Englishman.

Archæological.—Colonel Hyde, R.E., Mint Master of Calcutta, is about to publish a "History of Indian Coins."

Camp of Exercise.—It is said that the Camp of Exercise will assemble at Delhi about the middle of December.

Dera Ghazee Khan.—The Shah Jumal bund, Dera Ghazee Khan, burst on the morning of 23rd June, and flooded the country to the south for seventeen miles.

An old Mutineer Caught.—A mutineer of 1857, named Dowlut Sing, for whose apprehension Government had offered a reward of Rs. 2,000, and the Hyderabad Government a supplementary reward of Rs. 5,000, has been arrested near Mirzapore.

Lahore.—The establishment of an Orphanage at Lahore is soon to be discussed by the Municipal Committee. Such a scheme has been suggested by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, who is strongly in its favour, and guarantees hearty assistance from the Government.

Legislative Council.—Mr. Robert Eyles Egerton, C.S., Financial Commissioner, Punjab, has been appointed an additional member of the Council of the Governor-general for making laws and regulations.

Agricultural.—Dr. George King received charge of the Royal Botanic Garden, the Professorship of Botany, at the Medical College, Calcutta, and the Superintendentship of the Government Cinchona Plantation at Darjeeling, from Mr. C. B. Clarke, on the 10th instant.

The Jeypore Chief.—The Maharajah of Jeypore left his capital on Monday last for Simla, where he will stay, in all probability, until the end of the season. His Highness is accompanied by the officiating Political Agent, Jeypore, and his physician, Dr. Valentine.

Mr. G. Campbell.—It is said that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, on his return from Hazareebaugh, will visit the military station of Berhampore and the Nizamut Buildings of his Highness the Nawab Nazim of Bengal at Moorshedabad.

Agriculture.—The Secretary of State has approved of the arrangements made by the Government of India regarding the appointment of seed gardeners to assist in the scheme for improving the cotton grown in the Benares and the Central Provinces.

Bank Returns.—The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend for the six months up to the 31st June at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The Bank of Madras declared a dividend for the same period of 6 per cent. per annum.

Suicide of a Soldier.—Richard Wale, band corporal of the 20th Hussars, stationed at Umballa, committed suicide on Tuesday last by shooting himself through the head with a carbine. On his body was found a letter stating that he was tired of existence.

The Vagrancy Act.—We (Examiner) have reliable authority for stating that a party or parties have been deported to Europe under the Vagrancy Act, who were born in this country, and who up to the date of deportation had never been outside it!

Political.—The Indian Daily News hears that the appointment of Political Agent at the Court of the Maharajah of Independent Tipperah has been offered to, and accepted by, Mr. Power, who has, for the last three months, been officiating as joint-magistrate of Sylhet.

Civil.—Mr. C. Currie, Commissioner of the Seetapore Division, and now on leave in England, is to officiate as Judicial Commissioner of Oude, vice Sir George Couper, Bart., C.B., Mr. G. Ouseley, Commissioner of the Lucknow Division, officiating in his place pending the arrival of Mr. Currie.

Lord Mayo's Kindness of Heart.—It is stated that Lord Mayo has shown his sympathy for the Italian family of musicians, of whom four were killed at Simla last week by a landslip, by placing the survivors in his band. He has also promised to pay all expenses incurred in the burial of the deceased lads.

Legal.—The High Court, North-Western Provinces, have determined to admit pleaders of the Chief Court of the Punjab to the bar of the High Court, without further examination. In accordance with this rule, Mr. E. S. Cunningham, of Delhi, has been enrolled a pleader of the High Court.

The Famine in Persia.—A meeting has been held at Calcutta to consider what measures should be adopted for the relief of the famine-stricken in Persia, and has resolved that it is desirable to obtain through Government more information as to the extraneous help required before doing anything.

Sanitation.—The Municipality of Lucknow have done a sensible thing, which is likely to conduce to an improvement in the health of the people. The Health Officer has prepared a list of wells throughout the city which are to be kept solely for drinking purposes.

Contagious Diseases Act.—The Indian Mirror understands that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has submitted to his Excellency the Viceroy, for his consideration, the replies received from the several medical authorities in Calcutta to the circular issued by his Honour regarding the working of the Contagious Diseases Act.

LORD MAYO'S DURBARS.—The durbar for the Kohistan Chiefs, which Lord Mayo intends to hold at Simla, will, it is said, take place in the beginning of September. An Umballa contemporary states that in November the Viceroy will hold a durbar at Lucknow to decorate his Highness Nawab Mohsunnood Dowlah with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

FINANCIAL.—We hear that the Government of India have recently sanctioned the grant of a further loan of five lakhs of rupees to the Ulwar State, on the same conditions upon which the first loan was advanced. The amount is to be repaid by the abovementioned native durbar by annual instalments, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

CATTLE DISEASE.—Cattle disease has committed great ravages in Munnipore, having exterminated nearly the whole of the plough cattle, especially buffaloes. In order to prevent a scarcity resulting, the Rajah has issued orders directing the head of each family to cultivate, by manual labour, not less than an acre of land, an order which is being willingly carried out.

OPIUM.—The Government of India is said to have approved of the proposition of the Board of Revenue for an annual disbursement of a sum not exceeding Rs. 500 for each of the two opium agencies in Behar and Benares, to be distributed in rewards to the most deserving native workmen or Sirdars, and others employed in those factories.

THE HILL TRACTS FORCE.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has recommended that the whole of the Hill Tracts Force be armed with a short breechloader, as having, besides other advantages, the recommendation that should any of the weapons ever fall into the hands of the Looshais, they will be useless for want of the special ammunition.

BIGOTRY AT UMRITSUR.—More disputes between the Hindus and Mussulmans at Umritsur. A Mahomedan, while purchasing some sweetmeat from a Hindu confectioner, had a dispute with him, and threw the sweetmeat which he had touched back into the shopkeeper's tray. A mixed crowd of Hindus and Mussulmans collected, and a struggle took place. The magistrate of the district referred the case to the honorary magistrate of the city for decision, who sentenced fourteen Hindus to imprisonment and fine. The correspondent of the Oudh Akhbar, in giving particulars of the affray, considers the decision to be a partial one, and states that it has encouraged the Mussulmans to tyrannise over the Hindus and insult them.

INFANTICIDE.—The practice of female infanticide in the Humeerpore district, North-Western Provinces, has been reported on by the magistrate of the district, and fourteen of the clans residing in Humeerpore have had the law relating to communities suspected of this crime put in force as respects them. The magistrate's first idea was to apply the law to all villages without exception inhabited by tribes whose average of female children for the pergunnah or the district was shown to be bad; subsequently, he decided upon exempting particular villages in which the proportion of girls is good. In the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor, this last course is undoubtedly the right one. Further, his Honour has directed that the exemption should extend to families which, though resident in a village guilty as a whole, are shown by statistics to preserve their daughters.

BETTING ON RAIN.—We had thought that betting on drops of rain was mythical, but it appears that this precise form of gambling is really just now the fashion in Calcutta, where even respectable native merchants are found to bet very large sums about the rainfall. When the weather becomes cloudy, we are told, wagers are laid as to the time within which the downpour may be expected. The wager being laid, the crowd wait patiently to see the water run out of the spouts, for a drizzle is not recoguised, and unless the water drips from the spouts, the party who bets that it will not rain has not lost. Sometimes the utmost confusion prevails; it rains for a few minutes, and the crowd look anxiously at the spouts, and if the water does not drip the yell is terrific, and losers attribute it to foul play, and boys are immediately sent up to the top of the house to see if the spout has been tampered with.—Pioneer.

OUDH.—"We learn that the Commissionership of Roy-Bareilly in Oudh is shortly to be abolished. Quite right, too; but this sort of nibbling is absurd. First, the Financial Commissionership was lopped off, and now the other Commissionership is sent adrift. The whole mouthful is no doubt coming; but there really is no ground for deferring any longer the inclusion of all Oudh in the province administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West. A little moral courage is needed for it, and that's all. Certainly there would be no loss of efficiency by the measure, and there would be an undoubted gain in economy to the State. With General Barrow not likely to return, and with the Chief Commissionership thus practically vacant, the time, too, is propitious. Of course we do not contemplate any change in the system of administration, the non-regulation scale of salaries is all too profitable to the tax-payers for that. Then, again, Allahabad is to be washed away some day, that's settled; so the Government might as well take time by the forelock and at once go and settle at Lucknow, or, better still, come joyously back to its old love.—Delhi Gazette.

RAJPOOTANA.—The Home Government has confirmed the sanction of the Government of India to the appointment of a Political Agent, with necessary office establishments, for Eastern Rajpootana, at a cost of Rs. 2,355 per mensem.

TELEGRAPH SERVICE.—A memorial, signed by upwards of one hundred superintendents and assistant-superintendents of the Government Telegraph Department, praying for a speedy revision of their furlough and pension rules, has been forwarded to the Secretary of State for India.

MILITARY.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has directed the discontinuance of the practice of marking offenders with the letters D and B C, the punishment having been discontinued by the Mutiny Act of 1871. The Delhi Gazette says that Brigadier-General Olpherts, C.B. and V.C., commanding the Gwalior District, now on leave at Cashmere, has been offered his choice of the Rohilkund or Saugor District.

COLD WATER FOR SUNSTROKE.—From the following, which we take from the Lahore paper, the "cold water cure" would appear to be very effective in cases of sunstroke:—On one of the very hot days we had recently, no fewer than nine men were struck down by sunstroke in the Lahore Central jail. They were all quite insensible, and only able to breathe in that thick stertorous way peculiar to the ailment. The superintendent, Dr. Lethbridge, had them laid out in a row on the cool floor of the hospital, and there watered them copiously and continuously for five hours by means of bheesties with mussucks, before much improvement was perceptible. Every man recovered, and it is to be noted as a circumstance of considerable importance that although all the cases were of a most serious kind the simple remedy of a continuous and long continued supply of cool water was at last efficient. The remedy, continued only for half an hour, and perhaps interrupted every time the mussuck was empty, would evidently have been of no avail. We commend the account to the attention of all travellers, and indeed of every one liable to be exposed to the heat of the sun.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, July 15.—Our quotations again show a considerable advance on those current last mail, which, as before, has been mainly brought about by the very firm position which importers have assumed. Dealers after our last began to show more disposition to enter the market, but they were not able to suit their requirements until the latter end of the week, when news arrived of a quieter market in Liverpool, and of a decline on cotton of ⅛ per pound having been established. This induced some importers, who were previously holders, to become sellers, and a fair business has been done in staple goods at the quotations given below. Grey Shirtings: 7 and 8¼ lbs., 39-inch, have been in active demand at advancing rates; lighter weights being less inquired for, have commanded a proportionately smaller advance; 45-inch are quiet; 50 and 54-inch wanted, and a fair business has been done, principally in the latter width, for arrival at higher rates. Jacconets and Madapollams are in fair request, and a good business could be done were holders willing to accept the offers made them by buyers. Grey Twist: Demand has been very active since our last, and a large business has been done in 40's at advancing rates. Higher numbers have also improved somewhat. Coloured Twist: Turkey Red continues depressed, while fancy colours begin to exhibit some slight signs of improvement.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, July 15.—Saltpetre: There is no change to report in the market, and prices remain firm at last week's quotations. There is still a good demand for the finer qualities, but, owing to the continued wet weather, the refiners are unable to supply their customers' demands fully. Rice: The fall in the rates for best white and medium noticed last week has stopped, and prices have slightly hardened, though the demand has not been large. In Balliam there has been a rise of fully one anna. Several shippers have come into the market for the country and outports. Linseed: The supplies from up-country have begun to come more freely into the market, and prices have generally declined, especially for good bold, which may now be quoted at from Rs. 4-4 to 4-5; medium has ruled from Rs. 4-1 to 4-2; small, Rs. 4 to 4-1; and Eastern Bengal, Rs. 3-14 to 4. Rapeseed continues in good demand; in fact, quite as many contracts have been entered into as the stock in the market is capable of supplying, and the new seed does not come forward rapidly. Of yellow there is actually none in the market. Teelseed and Poppyseed: Inquiries still continue, but there are no supplies on hand. Silk: The market has again been active during the week, and a rise of fully 8 annas has been established, both for filatures and native sorts.

Madras.

A SERIOUS AFFRAY AT BANGALORE.

We regret to have to record a painful circumstance which occurred last Saturday evening at Bangalore. A young officer, Ensign Lambart, of H.M.'s 21st Fusiliers, stationed there, was invited by a fair one, to whom he had been over attentive, to meet him at her house, and accordingly did so. He was then set upon by some male friends of the lady and cruelly thrashed; he swore vengeance, and proceeded, as soon as he was sufficiently recovered from his beating, to execute it. This retaliatory expedition was some days subsequent to the first encounter, and the young officer was upon this unfortunate occasion accompanied by Ensign Frere, of the same regiment, and two friends. Arrived at the house he called out or was met by an elderly relation of the fair one, and between the two first an argument and subsequently a tussle of some sort seems to have taken place, when in response to a cry for assistance from the older man some young men issued from the house armed, and deliberately shot the officer; his friends rushing to his assistance were likewise fired upon, and two of the four were seriously wounded. Mr. Frere received the contents of a fowling-piece discharged within a few yards of him full in his side, and for some days little hopes were entertained of his recovery; Mr. Lambart was shot in the knee, and amputation of the limb was at first looked upon as inevitable. By latest accounts both officers were progressing favourably.—Madras Times.

Dr. J. W. Orr, in his cross-examination before the magistrates, gave the following evidence:—"When rendering assistance to Mr. Frere, I put him no questions as to how this affray came about, as he was not in a fit state. I asked Mr. Lambart how it all came about. He said he and his three companions had gone to Mr. Van Ingen's house and had been attacked; firearms were used, and he and two of his companions were severely wounded. My first examination was a very hurried one, but I subsequently got fuller particulars. I did not ask if he was on terms of intimacy with the family, but afterwards, the same night, he told me the object of his going there. He said about a week before he had been inveigled into going to the house, and while there he had been set upon by three or four young men, and severely licked, or, to use his own words, nearly murdered, and that he had gone that night to take his revenge. He did not tell me he had a revolver, nor did he allude that night to any of his companions having had firearms. He did not say who his companions were, and he requested me not to ask, as he could not tell me. I acted on this information of Lambart's, instructing the police to arrest the prisoners. My sympathies were with the wounded men. I had not then heard both sides of the case."

The enquiry by the Cantonment Magistrate of Bangalore into the serious affray which lately took place at that station, and which we reported in our last week's summary, has been continued during the past week. Important disclosures have been made, and the two accomplices of Messrs. Lambart and Frere, whose names were withheld at the previous enquiries, have been supposed to appear and give evidence. It appears these accomplices of the young officers are two sergeants of the 16th Queen's Lancers, at present stationed in Bangalore, by the names respectively of Noakes and McInnes, one of whom is stated, in "sporting" language, to be a "bruiser."—Athenæum, July 16.

Miscellaneous.

Death of General Garstin.—The Madras Times mentions that General Garstin died at a quarter to eight on Thursday night July 13, at Bangalore.

Archæological.—It is said that instructions have been issued by the Government of Madras to make collections of the antiquities of the Neilgherry Hills.

Railways.—We are glad to notice the decided improvement which has recently taken place in the receipts of the Madras Railway Company, which now show a better return per mile than they did last year. On the Great Southern of India Railway a trifling improvement has also taken place.

Cholera at Trimulgherry.—A correspondent of the Madras Athenæum, writing from Trimulgherry on the 6th inst., says—"Grieved, indeed, am I to announce to you the appearance of cholera in the 24th Regiment; so far it has only shown itself in one company. Up to this evening there has been but one death. The company has been placed under canvas a short distance outside the entrenchment."

The Trade of Cochin.—The Cochin season just closed has been one of the most active on record. The shipments of coffee are 34,562 cwts. in excess of last year; and of pepper 15,411 cwt. In coir-yarn there has been a decrease of 26,429 cwts., and cocoanut oil 38,137 cwts. After a lapse of five years fish oil has again become an article of export, 32,331 cwts. having been shipped.

Burmah.—The most important item of intelligence in the latest news from Mandalay is the promulgation of a Royal edict abolishing all indirect duties levied on produce bought and sold within the Royal dominions, and proclaiming free trade in all produce. The capital is perfectly quiet, and a marked improvement is represented as having taken place in the working of the mixed court. The King's consignment of goods to Yunan by the Bhamo route is after all to be despatched.

Madras Medical College.—The Madras Medical College officials and students held their annual meeting in the Hall of the College on Saturday evening, the 1st July, presided over by his Excellency Lord Napier, Governor of Madras. A number of visitors were present to witness the proceedings and to hear the address of Dr. Furnell, who had been requested to undertake that duty on this occasion. The proceedings of the meeting were brought to a close by a few appropriate remarks from the chairman.

Agricultural.—Dr. Bidie, the Secretary to the Agri-Horticultural Society of Madras, has, we understand, been informed, by the Commissioner of Octacamund, that an attempt, recently made, to cultivate maize on the Neilgherry hills has not proved successful, the climate and soil of the hills evidently not being suitable for the cultivation of this grain. In the Kurnool District, where success was naturally expected, a similar attempt to cultivate this pulse has also failed. In this instance the failure can hardly be attributed to climate, which in Kurnool is considered to be suitable to the cultivation of the grains indigenous to the plains of Southern India, of which this is one.—Athenæum.

Abandonment of the Hope Island Light-House.—We are about to part with an old beacon which, for upwards of half a century, has dimly illuminated the southern shore of our harbour; we say dimly, for many a noble vessel has been lost within view of the structure, and there is no locality on the whole of the Coromandel Coast where more wrecks have occurred than in the vicinity of the danger created by Point Godavery. The Hope Island Light-House is the oldest structure of its kind in the Bay of Bengal, and it was designed and built entirely by a sailor—the then Master Attendant of Coringa. It speaks volumes for the genius and intelligence of the builder, not only for its efficient durability, but for having stood the flood of the terrible inundations of 1833 and 1839. The reason for the abandonment of the present light-house is the steady progression of the land towards the sea, and consequently every year leaves the light-house further in the interior and diminished its utility to the navigator. The new light is intended to be placed about five miles to the northward and eastward of the present one, and in the immediate neighbourhood of the dangerous shoals round the Point. This is a move in the right direction, and for which we are not in the least indebted to Mr. Robertson's recent "visit of pleasure," but to our own present Master Attendant, with whom the project originated.—Coconada Advertiser.

BURMAH.—A rumour has been cureent in Rangoon to the effect that the King of Siam, after visiting Panang and Junk Ceylon, intended to go to Rangoon and Calcutta.

A NEW REVELATION.—The Combaconum Athenæum writes:—"Our correspondent from Cuddalore tells us of a tremendous farce that is being acted near Virdaohelam. One Ramaliga Pillai, a Tamil scholar of some repute, it appears, has set himself up for a god, and promises his votaries the resurrection of their relatives and friends that have departed this world. Thousands throng there daily, and a pandal is being erected at a cost of Rs. 15,000 ! ! ! in honour of the coming day when that glorious miracle will be wrought. We can hardly bring ourselves to believe that so many of our countrymen are so credulous, and yet we have no doubt of the truth of our correspondent's statements."

ALLEGED CURE FOR DYSENTERY.—Mr. C. DePerindorge, Surgeon Dentist, and member of the Faculty of Medicine at Paris, recently reported to Government that he possessed an infallible specific for the cure of dysentery, and that he had used it for the past ten years with the greatest success. Since March last he had settled down at Ootacamund, and had cured all the cases of chronic dysentery that had been entrusted to his care. He requested, therefore, that Government would accept his gratuitous services in the first instance, and permit him to try his remedy on soldiers or other Government servants with a view to prove its value. He was informed, in reply, that the Government were unable to comply with his request.

TELEGRAPHS.—It is rumoured that Government is about to take over the Madras Railway Telegraph, and incorporate it with its own Telegraph Department. As the Government and the Railway Telegraphs compete with each other at a great number of important stations, at which both the Government and the Railway Company have telegraphic communication, the amalgamation will, in this respect (if in no other), be a judicious one. We hope, however, the Government will not convert the power they will obtain by the amalgamation of the two systems into a monopoly, and by this means make the public in future pay through the nose for their telegraphic messages.—Madras Athenæum.

THE COMING ECLIPSE.—There will be a total eclipse of the sun, which will sweep across the Madras Presidency, on the morning of the 12th December. The width of the shadow path in India will be about seventy miles, and the central line of totality will enter the West Coast about thirty miles below Mangalore. It will proceed in a south-easterly direction over Manantoddy, Ootacamund, Coimbatore, the northern part of the Madura district, the south of Trichinopoly and Poodoocottah, and leaving India almost exactly on the tenth parallel of north latitude, will pass over the south of Ceylon across Java and North Australia. Observations will be taken, for which purpose an instrument is being sent out from the Greenwich Observatory.

A FEMALE LECTURER.—A native lady of about thirty, by the name of Sreerungammal, raising herself above the darkness in which her sisters are merged, has made her appearance before the enlightened public. This lady is a great pundit in Telugu, and equally so in Sanskrit, and possesses some knowledge of Tamil and English. Last night she delivered a very interesting and eloquent lecture on female education in Telugu. In the course of her lecture she brought forward quotations from the Hindu Shastras, and Puranas to prove the sanction of female education by our ancestors, pathetically pointed out the deplorable condition of our sisters, and entreated the gentlemen present to do something in the way of improving their condition. This is the first instance of a Hindu lady coming forward as a public lecturer. She seems to be our Miss Carpenter. In our next issue we shall publish a detailed account of the lecture.—Brahma Depikai, July 1st.

IRRIGATION.—The Secretary of State has, the Madras Athenæum hears, called upon the local Government with reference to the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company's works, to report upon the following points:—1. The general character as to design and execution of that portion of the work which is now finished ; 2, the suitableness of the works for irrigating the country through which they pass ; 3, the probability of hesitation on the part of the ryots in taking the water at the prescribed rates ; 4, what force there may be in the company's argument that the remuneratiyeness of the present works cannot be fairly tested unless extended to comprehend the entire original project; and 5, whether the Government would be prepared to complete the project in the event of the company being wound up, or could arrange for completion by the States in case the company insist on retaining possession of the portion already executed.

POONAH.—In consequence of the want of rain, the grain dealers in Poona have raised the price of grain of every description one rupee a pulla.

MILITARY.—With a view to reduction in military expenditure, it has been suggested to abolish the appointment of deputy assistant quartermaster-general, Madras, and military storekeeper, Bombay.

CIVIL.—We (Poona Observer) hear that Mr. Ashburner, the Collector of Khandeish, will be appointed as Revenue and Police Commissioner for the Northern Division, and that Mr. Pritchard will be appointed to act as Collector and Magistrate of Khandeish.

NEW STATION OF THE B.B. AND C.I. RAILWAY.—We are informed that the Government of India has at length sanctioned the erection of an ornamental station for the B.B. and C.I. Railway on the Esplanade, opposite the Frere Fountain.—Bombay Gazette.

THE LOST STEAMER "BREADALBANE."—Advices from Suez state that the cargo saved from the above steamer is in course of sale at Jeddah. Only 7,000 packages had been saved in a sound state ; of the remaining 16,000 some had been landed more or less damaged, but a good deal of cargo remained in the wreck not worth salving.

BHOW SINDHIA.—We learn from Baroda that Bhow Sindian, Dewan to the late Khunderao Gackwar, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment by H.H. Mulharao, and his property, consisting of cash and jewellery of the aggregate value of about four laks of rupees, has been confiscated. His house was sold by public auction, and it realised about Rs. 10,000.

DHARWAR.—From the weather report of the collectorate of Dharwar for the latter half of June last it appears that the fall of rain was very slight throughout the collectorate ; yet the crops of rice, sugar-cane, &c., were doing good. In some places the sowing of jowaree was finished, while in others the ground was being prepared for the purpose. Much rain was required. Public health was satisfactory, but cattle disease was rife in the talookas of Dumhul and Nowlgond.

COMMERCIAL.—The prospectus of the Bombay Pier Company, with a capital of £300,000 in shares of £100 each, has been issued in Bombay.

THE LATE MAJOR COTTON WAY.—The Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, in a letter dated May 25, states that from what appears on record he entirely concurs in the opinion expressed by Major Ross, that there was nothing to show that the explosion which caused the death of the late Major Cotton Way was not the result of pure accident. His Excellency in Council concurs in the opinion stated by Major Ross.

BOUNDARY SETTLEMENTS.—Lieutenant-Colonel Lester, commissioner for Boundary Settlements between the Baroda and Joonaghur States, has been engaged in laying permanent boundary marks in the Gheer, and as the demarkation of these boundaries is a work of considerable expense and labour, it has been requested that the States concerned will see the safety of these pillars being duly ensured, and guard against wanton destruction.

MODIFIED THEFT.—In the course of the trial of the three soldiers from Kurrachee, at the Criminal Sessions, for theft Sir Charles Sargent, the presiding Judge, said he thought it was too often the case in this country that Europeans take goods from native dealers at their own price, and at a lower price than the native is willing to receive. "If," said he, "a dealer tells me he wants five shillings for a certain article, and will not sell it for less, and I, thinking it is not worth more than three shillings, offer him that sum and take the article away without his consent, I am guilty of theft, and amenable to the penalty provided for that offence by the Penal Code. It might not be so heinous a crime as if I had given the man nothing at all, but still it would be theft, and nothing else."

THE "ETHIOPIA."—The s.s. Ethiopia, which took a cargo of rice, &c., to the Laccadive Islands, returned on Thursday, July 6. A day after leaving Bombay, we learn, the Ethiopia met with heavy weather, and lost a lifeboat which was hanging in the davits. The Government of Madras in its communication to the Bombay Government requesting that provisions might be sent to the Laccadives, asked that 5,000 bags of rice should be sent; but on the arrival of the Ethiopia at the Laccadives it was found that the Madras Government had intended to ask for only 500 bags, so that upwards of 4,000 bags had to be brought back to Bombay. The Ethiopia left on Saturday, July 8, for the Persian Gulf, with the rice on board.

THE WEATHER IN KATTIAWAR.—Under date of the 10th July one correspondent writes from Kattiawar:—"The weather is still very warm, but old residents say the rain will soon come, and then we shall be cool enough. It is easy to see that rain is sadly wanted, and that the crops will suffer severely if delayed but a few days longer." Another, under the same date, writes:—"Still no rain! If this sort of thing continues much longer we shall hear of distress, for already the prices of grain have gone up. The Gymkhana of Rajkote was opened for the first time last Saturday, and was, I understand, a great success. The cruel (?) sport of pigeon-shooting was indulged in, followed up by tilting-at the ring, horse-racing, &c., so you see we are far from being dull.—Times of India.

PIG-STICKING.—The Times of India hears from Ahmedabad that a pig-sticking party there had an exciting chase the other day after as fine a boar as ever broke cover. The tusker was found in a jowaree field, ran his pursuers across some pretty ugly country, and gained a piece of jungle where he could have stayed had he liked. But, with apparent contempt for his enemies, out he rushed, and the fight began. Three horses and one man were killed, the latter shaken to death "as a terrier would shake a cat." After a desperate fight, the boar was vanquished in his old jowaree field. In the chase an officer had an ugly spill, from the effects of which he has not yet recovered. He was dashing along on a spirited and powerful horse, and in his anxiety to have first spear, affected to despise such obstacles in his way as the boughs of trees, so coming in violent contact with one of these, he was swept out of his saddle and severely stunned by the fall. Happily, the injury sustained was not so serious as to prevent the subject of it from being in at the death.

SHIPPING.—The ship Quorn, 1,243 tons, Capt. B. Patching, sailed on July 5 for Liverpool, with a cargo of cotton, linseed, rapeseed, galls, and ambahuldee.—The ship City of Tanjore, 799 tons, Capt. Andrew Leslie, sailed on July 9 for Havre, with a cargo of cotton, linseed, rapeseed, turmeric, and coffee.—The ship Nonpareil, 1,090 tons, Capt. J. Johnson, sailed on July 9 for New York, with a cargo of linseed, rags, and 52 hides and skins, and the following passengers:—Messrs. H. Radam and F. L. Pierce.—The ship Sir John Mandeville, 1,354 tons, Capt. J. Mathias, sailed on July 6 for Liverpool, with a cargo of cotton, wool, linseed, coir yarn, beda, and cuscus roots.—The ship Queen of the Lake, 1,153 tons, Capt. J. Grossort, sailed on July 7 for Liverpool, with a cargo of cotton, gall, coir yarn, horns, hemp, gum, and beheda.—The ship Mary Stenhouse, 1,243 tons, Capt. T. Hedgcock, sailed on July 9 for Liverpool, with a cargo of cotton, wool, coir yarn, horns, coir rope, hemp, linseed, hides and cowdees.

THE LATE MR. JOHN E. PIGOT.—At the High Court, on Tuesday, Sir M. R. Westropp, Chief Justice, on taking his seat in the Second Division Court, observed that, previously to entering upon the business of the day, he wished, on behalf of himself and of the other Judges of the High Court, to express their deep sympathy with the Bar in the loss which it had sustained in the death of Mr. John Edward Pigot, the sad intelligence of which event had, within the last two days, reached Bombay by telegram. The late Mr. Pigot, his Lordship said, was an accomplished lawyer and scholar, and for several years had been one of the brightest ornaments of the Bombay Bar. The high principles, unswerving honour, and invariable courtesy which ever characterised Mr. Pigot, had endeared his memory to the Bench and Bar alike; by both he was deservedly held in the highest esteem and regard. His nobility of character rendered him a worthy example to all who might enter the profession. —Bombay Gazette, July 11.

THE GWALIOR RAJAH ON HIS TRAVELS.—His Highness the Maharajah Sindia is at present on a visit to the City of the Peishwas, and intends to come so far as Bombay. His Highness left Gwalior on the 26th June, and, after bathing in the Ganges on the 6th July, on which day there was an eclipse of the moon, he proceeded from Allahabad by special train, and arrived at Poona on the evening of the 9th. His Highness is accompanied by Colonel Hutchinson, Political Agent at Gwalior, his Dewan, a number of sirdars, and about 300 followers. Yesterday afternoon a grand durbar was held by his Excellency the Governor in the New Council House Poona, for the reception of the Maharajah. The Durbar, which was held at six o'clock, was numerously attended by officers, Government officials, and private gentlemen, and the galleries of the beautiful hall were crowded with ladies. His Highness wore the decoration of the Star of India, splendid jewels, and a magnificent gold-mounted sword. The Maharajah Sindia is still at Poona, and on Wednesday, July 12, a grand review of the troops in camp was held in his honour.—Times of India, July 11.

IMPORTS.—Bombay, July 18.—Rain has at last fallen in Bombay; it began in the night of July 11, and we have had constant heavy showers ever since. The business done has, as might under the circumstances have been expected, been again principally of a speculative character, from the belief that after sufficient rains have fallen in the district a large demand will set in; it was chiefly in 6 lbs., 7 lbs., 8½ lbs., 39-inch Grey Shirtings, and in 3 lbs. Grey Maddapollams. But on Saturday, the 15th, owing to the home telegrams being regarded as somewhat less favourable, the Piece Goods market became extremely dull, and hardly any business has been done. The demand for local consumption and the interior continues to be most limited. In all kinds of Yarns a very small business has been done, but the prices of several descriptions of Grey Yarns may be quoted ¼ to ½ anna per lb. higher; dealers are holding back for lower rates, but importers are very firm. In Turkey Red Yarns no sales have been reported. Grey Goods: The market until July 15 continued very firm, and a large business was done at better rates, but at the close the market has been very dull, with little or no business doing. Metals quiet, with little or no change. Sales: 610 cwts. Copper Braziers at Rs. 46; and 700 cwts. Red Lead at Rs. 13-1.

EXPORTS.—Bombay, July 18.—Cotton: The telegrams received during the week show a further advance of one-sixteenth in the price of Fair Dhollerah, which is quoted at 7 7-16d.; but the telegram of the 15th—our latest message—states that the market on that day closed dull and heavy. The same telegram announces that the Agricultural Office at New York calculates the American crop at the low figure of 2,900,000 bales. If this estimate is correct or nearly so, a higher level of prices may be expected to rule next year. The purchases made during the week in Bombay for export have again been limited, aggregating about 6,700 bales only, and the following were the principal ones, viz., 2,500 bales of Dholleras and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 220 to 233 per candy; 1,100 bales of Oomrawuttee, at Rs. 219 to 226; 1,350 bales of Vingoria, at Rs. 209 to 215; and 600 bales of Barsee, at Rs. 220½ to 226½. The market closes quiet, but steady.

Government Paper.—A limited business has again been done, but rates are very steady. We quote Fours at 99¾ to 99½. Fives at 105⅞, and Fives and a Half at 113. The Calcutta market also appears to be somewhat steadier; quotations there are Fours 99, Fives 105¾, Fives and a-Half 113¾. From London we have advices to July 5, when Fours were quoted at 94¼, Fives at 100¾, and Fives and a-Half at 109¾. In the new French Loan large transactions have taken place at 93½; it closes very firm at 93½ to 93¾.

Exchange.—A small business has again been done, and rates on London show a declining tendency. Credit and Document Bills have been done at one to two-sixteenth below last week's quotations, while Bank Bills are barely one-sixteenth lower. Rates close at 1s. 11 1-16d. for six months' sight Bank Bills, at 1s. 11 3-16d. for Credits, and at 1s. 11¾d. for Documents, on which £7 and £9 a bale are advanced. On Calcutta the rate for sight Bank Bills is 100 5-16, and for 60 days' sight 99¾. The rate on China for 60 days' sight still stands at Rs. 226 per 100 dollars.

Examinations in the Native Languages.—The following officers are reported to have passed in military surveying and field engineering at Thomason College, Roorkee (July 1):—By the higher standard; Capt. C. E. D. Branson, general list, infantry, with great credit; Ensign E. Burrell, 85th foot, with great credit; Lieut. R. Thomson, 1st batt. 11th foot, with great credit; Capt. J. M. Trotter, general list, infantry, with great credit; Capt. P. H. Harcourt, royal artillery, with great credit. By the lower standard: Lieut. H. R. Rathbone, 2nd batt. 25th foot; Ensign H. M. Carter, 62nd foot; Lieut. W. H. Browne, Bengal staff corps. Lieut. C. A. Cresswell, officiating assistant commissioner, 3rd grade, in the British Burmah Commission, has passed the prescribed examination in Indian history, political economy, and jurisprudence. The undermentioned candidates are reported to have passed the lower standard in Hindoostanee on the 5th June:—Lieut. F. W. Carey, royal artillery; Lance corporal H. Purcell, 2nd batt. 19th foot.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

Travelling Allowance, &c., of Roman Catholic Priests.

Bombay Castle, July 4.—No. 462.—The following rules for the guidance of disbursing officers of the military account department in admitting the pay and travelling allowance of Roman Catholic bishops and priests, lighting and establishment, allowance of chapels, are published:—

I. An allowance of Rs. 500 per mensem is authorised for each of four bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in India, viz., for one in each of the presidencies of Madras and Bombay, and for one in each division of the Bengal presidency, in consideration of the labour imposed on them in furnishing ecclesiastical returns, for transmission to England.

II. Wherever two or more European regiments are quartered together two priests are allowed on salaries of Rs. 200 and Rs. 150 per mensem respectively.

III. Wherever more than one European regiment, but less than two, is stationed, one priest is allowed on a salary of Rs. 200 per mensem.

IV. A priest on a salary of Rs. 200 per mensem is allowed at the seat of a local Government, irrespective of the number of European regiments located there.

V. When a priest is allowed for European troops, a separate priest for the civil station is not authorised. The only advantage that a priest with European troops derives from service at a station which is the seat of Government is the title to the maximum pay of Rs. 200 per mensem, irrespective of the number of European troops stationed there.

VI. A priest on a salary of Rs. 150 per mensem is allowed where there may be one European regiment, or detachments of different corps equal in the aggregate to the strength of a regiment, or where, though there may be no European regiment, there are at least one hundred British-born Roman Catholics, natives of Great Britain and Ireland, resident and in the service of Government.

VII. At any other station to which a priest may be appointed by Government the pay will be Rs. 150 per mensem.

[A number of minor articles which follow are here omitted.]

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

In the course of his opening address before the Geographical Section Colonel Gull made the following remarks:—

One addition has been made during the past year to that long list of martyrs to geography in the name of the undaunted George Hayward, formerly a lieutenant in the 72nd regiment, who had for some years resolutely devoted himself to geographical discovery. After having proved his powers in a journey to Yarkand and Kashghar, which obtained for him last year one of the medals of the Geographical Society, he had started again, with aid from that Society, to attempt an examina tion of the famous plateau of Pamir, hoping to succeed in crossing it, and to descend upon the Russian territory at Samarkand. In the Darkot Pass above Yassin he was foully murdered by the emissaries of the chief of that district, Mir Wali by name. Public suspicion in India first turned upon the Maharajah of Kashmir, on whose alleged oppressions Hayward, in a private letter, had made severe remarks, which were rashly published by the editor of a local newspaper. The latest intelligence seems to exonerate the Maharajah, and to throw the guilt of complicity rather on the Mahomedan Chief of Chitral. If he be the guilty man, it may be difficult to punish him, so inaccessible is his position at present; for, to apply the old saw of the Campbells, "It is a far cry to Chitral." I may observe, however, that some sixteen or seventeen years ago a similar murder took place on the persons of two poor French priests at the other extremity of India, and within the Thibetan boundary on the Upper Brahmapootra, and the apprehension of the criminal must have seemed almost as hopeless as in this case. Yet eventually he fell into the hands of our officers of the province of Assam, and paid the due penalty of his crime.

The geographical field on which, with your permission, I propose to expatiate for a little is that of India beyond the Ganges. I mean in the largest sense of the expression, and inclusive, at least, in some points of view, of the Indian Islands. India, indeed, in old times was a somewhat vague term, or at least it had always a vague as well as an exacter interpretation. In the latter, it had the same application that we give it now when we speak with precision; it meant that vast semi-peninsular region roughly limited by the valleys of the Indus and the Ganges, which embraces many nations and many tongues and many climates, but yet all pervaded by a certain almost intangible character, which gives it a kind of unity recognised by all. In its vaguer sense, India meant simply the Far East. The traces of such use still survive in such expressions as the East Indies or the Indian Archipelago. Though this vague and large application of the name probably arose only from the vagueness of knowledge, it coincides roughly with a fact, and that is the extraordinary expansion of Hindoo influence which can be traced in the vestiges of religion, manners, architecture, language, and nomenclature over nearly all the regions of the East to which the name has been applied. Another name has been applied to the continental part of this region—Indo-China. This, too, expresses the fact that on this area the influences of India and of China have interpenetrated. But the influence of China has, except on the eastern coast, been entirely political, and has not, like India, affected manners, arts, and religion.

The address concluded with a long and interesting account of the land trade which has been maintained for many centuries between Western China and the Valley of the Iriwadi.

COLONEL CHESNEY ON THE NEW COLLEGE.

The following extract from Colonel Chesney's speech at the opening of the Cooper's Hill College will interest some of our readers:—

Answering a possible criticism, that, as engineering was a practical art, the preparation for it should be practical also, Colonel Chesney explained that a large part of the college course would be in the strictest sense practical; and when the rest of a man's life was to be passed in the practice of his profession it was not too much to ask that a year or eighteen months, or even two years, should be devoted to preparatory study. The importance of a strictly scientific preparation held especially in the case of engineers destined for India, because there a man had not the same opportunity of making up for lost time which he possessed here, in the centre of scientific thought and professional inquiry. In India the engineer would very likely spend a great part of his time in out-of-the-way places, dependent on his own resources, and with little to stimulate intellectual research. Such a man would often never take the first step to learn, from a disinclination to admit his ignorance of starting; and the habit of acquiescing in ignorance once acquired was not easily shaken off. He had urged upon the students the need for culture as a means of getting on and enhancing their usefulness as public servants; but it would be difficult to lay too much stress on the value of culture for its own sake. By dealing with their professional work in a scientific way, an interest was imparted to what would otherwise be professional drudgery. It was quite as much, however, in pursuits outside the course of professional business that systematic culture should be aimed at; and the conditions of life in India—its monotony, the long days, the enforced seclusion, rendered scientific or literary pursuits especially needful as a relaxation. A deficiency in culture was one of the main defects of our countrymen in India. You found there a degree of zeal and devotion to the public service, a standard of self-denial in the cause of the Government and an industry which he verily believed to be unexampled in any country in the world; but, if the paradox might be employed (like the Barbadians, who were too brave), many able public servants were too zealous in the cause of their masters. They took refuge from the qualms of conscience reproaching them for not making better use of their time by what he might term an effort of mental indolence and by burying themselves deeper in official business. It was to this want of culture, accompanied with so much ability, and producing an engrossing attention to official matters, that might be ascribed the tendency to hold extreme opinions, and a one-sidedness regarding vexed questions of polity and administration, which was a characteristic of Anglo-Indian society. The work, he suspected, would often be better done if less time were given to it. At any rate, the students before him should not suffer themselves to be persuaded that there was no time for culture. Above all, they must give no weight to the pestilent doctrine that culture interfered with expertness in business. Practical ability was compatible with any degree of culture. It might be said that he had shadowed forth too wide a scheme to be aimed at with success. But how much, after all, would be left undone! The classical languages, even the modern languages of Europe, they were obliged wholly to neglect; they did not attempt even to step upon the threshold of mental philosophy, and even of the natural sciences their range was but a partial one. These considerations should lead to humility rather than to conceit. Further, it might be remembered that if the course proposed was too extensive to admit of great proficiency in any one line, an elementary knowledge need not to be a superficial one, it might be complete and exact as far as it went. The great thing for the students to bear in mind was that they were here, not to be educated, but merely to begin their education, and to be set in the right road for pursuing it. With men, at any rate, education could never stop without being followed by deterioration. If it were true that motion was the condition of the physical universe, it was not less true of the mental state of man. We might go forward or fall backward, but could not stand still. The pursuit of knowledge, too, was the one pleasure that never palled; and by laying themselves out to be studious men, and not merely industrious men, blunting their faculties in the mere discharge of routine duties, the young men now beginning their career would secure for themselves a certain fund of happiness, independent of any caprice fortune might have in store. Lest it should be supposed that he was advocating a process for the generation of bookworms, he would only add that there would be a reasonable amount of recreation, while a large part of the business of the place would consist of out-door or other work, which would be in itself a relief from the labours of the lamp. There is one more point (said Colonel Chesney, in conclusion) on which I may say a few words, and that is as to the moral side of our life here. We have here no traditionary influences to watch over us, no cloistered shades of hallowed relics invoking us to guard the sacred genius of the place, no accumulated honour handed down to our safe keeping, no historic prestige to condone or extenuate folly. We shall be judged by what we are, not by any conventional standard confusing right and wrong. But if these adventitious aids are wanting, the greater is our responsibility. Gentlemen, if it be a great thing to belong to a family descended from a distinguished ancestor, it is still greater to be the distinguished founder of it; and if you accept this trust in the needful spirit, if you determine to maintain an etiquette of manners and a standard of morals which shall banish anything like "bad form," from the precincts of the place, its future success in this respect will be certain. Everything in such cases depends upon making a good beginning. In a school or college it is as easy to maintain a high tone as it is difficult to emerge from a low one. As we begin so shall we go on; and if you to accept this responsibility, as I am sure you will, you will be amply rewarded when in after life you may be able to reflect that any reputation achieved by Cooper's Hill is due to the character established by you, its earliest inmates. Our standard will be aimed high, and I may say for all those to whom your Grace has entrusted the administration of the place, that we shall not be easily satisfied. But if, happily, our aspirations shall be realised, and we hope and believe they will be, then, though, Cooper's Hill may not exactly attain to that degree of eminence predictee for it in another sense by the poet when, one hundred and fifty years ago, he sang that—still, the college on Cooper's Hill will not be unworthy to take its place among the educational institutions of the country, useful to the public service, and illustrating the sagacity and wisdom of its founders. (Loud cheers.)

"On Cooper's Hill eternal wreaths shall grow,"

Miscellaneous.

CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.—The regulations for the open competition of 1872 have been issued. The examination will take place on the 19th March, 1872.

BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE.—A copy of correspondence between Major-General Miller, the India-office, and the Treasury, upon the subject of the Banda and Kirwee Booty, has been published.

NORTHERN ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—A dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound to the creditors of the Northern Assam Tea Company (Limited) has been announced by Mr. Samuel Barrow, the official liquidator.

LITERARY.—The Senate of University College has appointed as its Professor of Hindustani Kazi Shahabudeen Ibrahim. This gentleman is an accomplished scholar, and held a high position in our service in India. He was afterwards Dewan to the Rao of Kutch, and is now resident for him in London. He also acts as hon. secretary of the East India Association. Kazi Shahabudeen is a thorough master of his own language.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following exports of bullion to India and China are the latest extracted from De Quetteville's Indian Circular:—By the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, per Nubia, July 22, from Southampton—gold, to Bombay £680. Ceylon £240; silver, to Bombay £5,250, Penang £1,450, Singapore £50,000, Hong Kong £191,000. Per Delta. July 29, from Southampton—gold, to Bombay £10,785. The price of silver is quoted as bar 5s. 0 11-16d. per oz. standard, dollars 4s. 11⅞d. per oz., 5 francs 4s. 11½d. per oz.

TO CHINA BY THE SUEZ CANAL.—In an illustration of the results of the introduction of steam, via the Suez Canal, into the China trade, it is mentioned that the steam-ship Craigforth, of Leith, a vessel of 1,109 tons register, and 140-horse power, arrived at London on the 3rd inst. from Hankow, with a full cargo of the new season's teas, having been absent from London exactly four months and twenty two days, during which time she had made her outward voyage and delivered and reshipped cargo at Singapore, Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Hankow, returning one of the first three steamers, and having accomplished the voyage to and from Hankow in a shorter time, it is believed, than any previous vessel.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—The directors of the Land Mortgage Bank of India have issued their report and statement of accounts for the year ending the 31st December last. All financial requirements have been fully provided for, and no call will be necessary. The bank's liability upon its debentures was decreased during 1870 to the extent of £29,600, and this liability has been still further reduced during the present year by £1,410, giving an aggregate of £31,010. Altogether the report speaks favourably of the progress made in realising several old assets, and of the prospect of the tea estates in Darjeeling, Cachar, and Assam. It is proposed to raise about £100,000 in debentures, for the purpose of providing additional means for the successful working of the bank.

BURMESE OFFICERS IN ENGLAND.—Her Majesty's Government has permitted Padui Woon, Secretary to his Majesty the King of Burmah, and Moung Dung Thoo, an officer of the Burmese army, to receive a course of instruction in the several manufacturing departments of the Royal Arsenal at Woolwich. This is not the first occasion in which this privilege has been extended to the Burmese allies. A young Burmese gentleman, said to be a scion of the Royal house, after being educated at one of the Woolwich military schools, has for the last twelve months been allowed to devote himself to the study of the manufactures of guns, shells, fuzes, and other warlike material at the Royal Arsenal. Padui Woon and his companion took their first lesson on Tuesday morning last in the Royal Laboratory.

MILITARY.—We are surprised to find that the Delhi Gazette complains of "another grievance which may safely be called 'an infraction of the Parliamentary Guarantee' secured to the Indian Army on the amalgamation in 1861," viz., that the three high appointments of Adjutant-General at the three Presidency's headquarters are all held at the present moment by officers of the British Army, —viz., in Bengal by Colonel the Hon. F. Thesiger, in Madras by Colonel Roe, and in Bombay by Colonel Kirby. Our contemporary affirms this to be manifestly a gross injustice to the officers of the Indian Army. Seeing that Colonel Kirby has held his appointment since June, 1868, Colonel Thesiger his since March, 1869, and Col. Roe his since November, 1869, our Delhi contemporary is somewhat late in discovering the hardship of which he talks. Had we any grounds for founding a complaint against the manner in which the officers in question have performed the very responsible duties of their offices, we might be inclined to fall in with his views, but failing, we must regard the present attack as altogether uncalled for. We doubt whether India ever had three more popular adjutant-generals serving together. Could the Indian Army produce three officers to fill the appointments more satisfactorily?—Army and Navy Gazette.

DEATH OF COLONEL EWEN GRANT, BOMBAY ARMY.—We regret to announce the death of Colonel Ewen Grant, of the Bombay Army, which took place on the 9th inst, at Blackheath. This highly-respected officer entered the Bombay Army in 1839, and was appointed originally to the 1st, and soon afterwards to the 3rd, Native Infantry. He served with the Bombay Column of the Army of the Indus, and was present at the action of Nufoosk on 31st August, 1840. Between 1841 and 1845 he served in Civil employ and with the Coolie Corps in Goozerat. In 1846 he was appointed to a Belooch regiment. Colonel Grant's regiment formed part of the Bombay Column of the Army of the Punjab in 1848-9; he was with it through the campaign, including the siege and surrender of Mooltan, battle of Goozerat, and pursuit and surrender of the Sikh Army, for which he received the medal and two clasps. In 1851 he left India on leave, and in 1855 and 1856 served in the Crimean campaign as Provost-Marshal to the Turkish Contingency, receiving the Crimean medal. On return to India Colonel Grant was placed in command of the Scind Horse, and was with the Persian Expeditionary Force at the bombardment and capture of the Forts of Mohumea, and pursuit of the Persian Army (medal). During the mutinies he was attached to the Commissariat Depot, and was Director of the Transport train between Bombay and Nusseerabad. Colonel Grant subsequently served in the Staff of the China Expeditionary Force in 1860-61, under Sir Hope Grant. Colonel Grant at the time of his death was on a short leave of absence from India.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Aug. 5.—THE PERSIAN MISSION.—In reply to Mr. BENTINCK, Viscount ENFIELD stated that no decision had yet been arrived at with regard to the transference of the superintendence of their relations with Persia to the India-office; but during the recess that, as well as the other recommendations of the select committee on the diplomatic and consular services, would receive the careful consideration of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Aug. 10.—YOUNG SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—Mr. GRANT DUFF, in reply to Colonel GRAY, said the Government of India was quite alive to the expediency of sending as many young soldiers to the hill stations as the interests of the service would permit, but it would not be conducive to discipline that general instruction should be given to send to the hills all young soldiers arriving in India.

GUNNERS FOR INDIA.—Mr. CARDWELL, in reply to Major ARBUTHNOT, said: The number of gunners above twenty years of age required for service in India will be drawn by volunteers proportionately from each brigade at home, such brigades receiving from the depot an equal number of recruits under twenty in exchange.

STAFF CORPS OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.—Mr. GRANT DUFF, in reply to Colonel NORTH, said: The attention of her Majesty's Government has not been called to the grievances of a large class of officers of the Indian Army who joined the Staff Corps. The Secretary of State has sent no directions to the Government of India that all the Staff Corps officers, whether passed or not in the senior Hindustani test, who were otherwise well qualified for civil or military duties, should be employed; but he has permitted the Government of India to employ officers who have not passed in such departments and positions as the Government of India may consider them fitted for.

THE 18TH HUSSARS AT SECUNDERARAD.—Mr. GRANT DUFF, in reply to Mr. BRADY, said he was not aware that one-sixth of the whole number of men of the 18th Hussars, stationed at Secunderabad, besides women and children, had died of cholera. He was informed that the whole number that died was thirty-nine, including one woman and four children. The whole number of men was 386. The cholera made its appearance on the 25th of May, and was supposed to have been brought in by travellers. On the 23rd of June the regiment was perfectly healthy. Secunderabad was 360 miles from the sea. He was informed that the barrack was not in a hollow, but on sloping high ground. There were graveyards in the vicinity. The wells in the immediate vicinity of the graveyards were not used, but the men were supplied with good water from a distance. Evidence very unfavourable to the Secunderabad Barracks was given before the Royal Commission of 1863, and in 1866 they were reported upon not very favourably, though he was also bound to say not very unfavourably. In 1869, however, a very much better report was received; for during the virulent cholera epidemic of 1868 they seem to have been extraordinarily healthy. He did not know of any Commission having reported that no regiment should remain more than three years in any given station, but it was not at all usual for regiments in India to remain more than three years in any given station.

THE ARMY REGULATION BILL.—Mr. CARDWELL having moved that the Lords amendments to this Bill be considered,—Mr. DISRAELI called attention to the changes which had been made in the preamble of the Bill, which recited as the consideration the signing of a certain Royal Warrant. It now appeared that the warrant was not issued under the authority of a statute, and, as they had no authentic information as to what had occurred in the House of Lords which had led to the change, he thought the proper step would be to examine the journals of the other House. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) That was the course which was adopted in 1860, and he, therefore, moved as an amendment that a committee be appointed to examine the journals of the House of Lords with relation to any proceedings upon the Army Regulation Bill, and to make a report thereon to the House.—(Cries of "Hear, hear," from the Opposition.)—Mr. CARDWELL observed that the precedent referred to by the right hon. gentleman was no precedent at all in his favour, but rather a precedent against him. When the Commons passed the Bill for the abolition of the paper duty the House of Lords thought fit to reject it. The Commons heard no more of it, and it was, therefore, necessary to search the journals of the other House. But in this case they had authentic information before them, and the course suggested could only lead to delay. The question as to the authority under which the Royal Warrant abolishing purchase was issued had nothing whatever to do with the matter.—The amendment was negatived without a division.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Aug. 11.—PAYMENTS TO INDIAN OFFICERS.—Sir D. WEDDERBURN asked the Under Secretary of State for India if he would explain the grounds upon which certain payments, such as long service pay, were made by the Indian Government at the rate of 2s. 6d. per rupee, the real value of the rupee not being estimated higher than 2s., so that officers entitled, after 25 years' service, to 3s. extra per diem, lose at least one-fifth of that amount. —Mr. G. DUFF said according to the custom which had prevailed ever since the commencement of this century officers had been paid at the rate of 2s. 6d. per rupee; but the apparent loss was made up by allowances.

ANOTHER P. W. D. FAILURE.—More honour to the Public Works Department! The double-storied barracks built at Saugor some two and a half years ago are already showing signs of premature old age, and causing the station authorities anxiety. The fair fronts of these noble buildings are, we are told, becoming wrinkled with cracks and fissures; many of the arches are propped up by wooden supports, and in one block it has been considered advisable to build up the ground-floor archways with stone, in order to save the upper-floor from coming down. The recent rains have been too much, and we hear that portions of the barracks have been condemned by a professional engineer, and pronounced absolutely unsafe; and some of the men of the regiment occupying these dangerous portions have accordingly been ordered out of them. We are not in possession of full particulars, but a little bird tells us that many of the pillars can be opened by merely chipping the pointing with a pebble, and that masses of the stones can be removed by the hand, revealing internal chasms, or mere rubble without a particle of lime or mortar of any kind. Our little bird was pecking at some of the pillars in pursuit of its avocations, and it assures us it came upon "many places positively hollow." We are sorry to say that this caused our little bird's angry passions to rise, and it designates the palatial buildings as "simply a mass of villainous robbery." This is naughty language, and much too strong. We have no doubt there will be a full and complete investigation in due time, and we should think the disclosures will be somewhat interesting. The barracks only cost thirteen lakhs of rupees.—Englishman.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, VIA SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those VIA BRENNER and BRINDISI every Friday, at 6 P.M.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT OF INDIA—WHY SO COSTLY?

THE
AND THE
COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value or this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we cannot but anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufactuer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.
Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.
NEW PATENT.
ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.
Indisputable Remedies.—In the use of these medicaments there need be no hesitation or doubt of their cooling, healing, and purifying properties. The Ointment stands unrivalled for the facility it displays in relieving, healing, and thoroughly curing the most inveterate sores and ulcers, and in cases of bad legs and bad breasts they act as a charm. The Pills are the most effectual remedies ever discovered for the cure of liver complaints; diseases most disastrous in their effects, deranging all the proper functions of the organs affected, inducing restlessness, weariness, melancholy, inability to sleep, and pain in the side, until the whole system is exhausted. These wonderful Pills, if taken according to the printed directions accompanying each box, strike at the root of the malady, stimulate the stomach and liver into a healthy action, and effect a complete cure.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 25; Agra and Madras, July 23; Calcutta, July 22.

THE most exciting topic of the week in India appears to be the weather and its probable effect upon the crops. The Friend of India regrets to hear that the fair prospects of Indigo as they seemed a few weeks ago have now in many instances changed greatly for the worse. In May all was going on as well as possible; but the heavy incessant rains of June have brought the produce down far below the average, and on many estates where the manufacture was already drawing to a close the outturn will barely cover the cost. Throughout Lower Bengal, especially in Purneah and Bhagalpore, which have suffered most from floods, a sorry season is expected. Tirhoot and Chumparun however give more cheering reports, and in Maldah and Moorshedabad some of the estates were doing fairly. Of Tea on the other hand the reports are good. In some parts of Assam too little rain has fallen, but the tea-gardens of Cachar and Darjeeling promised well in point of quantity, although in quality the crop may hardly compare with that of last year. In Oudh and the North-West some damage has been done or threatened by the heavy rains, while at Poona the want of moisture has sent up the market price of grain. In the Berars a scanty rainfall has darkened the prospects of the cotton crops.

THE coffee estates in Mysore appear to be just now suffering from more than one scourge. Besides the mischief threatened by the reappearance of the "borer," some of them have been visited by another insect, which attacks the young trees, eating up their leaves, and otherwise hurting them. Old trees appear to be left untouched by these little epicures, who are reported as being from their numbers all the harder to exterminate.

FROM the Delhi Gazette we learn, in expansion of former telegrams, that Yakoob Khan, with three hundred troopers and a good many Sirdars and Khans who had gone out to meet him, arrived at Kabul on the 5th July. They lost no time in paying their respects to the Ameer, at whose feet fell his penitent son, praying for pardon with a "shawl hung round his neck, the Koran in his hands, and tears in his eyes." The scene, says the Kabul writer, was "very affecting." Was it the fatherly heart or the shrewd head of the Ameer that impelled him to take the rebellious Yakoob back into his best graces? The reconciliation, we are told, is complete, extending to all Yakoob's partisans. Troops have been sent on from Farrah to replace Yakoob's men at Herat, the government of which is made over to Yakoob's younger brother, Ayoob Khan. The returned prodigal himself remains at Kabul; and thus one troublesome knot in India's foreign politics has managed to get itself untied with a little judicious help from Lord Mayo. Something of the result may also perhaps be due to the good offices of the aged Afzul Khan, Governor of Farrah, who had used all his influence and persuasions to bring father and son together. He went forth boldly to meet Yakoob in hopes of winning him back to his allegiance, and at the same time he wrote urgent letters to Shere Ali on behalf of a full pardon for his offending son.

AT Simla the Viceregal Council has been doing a little legislation just to keep its hand in. On the 11th July Mr. F. Stephen introduced a Bill to amend the law concerning the oaths and declarations of Hindoos and Mohammedans. The further consideration of the Brahmo Marriage Bill was suspended by general consent until the Council's return to Calcutta, on account of the disagreements which divide the Brahmoists themselves on some of its main provisions. Mr. Cockerell's Bill to bring the Dehra Dhoon under Regulation Law was finally considered and passed.

WE are sorry for the undertakers of Calcutta, but if their business begins to grow slack there, could they not shift their quarters to some unhealthier city in Bengal or elsewhere? It appears that the reduced death-rate in the City of Palaces since the introduction of new drainage and waterworks has told greatly for the worse on those gentlemen who are wont to fatten like ghouls upon the dead. So little have the undertakers been doing for some months, that they have been driven to advertise against each other the lowest prices at which funerals can be supplied. The Indian Daily News tells a sadly amusing story to the point:—"The Chairman of the Justices, while out as usual inspecting the several divisions of the town, met an undertaker on the Dhurrumtollah-road, and asked him how his business was getting on. 'Very dull,' replied the undertaker with a sigh, adding, 'we will have to apply to you for compensation, as the drainage and waterworks have done it all.'"

MR. V. T. TAYLOR, officiating Collector of Bhagalpore, seems to have made a useful discovery, or rather rediscovery, of some lead ore in the Sahran Pergunnah of his district. It was first discovered five years ago by some Koles, who were digging for iron ore. Samples of the lead were forwarded by a native trader to Mr. Metcalfe, then Deputy Magistrate at Banka, who sent them on in his turn to Government. What the Government did or said on the occasion Mr. Taylor could not ascertain; but evidently no steps were taken to test the metal until Mr. Taylor revived the subject in May last. In consequence of his report, the Bengal Government forwarded the samples to Dr. Oldham, of the Geological Survey, for his inspection. He pronounced them to be true galena, or sulphide of lead, which generally contains about 86 per cent. of the pure ore. They were also found to yield 52½ ounces of silver to the ton of lead, a proportion which would make the ore "highly valuable if it occurred in any quantity," seeing that in England it pays to separate only two ounces in the ton. Dr. Oldham naturally declined "from small hand specimens to form any opinion as to the quantity" of lead ore found by Mr. Taylor, the nature of the lode containing it, or the ease with which it might be extracted. But if the vein on which Mr. Taylor stumbled be of any extent, its neighbourhood to the new Chord Line ought to commend it to the further notice of the Government.

A recent experiment in cotton-growing on the Nicobar Islands promises well for the commercial future of that little-known penal settlement in the Bay of Bengal. Samples of the cotton raised there from seed supplied by the India Office have lately been examined at Mr. Carnac's request by the Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, who consider them "of very superior quality and excellent in every respect." They look upon the cotton in question as equal to fair Sea-Island cotton, and likely to realise at Liverpool from twenty pence to two shillings a pound. A sample of indigenous cotton was likewise submitted to them. This on examination they held to be "evidently of Pernambuco stock," but of "a good useful quality," valued at 8d. to 8½d. a pound in the home market. The samples in question were forwarded to Government by Mr. F. de Röpstroff, Extra Assistant to Colonel Man, whose account of the circumstances marking their production is not without interest. It appears that round every village in the Nicobars cotton grows naturally to a height of six or eight feet, with large pulps and long coarse staple. Seeds from this and the exotic plant were sown in July 1870 in a well-sheltered valley near Nancowry Harbour. The soil is "polycistina clay slightly intermixed with sand." The cotton was planted in straight lines four feet apart, en echelon. The first flower appeared on the 27th August, and the first pod opened on the 8th November. Owing apparently to heavy rain in October and the hard clayey soil in parts of the plantation, for the breaking up of which too few hands were available, some of the seeds which were nine months old at first starting never came up at all. Enough however grew up to show what might be done with larger means. In the latter part of November Mr. de Röpstroff was able to write—"The little bushes, three feet high, spread out their branches, which sink under the weight of the cotton, and, as far I can see, the crop is most promising." So far therefore the experiment has proved successful enough to warrant its renewal under fairer conditions. The writer suggests the propriety of sending some ticket-of-leave men to the spot with a little money, who, after working there for one season, might receive grants of land and a supply of seed; the Government taking the produce off their hands at a fixed rate according to quality. In this way he thinks that free settlers might in time be induced to convert the barren grass fields of Trinkut into flourishing cotton plantations.

Mr. de Ropstroff differs from the geologists, most of whom "have in strong terms pronounced upon the sterility of the clay which covers the greater part of Trinkut, Nankowry, and Kamorta." He holds on the contrary that "nearly everything will grow in polycistina clay if the soil is broken for it." Wherever sand is mixed with the soil, especially on the Plutonic rocks, the Nicobar jungles are found to "vie in luxuriance with any other jungle in India."

Mr. Clarke's Report on Cinchona Cultivation for 1870-71 opens with an appreciative reference to the death of Dr. T. Anderson, who introduced the cultivation into Bengal and helped largely to develop it to its present state of prosperity. On his departure for England in 1869, seven years after his first attempts to grow Cinchona in Sikkim, Dr. Anderson left his successors little to do beyond completing the success he had already achieved. Last year being unusually wet, the growth of the plants was proportionally large. In the Rishap plantation at 2,000 feet above the sea, the Cinchona Succirubra grew on an average 45·8 inches, and the C. Calisaya 42·5 inches during their fourth year. Higher up the hill the growth was steadily less up to the level of 3,500 feet, where it was "comparatively very small." The trees planted on the higher levels will therefore come into bark-bearing much later than those below them. A large area planted in 1868 will not be fit for thinning before the Christmas of 1872. On the other, the Teesta plantations, which suffered so heavily from fire and deer in 1869, have "recovered wonderfully," parts of them being considered the finest in the whole Rungbee plantation. These trees grew at a level of 450 to 900 feet above the sea. Referring to the fear felt by some persons that a large number of four-year-old trees will die out this year, Mr. Clarke quietly observes that such an event would be "a most startling surprise," both to himself and to "every gardener about the place." Last year's growth was on the whole good, and the plants promised well in March last. Very few died except young ones, which had been planted out in swampy places. The Rungbee plantations had proved equal to all demands for seed, but are likely this year to run short of C. Calisaya seed. As the cinchona may grow on the wettest soil, if only the water does not stagnate, uniform planting is the practice followed by the head-gardener. Too great moisture however seems fatal to the Cinchona Officinalis, which thrives best on the drier slopes of Tukvar, north of Darjeeling. Of C. Succirubra, there were 480,000 young plants, mainly seedlings, in the nursery beds, most of which were, if possible, to be planted out in July; the remainder being reserved for the following spring.

Intermingled here and there with the cinchona succirubra was a plant somewhat like it, but hardier and better suited to different levels. At first it was taken for a hybrid; but is now supposed to be the cinchona pitayensis. Its bark has been found to yield more alkaloid and more crystallisable quinine than the C. Calisaya of the same age. Its culture has therefore been extended, and Mr. Clarke regards it as "destined to prove one of the most valuable species at Rungbee." During the last cold weather about 12,500 lb. of dry succirubra bark were obtained by thinning the plantations. Of this 5,000 lb. were sent over to England for sale, and the remainder was boiled down at Rungbee. In the English market the bark is said to be worth 1s. 9d. a pound. Mr. Broughton's method of utilising the red bark in the Nilghiri plantations is henceforth to be adopted at Rungbee, where the needful machinery has been set at work at a moderate cost with every prospect of success. From each acre of 1,200 trees Mr. Clarke counts on obtaining 300 lbs. of bark.

The August number of Fraser contains an amusing paper on "John's Indian Affairs." It is evidently written by one who knows India as well perhaps as any Englishman can be expected to know it, and who has a knack of treating Indian topics with a light hand. We could make a pretty fair guess at the authorship, but it is enough to say that he discusses matters from an unofficial standpoint, and is therefore not quite in harmony with the official mind on various moot questions of the day. He warns his friend "John" in a pleasant bantering way against believing all that his agents tell him, chaffs him about all the money he has spent on palatial barracks, comfortable jails, new departments, agricultural exhibitions, and so on, frightens him with a gloomy picture of the money drain upon his Indian estates, and explains for his benefit the meaning of the "satirical titter" which greeted Sir R. Temple's assertion that only thirteen people in Bengal had complained against the income tax. There is much in the paper which English readers would do well to think over, mixed with some things which the writer himself would do quite as well to reconsider. Does he not overshoot the mark for instance in describing the extent to which India is impoverished by her payments to English absentees? Is there nothing to place on the other side of the account in respect of money made and spent by Englishmen in India? Does India in short derive no countervailing advantage from her connection with England? On matters of personal experience however the writer in question is an unimpeachable authority. His story for instance about the extortion practised by native officials under the Forest Conservancy Act speaks for itself. Some of these gentry forced the people to pay for the timber they had cut down on their own lands for building purposes. Complaining to the writer about so iniquitous a demand, some of the farmers showed him "receipts for the money in a regular Government form." Of course the illegal plundering was stopped in that particular district; but how far the same game was carried on elsewhere, and may always be carried on under like conditions, we dare not try to guess.

By some inadvertence the death of Mr. F. W. Prideaux, Chief of the Revenue Department at the India Office, was omitted from our last issue. Mr. Prideaux's long and honourable service of thirty-seven years, the last thirteen of which were passed at the head of the Revenue Department, claims at any rate a passing reference from a journal devoted to Indian affairs. For some years before 1858 he and Mr. John Stuart Mill were serving together as assistants in the Foreign Correspondence Department of the India House. His son, Captain W. F. Prideaux, of the Bombay Army, now Assistant Political at Aden, may be remembered as one of the prisoners whom Lord Napier's advance on Magdala released from the clutches of King Theodore of Abyssinia.

The cry of the superseded colonels once more reached the ears of the House of Commons on Monday last, when Colonel Anson tried hard to persuade the Government to follow up the advice of a late Royal Commission, by setting aside so much of the Parliamentary Guarantee as precluded them from promoting the superseded colonels by a stroke of the pen. He only asked for the immediate promotion of forty-five British colonels to the next grade; but Mr. Lowe remained sternly economical, and refused to add £12,000 a-year to the public burdens. It was hard, he owned, to be superseded; but his duty to the public forbade his applying the sort of remedy proposed; and, besides, the colonels had put themselves out of court by spurning through their advocates the very reasonable compromise held out from the India Office. The Secretary for India had proposed, it seems, to let Indian and English colonels be placed for promotion on the same list, as soon as the few remaining colonels in the Indian Staff Corps had become major-generals. To this however the English colonels would not agree, if it was possible to obtain terms better suited to their traditional pretensions. Between Mr. Lowe acting in the interests of the British taxpayer and the Duke of Argyll defending those of the Indian Army and people, the aggrieved colonels are placed, as it were, between two stools. As they are little likely however to get what they want from so stern an economist as Mr. Lowe, and the Secretary for India will certainly make them no new concessions at the expense of the Indian taxpayer, we think they will do wisely to forbear from asking Parliament a second time to set aside the Guarantee of 1858.

Parliament was prorogued yesterday (Monday) by Royal Commission. The Lord Chancellor read the Queen's Speech, from which we may quote the following sentences:—

> I thank you for the liberal supplies which, under the circumstances of the year, I directed my Government to ask from you, and for the sum of money you have voted in order to meet the charge of the compensations required by the abolition of purchase in the army.
> By the Army Regulation Bill you have made a liberal provision for the officers of the Army, who will no longer be permitted on retirement to sell their commissions to their successors; and by transferring to the Executive Government powers in respect of the auxiliary forces, which have hitherto been vested in the lords-lieutenants of counties, you have laid the foundation for measures calculated to effect a closer union among the various land forces of the kingdom.

The Overland Indian Mail of August 1 will be due in England on Saturday next, if not sooner.

Regimental Schools.—The Right Hon. the C. in C. has notified that on the number of grown girls and infants attending a regimental school, reaching that for which pay of a monitress is authorised (Military Regulations, section 57), the appointment of a monitress may be made by the commanding officer in communication with the superintendent of army schools. It will suffice to send to the superintendent's office an extract of the regimental order making the appointment, with the following particulars:—Age; standard of reading, dictation and arithmetic, as per last examination; and a statement made that the monitress will continue to be taught daily with the other children by the schoolmaster, or by the schoolmistress, in cases where the grown girls are instructed by the latter.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SIR JAMES OUTRAM.

The dingy-looking shroud which has for many weeks past veiled Outram's statue from too prying eyes, was at length removed on Thursday last under the auspices of Lord Halifax, who did duty for the absent Duke of Argyll, his head bared for a time to the full force of what the papers were pleased to call a tropical sun. Tropical or otherwise, the sun was quite scorching enough to justify the friendly offer and ready acceptance of an umbrella, under whose shade the erewhile Secretary of State for India could hold forth in comparative comfort on the virtues of "India's Bayard," as Outram was fitly styled by his great opponent the Victor of Meeanee. The task so cheerfully undertaken by Lord Halifax was rendered all the easier by the many picturesque incidents in Outram's career. The simple recital of that noble-hearted soldier's contributions to Indian History forms the best possible eulogy of a life which the first of living writers on Indian History made better known to English readers in the pages of the Cornhill Magazine. It is pleasant to think that Sir John Kaye's presence was not wanting to the latest commemoration of one of his own especial heroes; and of all the statesmen who for the last twenty years have ruled the immediate rulers of India, none perhaps could show so clear a title as Lord Halifax, to speak from his own knowledge to the eminent services which Outram had rendered his country, alike as a soldier and an administrator.

The story of few lives points its own moral or paints its own portrait so readily as does that of Sir James Outram's Indian career, from the day when the young sepoy lieutenant first made his genius felt among the wild Bheel tribes of Kandeish to the moment when, covered with glory but broken down in health, he left India forty years afterwards only to die. Brave, frank, high-souled, large-hearted, self-reliant, of simple habits, sound mind, and unwearied energies, he was the very type of those who "dare do all that may become a man." Each of the leading passages in his life illustrates one or more of those high qualities, which place Outram among the very first of the soldier-statesmen who built up our Indian Empire to its present height. His success in taming the Bheels of Western India by means of fearless courtesy and persevering kindliness at once stamped him as a born ruler of men. His ability as a soldier was well sustained under Lord Keane and Sir Thomas Willshire during the Afghan War, especially in his close pursuit of the flying Dost Mohammed. His cool gallantry shone out in the defence of the Hydrabad Residency for three hours in 1843 against overwhelming masses of Belooch assailants burning to revenge the wrongs done by English hands to the Ameers of Sindh. His chivalrous sense of justice revolted from accepting his share of the prize-money awarded to all who fought under Sir C. Napier in Sindh. As Resident at Baroda in 1851 Colonel Outram braved the wrath of the Bombay Government by his unsparing exposure of a system of corruption whose ramifications spread from Baroda to Bombay. Driven from his post by official pressure from Bombay, he came home to find a discerning friend in Lord Halifax, then Sir Charles Wood, who sharply rebuked the Bombay Government and sent Outram out to serve Dalhousie and his country in Bengal. As Resident at Lucknow after Sleeman, Outram loyally carried out the decree of annexation against which he had protested in vain. He had not been long in England when the first signs of a war with Persia found him ready and eager to place his sword once more at the disposal of the Indian Government. Hardly had he brought the war to a successful close, when the great Sepoy Mutiny called him back to India, to crown his many past services with fresh proofs of his dauntless courage, his able soldiership, his self-denying chivalry, and his unflinching zeal for the public good. The characteristic unselfishness which made over to Havelock the glory of leading the succouring army to Lucknow may be contrasted with Havelock's previous readiness to supersede Neill in the advance upon Cawnpore. In all that happened between the first relief and the final capture of Lucknow, Sir James Outram played a very brilliant part. Whether he had to hold the Lucknow Presidency during the second siege, or keep swarms of rebels in check at Alumbagh, or clear the way for Sir Colin Campbell's final entrance into Lucknow, everyone knew that Outram, if any one, could be trusted to maintain England's honour against all hazards. To Sir C. Campbell his mere name and presence were worth a whole division in the field. When Lord Canning issued his famous edict of confiscation against the Taloukdars of Oude, to Outram, the Chief Commissioner, was entrusted the congenial task of softening so heavy a blow by means of explanations, for which no one less popular than himself could have won the general belief.

Such, in brief, was the simply great career of one who, like Munro, owed much more to himself and his opportunities than to the accidents of birth or political connections. Let us add, that of all our Anglo-Indian worthies few, if any, can show a record at once so pure and bright as that of James Outram, who did his work with the quiet steadiness of a true Englishman, with the ability of a first-rate public servant, and with the noble unselfishness of a practical Christian. His very failings, such as they were, serve to mark the nobler side of a nature which fired up against every seeming departure from its own lofty code of justice and right-doing.

INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS.

Not least important of the subjects reserved for future consideration by the Indian Finance Committee are the present condition of the Public Works Department, and the best way of averting in future the kind of shortcomings which have marked its recent career. Colonel Tyrell has lately told us how much of those shortcomings may be traced to the system of entrusting too many incongruous duties to the same officer, and Lord Mayo's published comments on the departmental blunders at Allahabad seemed to justify many of the worst stories which found their way home through the Indian papers. Since then a court of inquiry has been ordered into the defective state of the barracks at Sagar, and a tale of similar miscarriage comes to us from Amballa. In England the latest contribution to the list of charges against the Department bears the name of Captain Thomason, of the late Bengal Engineers.*

Having "served in all the grades of executive engineer," the author of this little pamphlet has some right to be heard as an exponent of what he considers the defects of his department, and the proper way of remedying those defects. In the first place, an engineer entrusted with works of irrigation in a new district has to begin, as it were, at the very beginning. The country must be surveyed afresh, the old revenue surveys being quite out of date. For this purpose he must organise and train a proper staff, draw up the needful designs and estimates, and provide for the manufacture and carriage of all his materials. The consequent waste of time, labour, and money is aggravated by the necessity of drawing out detailed plans of everything, looking after the accounts, conducting an immense correspondence, overlooking the assessments for water distributed, discharging magisterial duties, and keeping the works in repair. What wonder if under such conditions the work in hand progresses very slowly, with the help of subordinates more or less inexperienced? Such a system ends where it ought to begin. It turns out proficient engineers at the moment when they are about to rise into a grade where that particular kind of proficiency is no longer needed. It burdens the executive engineer with a quantity of work that might be done far more cheaply by men of a lower class.

A yet greater evil in the present organisation is shown to arise from the utter neglect of steam power and other labour-saving appliances. The "petty contract system" which prevails in the department, and is "only a shade of an improvement on the daily labour system," involves needless delay and expense, from the old-fashioned methods adopted by the contractors, their slowness in setting to work which they are apt to abandon at critical seasons, and their exaction of payments in advance on very doubtful security. That labour in India is still cheaper than steam, Captain Thomason holds for a pure mistake; it being generally allowed that "steam will beat any manual or animal power, however cheap." But the executive engineer has no power or time to mend matters in this respect. It will probably take two years before a request for new machinery obtains the sanction of the Home authorities, and by that time some one else may have taken his place, who will lack the means or the will to carry on his experiments to a fair issue. Under the most hopeful conditions for such experiment, its success can hardly be expected. If the machinery goes wrong, there are no means at hand for setting it to-rights; "the whole thing is new to everybody; failure after failure (all having to be duly reported) destroys all rest and peace of mind, and wears out the experimentalist, who is pretty sure to hear of the matter having been dropped by his successor." This is mainly due to the want of workshop training among the public works officers, especially those of the Royal Engineers—a want which the new College at Cooper's-hill is bound to remedy, so far as the civil engineers are concerned.

Again, if an executive engineer would ask for new machinery, he has small chance of getting it unless he can prove that its cost will be recovered from the particular work for which it is needed. If Government were its own contractor, no such rule would be allowed to hamper its servants' efforts after reform. Nor ought it to be content with one great central workshop at Roorkee, which cannot possibly satisfy the wants of all India. Steam and machinery are put out of the question while every engineer in the North-West must send to Roorkee for "a true screw a foot long, or an iron casting of ten pounds." They will only become possible when small repairing workshops are scattered throughout the country.

According to Captain Thomason, a very large saving of time and labour would be effected by substituting the steam pump for the wasteful methods of baling out water that now prevail. In the carriage of materials, which now forms one of the heaviest items in Public Works accounts, steam power would save two-thirds of the present outlay.

For the manufacture of materials also, and its due concentration in one spot, Thompson's road-steamer and Hodgson's wire tramway are strongly recommended. The wastefulness of a system of scattered manufacture, which deprives the land of precious manure in order that lime may be largely adulterated with ashes, would be obviated by the former, while bricks might easily be carried by the wire tramway six times as far as they can travel now in the rude carts of the country. Another large saving would be assured by the extended use of concrete and concrete cement. "The department do not use concrete because they have no cement; and they have no cement because they do not employ steam," or devote proper attention to a manufacture the materials for which abound everywhere. A similar neglect prevails touching the manufacture of stoneware and pottery. A few pice expended in clay pipes would largely do away with the need of making costly bridges and culverts all along the country roads. For want of steam and machinery India's wealth in all kinds of clay fit for pottery, and the manual skill of her best native potters, remains unemployed, while Calcutta sends to England for stoneware pipes, and large sums of money are lavished on costly brickwork and masonry. For want of steam-power to carry materials and break up stones or other road-metal miles on miles of road remain unmended or unmade; nor has any use been made of the "general joiner" machine, which, worked by two lads, is said to "do as much as thirty skilled English joiners," or something like three hundred natives. Finally, for want of steam-ploughs and other like aids to scientific farming, India has hitherto made no way in an industry which forms the mainstay of Indian revenue, and the deaths from malaria caused by irrigation combined with bad farming almost equal the aggregate of those resulting from periodical famines.

For these defects Captain Thomason proposes certain remedies which seem practicable enough. One source of needless delay and trouble might be cut off by the use of photography for multiplying copies of plans. In the second place the executive engineer might be relieved of much mechanical labour by the employment of trained surveyors furnished from the Surveyor General's office, but working partly under his own supervision. For the manufacture of materials and so forth, he would organise a separate "Material Department," consisting of skilled English artisans and trained natives, officered by engineers selected from the Indian Public Works and, when needful, from the profession at home. Such a body would form in fact "a kind of civil sapper and miner corps," whose services would also be invaluable to an army in the field. The North-Western Division should have its head-quarters at Roorkee, with minor workshops at Agra, Bareilly, and Allahabad. From these centres again movable field workshops could be detached to every needful point within the Provinces. The services of such a body should be given out first of all to any Government Office, secondly, to municipal bodies, and thirdly to agriculturists employing steam and machinery. Special care should be taken to bring into the new department none but men of proved capacity, to supply it with uniform machinery, and to avoid competition with private enterprise. Due stress is also laid on the new field thus left open to skilled artisans from England who would do cheaply the work now demanded of highly educated engineers, and to native workmen whose skill and industry ought to be more steadily encouraged than they are now by masters who aim at governing India for her own good. That such a body would be of infinite service to the State we readily allow; and if the ruling powers have all the foresight and sincere purpose for which we would willingly give them credit, Captain Thomason's pamphlet will not have been written in vain.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Dr. Chever, in a recent lecture delivered at Calcutta, described the manner of life of our countrymen one hundred years ago. Our rude forefathers in the East were no doubt much given to duelling, drinking, and running into debt. But though they committed extravagances condemned by their more civilised descendants, they did their work, and good work, moreover, in a climate which Englishmen of the present day systematically avoid whenever they can, either because they are afraid of it, or because they find it interferes at times with their personal comforts and pleasures. Were the old Indian of a century ago now to visit his countrymen, he would find them for at least six months out of the twelve not at their posts amid the people where he lived and worked, but in distant mountain retreats. In the place of the robust rowdyism of his days he would find a general thoughtfulness of personal ease and comfort, and a universal longing to "get home" and away from a country where he was content to pass a lifetime. He would wonder at the temerity of his descendants, but would think little of their sagacity. Remembering what he and his fellow-workmen went through when Englishmen were first acknowledged as conquerors in the land, how hard they fought and how hard they strove, they—a few Englishmen—against millions, to retain the mastery, he would think what reckless folly was this systematic mountain government, or rather misgovernment, of a subject-people dwelling in distant plains. How "the Hills" are now the first thought may be observed from the following fragment of intelligence which reaches us by the last mail:—"The Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce has now got a 'local habitation.' A board fastened on a tree in Chota Simla indicates that the office of the new bureau is situated near that of the Quartermaster-General. Colonel Thuillier and the headquarters of his department (the Trigonometrical) are now at Simla, for the purpose, it is said, of being within easy communication with Mr. Hume's office. A printing branch is to be established in connection with this Department." No sooner is a novel and costly department organised than it is established in a distant mountain retreat, where, as regards the benefit of the people who are taxed for it, it might as well be established "up in a balloon."

THE DETHRONEMENT OF LAW.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—You did me the honour, in your last issue, to notice a pamphlet of mine, called "The Dethronement of Law." In some respects you spoke of it, perhaps, quite as highly as it deserves, but your critique contained certain arguments and inferences, to which I should like to make a short allusion.

The principal aim and object I had in view, in the pamphlet in question, was simply to comment upon the oft referred to antagonism which exists between science and revelation; an antagonism which I contended was rapidly increasing—and the other matters alluded to were but of secondary importance; corollaries grouping themselves naturally around that one great central fact.

Your opinions, as expressed in your leading article, are, I am aware, in full accordance with the tendency of thought of the present day, and it was simply from a desire to combat—however weakly—these very notions, that I brought forward my views.

Old fashioned enough, even in the teeth of the "latent power of science," to retain my faith in that "old creed" to which you allude, I would fain have shown how, before advancing knowledge and the pride engendered by its acquisition, faith in this particular revelation which we denominate Christianity is gradually losing its hold upon the consciences of the civilised portion of mankind, and how the effect of this consummation would appear inevitably to tend to weaken the moral impulses, and, à fortiori, to bring about, eventually, a general Dethronement of Law.

But you mistake my line of reasoning when you assume that these conclusions necessitate a deduction "that some evil principle is enthroned in the place of that supreme good, whom men in all climes and ages have worshipped under different names." What is now taking place, and whatever may hereafter happen, is, according to my view, simply the result of Divine working, carried on for Divine ends—utterly inscrutable as that working and those ends may appear to the very highest order of human intellect.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

The Author of the "Dethronement of Law."

August 17, 1871.

[All we can say is, that to argue as our correspondent does on this matter seems to us very like a practical disbelief in the triumph of good over evil. If God is all-good, the present anarchy cannot last.—Ed. A. I. M.]

CHOLERA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—A few years ago a grand Commission sat at Constantinople to find out the truth regarding cholera. Two representatives from each of the Great Powers formed part of this Commission, which decided on the certainty of answers to two of the questions.

Firstly, the Commission decided that cholera was unknown in the civilised world previous to the year 1814. This tallies with the traditions of natives of India who declare that cholera was first known about the time of the Pindaree war.

Secondly, the Commission decided that cholera originated in India, and from that country spread over the world.

It was proposed that a deputation should be sent by the Commission to India to make further enquiries, but this suggestion was strenuously resisted by the British Commissioners, who gave assurances that enquiries should be prosecuted by the Indian Government.

The public has a right to ask, What has been done? what reliable information has been obtained? Has it been proved that cholera originated in the squalid misery of the inhabitants of the Nerbuddah territories, who suffered so cruelly from the rapacity of the Pindarees? Or did cholera originate in the Jessore district, as some declare? Was bad food the cause? Had enough salt been imported into the Nerbuddah territories to preserve the blood of the natives from corruption?

Next let us consider how this fearful disease is propagated. There is, I think, some fear that the doctors may confound English cholera with Asiatic cholera. The medical profession are arguing that infected water and dirty clothes are the means of propagation, whereas it is necessary to bear in mind that Asiatic cholera is propagated by the air; that nothing can shut it out; that no precautions can prevent its intrusion into the palace as well as into the hovel. Asiatic cholera is a stream of noxious air in which very little ozone can, I believe, be detected. It flows like a river through the land, the centre of the stream being usually the most deadly. That Asiatic cholera is a stream of noxious air can, I think, be proved by the suddenness with which it ceases. A thunderstorm, or other atmospheric violent change, often stops it. Were water or clothes the means of propagation, it would not disappear so suddenly.

How, then, can we defend ourselves against this noxious air? The best thing to do is to get out of it, if possible. By a journey of ten or twenty miles it is often possible to get into an atmosphere where ozone abounds. But those who cannot run away should meet the noxious air with sound bodies and intrepid minds. To preserve a sound body I venture to offer to the male readers of your paper the following advice:—

1. Do not overwork; do not expose yourself to sunstroke or drenching rain.

2. Be careful in your diet; eat wheaten bread and mutton, and (in moderation) ripe fruit. Two or three glasses of wine assist in keeping the stomach in good order.

3. Flee fornication. During an epidemic of cholera it is well for even the married to abstain from sexual intercourse; but those who assemble by troops in the harlots' houses enter the gates of hell, going down to the chambers of death.—Your obedient servant,

T.

INDIAN MARRIAGES.

The Madras Times observes that in England women seldom marry before they are 18, and usually when they are past 20, while men are almost always long past the age of virility (21) when they take to themselves wives. The mean age according to the census tables is 26 for males, and 24¼ for females. The very reverse of this is the case in India. Here mere children are, by those who ought to know better, permitted to become man and wife, and it is consequently no uncommon thing in this country to see a strip of a girl 12 or 13, who would in England be eating bread and butter in the nursery or schoolroom, walking about with an infant on her hip to which she stands in the relation of mother. This state of things is certainly the most melancholy of the many instances of native folly which fall under the notice of Englishmen in India. It is true that girls become women earlier in the East than in the West, but it is impossible for the most superficial observer not to see that the marriage of Indian females takes place long before it ought, and that the effects of the practice are disastrous to all concerned. We rejoice therefore to observe that a movement is on foot in Bengal to put an end to so pernicious a practice, and, with a view to helping that movement forward, we propose briefly to consider the evils which arise from men and women marrying too early, as exemplified by those around us. In the first place then the child of a child cannot be expected by any rational being to turn out a strong man or woman, either physically or mentally. His mother's constitution is not formed, she has not arrived at her full physical strength, her mind is not developed, her muscles are not set, she is in fact still an undeveloped being in all respects. As then the child must take after its parent it follows that the infant of a girl of twelve or thirteen will necessarily be wanting in constitution, and in that full development of brain and mental power necessary to enable it to play its part well in life. It is possible indeed that if the father be of mature age the failings of the mother may to a certain extent be neutralised, but in India unfortunately the father is usually in the same predicament as the mother, being in every sense a boy. The result, therefore, is, that native men and women are constitutionally weakly, that their powers of mind and body fail at an early age, and that they live, as a rule, a much shorter time than Europeans, being worn out and old men when Englishmen are in their prime. In the second place, the early marriage of girls is injurious to the mothers themselves. A girl who, though still a child, is expected to go through the trials and perform the duties of maternity, must necessarily be expected to suffer. The powers of nature cannot be taxed prematurely with impunity. If these girls who are still in their childhood are forced to become mothers their health must give way, and the result of such loss of health must by premature old age, and the bestowal of delicacy of constitution on every child that is born to them. We see in fact that this is the case, for the Indian woman is already aged at twenty-five and at forty is positively in many cases a hag. It is also pretty certain that the death-rate of women is increased by these early marriages, numbers of girls who otherwise would have grown up into fine women dying in their youth. It has been proved that in France, of those who have married under twenty, twice as many die as the unmarried of that age, clearly showing the ill effects of premature matrimony on the female constitution. It is therefore to be taken for granted that in this country, where the girls marry very young, numbers must die who would have lived to become women if they had had a fair chance of life given them. Partly the early marriage of the sexes is objectionable on grounds of political economy. A man and woman have no right to marry unless they have a fair prospect of being able to bring up a family without being a burden to other people. Now, it is clear that this can never be the case in India. A boy and girl wed and have children who have to be supported by the grand-parents, and thus it comes to pass that poverty falls upon families which under other circumstances would be decently off. How common it is to hear a native say that he has to support his sons and their children, and that he finds it almost impossible to play the part of bread-winner to so many. The consequence of this state of things is that a number of persons have to live almost at starvation point, and thus men and women, being badly nurtured, are prone to disease and fall victims to complaints which, had they better-sustained bodies, would not affect them seriously.

AFGHAN POLITICS.

The Friend of India maintains that Lord Mayo never took the side of Abdoola against Yakoob. His great object was to avoid interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan, and to accept the existing dynasty, with the right of succession vested in the Ameer, as it had previously been vested in Dost Mohammed. That this course has been inconvenient we should imagine Lord Mayo would readily admit. But he would not, we should say, be so ready to admit that any other course was practicable at the time. We were virtually bound to support the succession in Shere Ali's line, but we were not in all eventualities bound to support a succession in a particular branch of that line. That is, if Shere Ali had died a year ago we take it that Lord Mayo would have been committed to the support of Abdoola Jan. But surely it would be a great mistake to suppose that if Abdoola had turned out individually weak, and Yakoob had been entirely master of the frontier, that it was the duty of Lord Mayo to prop up the throne of the untried boy against the genius and capacity of the tried and able man. We think Mr. Vambery entirely in error in supposing that there is any radical ground for Yakoob being opposed to the English Government. If Lord Mayo simply left matters to take their own course the throne of Shere Ali would perhaps be shaken to its foundation. We do not believe for a moment that up to this time Yakoob Khan has ever thought seriously of uniting himself with the Russians unless he was forced to it by irretrievable disaster. If the Russians had any wish to overturn the throne of the present Ameer, the best man they could have for the purpose would be Rahman Khan, who is in their pay, and some people say actively in their service. If Rahman owed his succession to the power and policy of Russia, he might, brave as he has been, be inclined to become her vassal. But no Ameer whose title to the throne was undisputed would ever—granting him ordinary common sense—prefer a Russian alliance to an English one. It is clear to everyone, who knows anything of England and India and the frontiers, that the boundary line marked out at the Umballa Durbar is the line upon which England is contented to rest, as her line of Indian Empire. Can the same be said of Russia? Can anybody say where she is inclined to stop? The march of events, the undoubted progress of India, the great highway that Russia has secured by the Suez Canal, some complications pointing the way to Constantinople, or all these events, and others equally pertinent, combined may draw for Russia the eventual line of empire far to the West of Afghanistan. But no Ameer of that country ever can rely upon such a march, or union of events. If Yakoob Khan ascended the throne of Afghanistan to-morrow his true interest would be in preserving friendly relations with the Government of India. If Rahman Khan made another attempt, as he might, with Persian help and Russian instigation, the main prop of Shere Ali's throne would be the man who has lately endangered it, and failing that prop the probability is that Rahman would be victorious, or at least would compel Shere Ali to come to terms that would be tantamount to defeat. We cannot help thinking, therefore, that the Viceroy has acted wisely in recommending a reconciliation between the Ameer and his son, and though we foresee nothing but complications in the future from the injudicious order of succession, so determinedly persisted in by the Ameer, we do not see that those complications would be in the slightest degree lessened—indeed we think they would be an hundred fold increased—by leaving Shere Ali and his able son to fight it out to the bitter end. Instead of supporting our ally and our avowed policy we should be suffering it to fall to pieces, and probably to give place at once to a different policy at the same time that it gave place to a different dynasty.

THE NEW CODE OF EVIDENCE.

The Englishman remarks that hitherto India has not possessed any uniform law upon the subject of evidence. Within the Presidency towns the English Law of Evidence is in force, modified by certain Acts of the Indian Legislature, of which Act II. of 1855 is the most important. In the Mofussil, the Muhammadan Code originally was followed by our courts. But its provisions were of uncertain application, and although a superstructure of rulings and precedents gradually grew up, the customary law of the Courts did not assume any definite form. Since the enactment of the Criminal Procedure Code even this customary law has ceased to have any validity in the Mofussil Courts, and such tribunals have had no fixed Law of Evidence except that contained in Act II. of 1855, with the High Court Rulings thereon. They are not required to follow the English Law, but they are not debarred from adopting its provisions when they regard them as the most equitable. It thus results that at this moment there are practically two sets of rules of evidence, based upon the most opposite systems, current in the Mofussil Courts. In ordinary cases a District Judge goes by Act II. of 1855, with the High Court rulings based upon it. But in a great cause in which Calcutta barristers are employed, he suddenly finds himself involved in the complications of the English rules of evidence —rules which have been the slow, irregular growth of centuries, and which are adapted to a very different state of things from that which at present obtains in India. The effect of this has been to place Mofussil justice at the mercy of any sharp barrister who is determined to fight a case point by point. English counsel import with them into a Sessions Court a system of evidence with which the native pleader is wholly unacquainted, and in which the Judge has never been trained. Both the Judge and the native pleader naturally know a great deal more about the Indian Law than the barrister. But they make no pretensions to acquaintance with a system which ought never to have been allowed to apply to this country, which is not formally applied to it by any express law, and which, in the ordinary business of the Courts, is never referred to. The unregulated and undefined application of the English Rules of Evidence to the Mofussil Courts has caused more miscarriages of justice in important trials than all other causes put together. It is from this anomalous and disgraceful state of things that the Evidence Bill, now published, will rescue the Indian Courts. It reproduces, as far as possible, the English Law of Evidence; but that law, not in its heterogeneous and complex English fashion but systematically arranged and adapted to the requirements of India. The English law of Evidence has grown out of two distinct sources,—the English system of pleading, and the practice of the English Courts of Common Law. For example, the rule that evidence must be confined to the points at issue is founded on the English system of pleading, while the rule that hearsay is no evidence has grown out of the practice of the Courts. It constantly happens that the two sets of rules run into each other in an irregular way, and as a matter of fact the only mode of learning the English rules of evidence is by a practical acquaintance with the system of pleading and the practice of the Common Law Courts. A barrister who has spent a few years in drawing caricatures on the benches without ever holding a brief is thus enabled to perplex and puzzle the ablest judges and pleaders in our Mofussil Courts. The two features which chiefly strike us in the code now published are its total rejection of the phraseology of the English text-writers, and its effort to arrange in their natural order the fundamental principles which underlie the mass of precedents which such text-writers have collected.

Bengal.

CLERICAL.—The Rev. Mr. Wallis, chaplain of Berhampur, is said to have committed suicide.

GENERAL STEWART.—General D. Stewart, lately appointed Superintendent of the Andaman Islands, has been very unwell at Simla.

RETALIATION.—An attack has been made by the Hindoos of Raikote, near Loodiana, on the Mussulman butchers, and a man and a woman have been killed.

THE WEATHER IN OUDH.—In some of the districts about Lucknow there have been apprehensions that damage will result to the crops from the rains being too continuous and heavy.

THE COTTON CROPS.—The excessive rainfall in the North-Western Provinces and the scanty fall in the Berars have to some extent damaged the cotton plants.

YUNAN.—The advent of the rains has led to a temporary cessation of hostilities between the Chinese and Panthays in Yunan, but the Chinese appear to hold the routes.

LEGISLATIVE.—At the last meeting of the Bengal Council the Bill for imposing rates for the construction and maintenance of roads was finally passed with a few alterations, and the Council then adjourned to November next.

BRAHMO MARRIAGE BILL.—An official telegram has been received in Calcutta from Simla, informing the Brahmo Somaj of India that the final consideration of the Brahmo Marriage Bill has been postponed till the return of the Supreme Government to Calcutta.

BRITISH BURMAH.—Mr. Eden has gone to Moulmein to arrange with the Commissioner and the Inspector General of Police the best plan for the police administration on the Salween Frontier. The matter is very important, the timber trade, &c., having suffered greatly from dacoity.

EDUCATIONAL.—We see it stated that the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, has received a somewhat severe wigging at the hands of the Lieutenant-Governor for the strong minute he indited some time back, charging the Supreme Government with obstructing high class education.

MILITARY.—It is said that Colonel Gough, military secretary to H. E. the Commander-in-Chief in India, is obliged, owing to ill-health to return to England. The military force at Sagar is to be reduced next cold weather. The committee on the new barracks have not as yet completed their investigations.

POSTAL.—The Calcutta Examiner says that the Commissioner of Cooch Behar thinks of establishing a mail cart line between Tytali, on the Darjeeling-road and Doobiree on the Berhampooter, passing through Cooch Behar. If this line is established the journey to Assam by land will be greatly improved.

SMALL-POX AND THE N.W.P.—In the death returns of the North-Western Provinces for May it is stated that small-pox was prevalent in the Saharunpur, Mozuffernuggur, Bijnour, Indradabad, and Bareilly districts, and that out of the 10,116 deaths from small-pox in the whole of the North-Western Provinces, 6,909 occurred in the above five divisions.

THE SUTTEE AT BULLEAH.—We learn that several of the persons connected with the late Suttee case at Bulleah have received condign punishment. The Brahmin priest who officiated has been sentenced to four years' penal servitude, and the two sons-in-law of the deceased to five years' each. It will be a long time before another suttee takes place at Bulleah.

AMENDED LEAVE RULES.—The local Governments and departments of the Governments of the three Presidencies have been empowered to grant military officers in civil employ under them leave in India for any period not exceeding three months, as furlough, without reference to the Government or Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency to which the officer belongs.

MUNICIPAL.—The dispute between the Calcutta Municipality and the Post Commissioners as to the right to the Strand Bank has been referred to a meeting of members from both sides for settlement. In case no agreement is come to, the municipality will apply to the High Court for a mandamus to prevent the Port Commissioners using the bank.

TELEGRAPHS.—Colonel D. G. Robinson, R.E., Director General of Telegraphs in India, who is about to leave for Europe on furlough, has been ordered by the Secretary of State to proceed to Florence to attend the telegraphic congress. The Englishman understands that Colonel R. Murray will officiate for Colonel Robinson during his absence.

KABUL.—According to the Pioneer, there is no truth whatever in the report first published by Indian Public Opinion, that the King of Bokhára has been deposed, and Abdúl Rahman Khán set up in his place. Abdúl Rahman, says our contemporary, is still living under surveillance at Samarkand. The report of a severe engagement between Yákúb Khán and the Amír's forces, followed by the capture of Farrah and Kandahar, is stated to be equally apocryphal; as also the details given by the Lahore paper of the murder of Feramorz Khán.

The late War.—Letters have been received by the Commander-in-Chief in India from Count Bismarck and the French authorities returning thanks for the contributions of the Indian army to the sick and wounded funds.

Oudh.—We find from the Report on Criminal Justice in Oudh during the year 1870 that the crime of kidnapping girls had decreased from 152 to 100. 2,876 persons were whipped, a reduction of 1,000 as compared with 1869, but owing more to the reduction of crimes for which whipping is the punishment than to any diminution of the crimes themselves.

Public Works.—We, Indian Public Opinion, understand that Colonel Drummond may be expected very shortly to resume his appointment of Joint Secretary Public Works Department and Consulting Engineer to the Punjab Government, consequent on which it is believed that Lieutenant-Colonel Pollard will revert to his substantive appointment in the Central Provinces. Colonel Pollard has deservedly won considerable favour during his short acting appointment, and will take with him universal kind wishes.

Civil.—Sir William Grey, K.C.S.I., has resigned the Bengal Civil Service. In consequence of the relaxation in the fifty-five years' rule lately published by the Government of India, orders have been issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces to all heads of departments, to furnish lists of all their subordinates who have exceeded the prescribed age, whom it is desired to retain. His Honour adds that he "will readily entertain the case of any officer in whose favour it may be deemed proper to make a special representation."

When to Marry.—Doctor Mohendra Lal Sarkar, in a letter addressed to Babu Kesab Chandra Sen, and published in the Indian Mirror, adds his opinion to those of the other doctors, to whose letters regarding the minimum age at which native girls should marry we have recently referred. Dr. Sarkar gives some interesting facts in connection with the matter, in investigating which he appears to have spent much time and trouble. He agrees with the other doctors who were consulted, in fixing the minimum advisable age at sixteen, and he supports this decision by quoting a Sanskrit text from Sasrata, in which this age is mentioned as the advisable minimum. From a medical point of view Dr. Sarkar's letter is peculiarly interesting.—Englishmare.

The Miss Burdett Coutts of Bengal.—The Ranee Shurnomoye, "the grand old lady of Cossimbazar," has, it is said, been recommended to his Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal as a fitting recipient of the Star of India; but, according the Hindoo Patriot, Mr. Campbell, while fully admitting the Ranee's claim to a special mark of the approbation of Government, is of opinion that the C.S.I. is not quite suited to old ladies. It has therefore been suggested that she should be gazetted Maharanee, an honour which every one would be glad to see conferred upon her. Her life has been spent in unobtrusive and never ceasing acts of charity, in which needy persons or deserving institutions, regardless of creed or colour, have equally participated—the kind old lady being as liberal of mind as she is of purse. She is the Miss Burdett Coutts of Bengal, and like that lady should be raised to or in the peerage.—Pioneer.

Death of Colonel F. T. Wroughton.—We regret to have to record the death of Colonel F. T. Wroughton, C.B., which took place on Monday last at Dum-Dum, where he was on general duty. Although he had been in ill-health for some little time, nothing serious was anticipated by the doctors until a day or two before his death. He was a general favourite amongst his friends and comrades, and that he was a gallant soldier his war services as given below will testify:—Served throughout the Punjab campaign in 1848-49; present throughout operations in vicinity of Mooltan; present at attack on Durmsala (wounded), siege and surrender of Mooltan and battle of Goojerat, medal and clasp; served in campaign against mutineers in 1857-58; had military charge and command of Colonel Pulwan Sing's Division of Nepaulese troops; with these troops he kept clear for a period of four months frontier districts of Azimghur and Jounpore; commanded in affair of Bughah on 18th August, 1857, at attack on entrenched dwelling of Rajah Idaunt Jehan, a noted rebel in Jounpore District, leading to his capture and execution, after a prolonged bombardment of his house; present at affairs of Khoodwah on October 19, 1857, which ended in signal defeat of enemy, and capture of their camp; received thanks of Lieut.-Governor Central Provinces; commanded at severe action of Chanda, when 1,000 Goorkhas attacked and beat off 5,000 Oude troops, capturing their artillery, ammunition, and camp; received thanks of Lieut.-Governor Central Provinces; received special thanks of Governor-General in Council in December, 1857, for services performed; whilst in military charge of Nepaulese troops, marched through Oude with Brigadier-General Frank's column; was present at attack on Chanda and affair of Umeerapore on February 19, 1858, and battle of Sultanpore on the 24th of the same month; was present throughout siege and capture of Lucknow; promoted to Colonel by brevet, medal, and clasps. He was waiting at Dum-Dum to complete the short period he had to serve for his off-reckonings, when it was his intention to settle in New Zealand, where he had purchased an estate, and where his wife and family now are. He was buried yesterday in the cemetery at Dum-Dum with full military honours, H.M.'s 107th Regiment forming the firing party, under command of Major Lockhart. All the officers, civil and military, and several of the residents of the station, attended the funeral.—Englishman, July 19.

A Mad Elephant.—On the 27th January a mad elephant from the Rewah territory entered the Mandla district at the village of Tarraj. The villagers at once took refuge on the roofs of their houses, but a woman and child attempting to escape by running attracted the brute's attention and were pursued and killed. On the following night it went to the village of Mangah, where it killed a boy. Two days afterwards it appeared at Barbaspur, where it killed a woman, and on the following night at Kamaria, where it killed a man and woman. It then made its way to Dongria, whence all the villagers tried to escape on its approach, but two old women were overtaken by the elephant and killed, while another was trampled on and seriously injured. From there it went to Manori and killed a woman and two children, and passing on to Karbeli killed a baby, snatching it from its mother's bosom, and on the same evening and in the same place it killed a man. On the next night it killed an old woman at Nighori, and on the next another at Banu. On February 7 it came past the Ramgurh Tahsil, where it was fired upon and driven off towards Bijori, where it revenged itself by killing a man and a boy. On the next night it surprised in the jungle a party of villagers who had escaped from Nanda and killed another baby, which it snatched from its mother. On the following day it killed two more men, one at Belgaon and the other at Belgara. It next visited Saylaya, whence all the villagers escaped, except one boy who was rolled about and apparently played with by the elephant, which left him without killing him, and then went into the village and avenged itself by pulling down houses. On the 15th the brute was reported at Mohari, where it wounded a man and a woman by rolling them about and inflicting various injuries, but did not kill them. On the 19th it was at Naraingunge, where it killed one man and wounded another. A party, however, had been organised in pursuit, and the brute was pursued across the Nerbudda, and driven into the jungles on the hill called Daldalli Pahar, whence it was found impossible to dislodge it. It is said to be a magnificent beast, with tusks nearly three feet long. The total of its victims between January 27th and February 19th was twenty-one persons killed, besides several wounded. The most horrible and almost incredible circumstance, however, is that this elephant was seen to devour at least five of its victims, after tearing them limb from limb. In 1868 and also 1869 a musth elephant, possibly, it is said, this very brute, appeared in the Mandla district, but did little or no mischief.—Pioneer.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, July 22.—The market after the despatch of last mail opened quietly, and prices began to decline; business closes exceedingly quiet. Grey Shirtings: 39-inch mark a decline of about 2 annas per piece, at which there have been a few transactions, but holders in general are firm; while dealers express themselves indifferent about buying at present. 54-inch goods, demand continues, and a good business has been done for spot and arrival at firm rates. Jacconets and Madapollams are in fair demand, and prices are firm. Grey Mulls are very quiet, and prices have a weakening tendency. Grey Twist: The demand for 40's has been very quiet during the week, and prices are 2 to 3 pie per morah lower. Coloured Twist continues quiet.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, July 22.—Saltpetre: The transactions in refined have been limited, though the demand is good; but the refiners cannot work in the rainy weather we are having daily. The stock in the Bazaar is about 400 tons only. Linseed: There has been a steady demand for both Europe and America, and though a few contracts were entered into at a slight rise in price, the bulk of business was done at former rates. Rapeseed: Supplies come in but slowly, and are taken up as soon as they arrive, but without causing any change in rates, which exhibit, if anything, a tendency to decline.

Madras.

Trimulgherry.—We are glad to learn that up to the 8th July no more cases of cholera had occurred amongst the men of the 24th Regiment at Trimulgherry.

The Governor of Madras.—Lord Napier returned from Bangalore on July 23 after a two days visit to that station. His Excellency the Governor and Staff, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and Staff, and the Honourable A. J. Arbuthnot were to leave Madras on Wednesday, the 26th, by special train to Coimbatore, whence he would proceed up the Ghaut en route to Ooty on Friday morning.

Weather.—More rain has fallen and the clouds threaten to give us still further down pours. The great and unbearable heat which prevailed some days ago is considerably abated though not completely so; and Madras may now be said to be bearable. The rain fall is most opportune, in respect of agricultural operations, and it is believed that the forthcoming season will be a most fruitful and abundant one.—Athenæum, July 23.

The New Presidency College, Madras.—By desire of his Excellency the Right Hon. Lord Napier, K.T., the superintending engineer 4th division forwarded a plan with estimate, amounting to Rs. 8,600 of a Dutch garden proposed to be laid out in front of the New Presidency College, for the sanction of the Government. The superintending engineer has been directed to proceed with the levelling and gravelling operations provided for in his estimate.

Court Martial.—A general court-martial has been ordered to assemble in the Northern District, and is, we believe, for the trial of Assistant Surgeon Kearnay, recently in medical chrage of the 41st Regiment Native Infantry at Cuttack. A dispute seems to have arisen between him and the regimental authorities, in reference to his ordering some rubbish to be thrown into a tank adjoining the regimental hospital, and which it appears he had been expressly prohibited from doing by a written memo. He denied all knowledge of such an order, when the original memo. was produced bearing his initials in acknowledgment of his having seen it—and this has been made the ground work for a court-martial.—Madras Times.

Ootacamund.—We are informed that Dr. Hunter, of the Madras School of Arts, is now at Coonoor, awaiting the arrival of his staff of photographers, to take portraits of the tribes of the Neilgherries, on the premises of Mr. Herklotts. We trust Dr. Hunter will not be disappointed; but we fear he will find it no easy matter to get the tribes in question to enter an appearance for the object he has in view. Years ago, when they were coerced by official authority to be so good as to sit for their likenesses, they evinced great refractoriness, and did not at all seem to like the idea of being photographically immortalised. "The Queen wants our portraits," they said, "to send for the best specimens of us to serve her Majesty. We do not relish the prospect, and would rather remain where and how we are." Prejudices which the then collector of the district could not overcome are not likely to be subdued by any private individuals such as Messrs. Herklotts and Hunter.—Neilgherry Excelsior.

The New Park.—The projected new park situated off the Mount Road, a short distance from Government House, is, we hear, to be finished as speedily as possible, so that it may be opened to the public before Lord Napier leaves India. It is to be called "Napier Park" in honour of his Lordship, who was the first to propose that the unused and waste piece of land, which is to form the park, should be turned to some account by being made suitable for a place of amusement and resort for the people of this populous neighbourhood.—Athenæum.

Vagrancy.—Another lot of fifteen vagrants have just been granted free passages to Australia and England. From the number of these people already sent away from Madras, at the expense of the State, and the frequent applications to Government for grants to dispose of fresh batches, a tolerably correct idea may be formed of what the "vagrant" or "loafer" nuisance was when these people were at liberty—as they were a short while ago—to prowl about Madras as they pleased, seeking alms at the houses of respectable people, and too frequently behaving in an intimidating and threatening manner, especially when servants or ladies were alone in the houses at which they made their calls.—Madras Athenæum.

A New Water Machine.—An officer in the Madras army is said to have invented a water-velocipede, a kind of miniature paddle-wheel boat, in short, wherein the feet of the passenger supply the motive power. It is described as consisting of two canoes, or snake boats, connected together by a wooden platform, the boats being ten feet long, and one foot beam, placed three feet apart, on which rests a platform ten by three. In the centre of the platform is the crank (raised on wooden chucks, on which the bearings are placed) connecting the two paddle-wheels, three feet in diameter. The dip of the paddles is about one foot. The motion is given to the crank which propels the velocipede by means of the paddle-wheels, by two rods, which may be called piston-rods, each two-and-a-half feet long, working through an oscillating bar, three feet long, fixed at the hinder part of the platform. The motion is given by the direct pressure of the operator's feet alternately on the piston-rods.

International Exhibition of 1872.—The Madras committee for the International Exhibition have resolved to address the Dewan of his Highness the Maharajah of Travancore and the Dewan of his Highness the Rajah of Cochin inviting contributions from their respective States, to ask the Commissioner for Mysore whether a Committee will be formed for Mysore, and to offer the Madras Committee's services on any point that their aid may be deemed desirable. The committee have further resolved as the funds at their disposal will be of limited amount to invite free contributions from all who may be desirous of exhibiting any product, the same to be disposed of at the close of the exhibition according to the exhibitor's instructions. It has also been resolved that the accounts of the 1871 International Exhibition be closed and submitted to Government recommending that the unexpended balance, and all further disbursements or receipts connected with the Exhibition of 1871, be allowed to be carried forward to the accounts of the Exhibition of 1872.

Bombay.

TO THE LACCADIVES AND BACK.

(FROM ONE WHO WAS THERE.)

Bombay, July 7.—The British India Steam Navigation Company's steamship Ethiopia, Captain Scott, left Bombay on the 23rd ult. for Carwar and the Laccadive Islands, with about 400 tons of provisions, consisting of rice, salt, chilies, &c. The vessel encountered very heavy weather immediately after clearing the prongs, increasing in violence for the first forty-eight hours. On the night after she left port the ship laboured and rolled in a most uncomfortable manner, and frequently the high short seas came tumbling on board on either side. At about 2.30 A.M., during a very heavy roll to windward, the lifeboat hoisted at the midship davits was completely submerged and carried away by the sea. The ship arrived off Carwar late on the evening of the 25th ult., but could not enter on account of the thick weather and high sea running till the next morning. Chitlai, the northern Laccadive, was the first island to be visited, and this was reached on the evening of the 27th. The vessel had to be kept during the night very close under the lee of the island, so as to be as much as possible sheltered from the sea, which was breaking with tremendous violence on the weather side. These islands are very difficult to find in thick, squally weather, as scarcely any of them rise more than six feet from the surface of the water, and they have a novel appearance when first coming in sight, as the cocoanut-trees, with which they are thickly covered, have the appearance of growing out of the sea. They are all of coral formation, and very few have any anchorage near them. As a rule, no bottom is found at a hundred fathoms close up to the beach. The natives, who are all very poor, but very mild and civil, soon came off in their boats in swarms when the Ethiopia approached, and worked with a will to land the stores as soon as the ship anchored, handling their boats, and carrying them through the surf in a very masterly manner. With this very ready assistance the four northern islands, Chitlai, Kitban, Armini, and Cardamum were all provisioned within three days, though they are from twenty-five to thirty miles apart, and quite invisible to each other even in clear weather. The Ethiopia went on to Karakel on the 1st inst. to embark some natives belonging to Cardamum, an island the property of the Bebee of Cananore, the other four being British. The remainder of the stores were put on shore at Cardamum by the night of the 3rd, and the vessel's head was then turned towards Bombay, much to the relief of all on board, who had been tumbled about in anything but an agreeable manner for the best part of a fortnight. The relief was most opportune, for although at present the natives cannot be said to be in a starving state, their condition was a most precarious one, for had not food arrived when it did, the poor sea-girt islanders, shut up in their little countries, without being able to communicate with the main land, and scarcely with each other during the monsoon, would soon have been in a wretched plight. The poor fellows seemed deeply grateful for the assistance afforded them, without which, there is no doubt, many of them would have met with a lingering death before the close of the monsoon. The relief was prompt and opportune, and equal credit is due to those who made the arrangements to those who carried them out so efficiently.

Captain Scott was accompanied in his far from pleasant and somewhat dangerous trip, at this season, by Captain Hewett, late I.N., who went as transport officer.—W. F. D.—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

MUSCAT.—Syed Toorkee has resolved on another expedition against Lobar, and has himself gone with his troops.

RAILWAYS.—Lieutenant Colonel O'Connell is spoken of as likely to be appointed Chief Engineer to the Indus Valley State Railway.

THE GWALIOR RAJAH.—His Highness Maharaja Sindhia will arrive in Bombay in the beginning of August. He proceeded on Thursday on a pilgrimage to Poorundhur, where he intends to stay about a week.

A FALSE REPORT.—It turns out that the report of the death of the Rance of Baroda's daughter was unfounded. The child is alive and well, and has never been ill.

THE POONA DOUBLE MURDER.—Patrick Smith, of her Majesty's 83rd Regiment, was arraigned on Monday by the police before Col. G. E. Evezard, the full-power Cantonment Magistrate and a Justice of the Peace, for the murder of Private E. Roberts, of her Majesty's 83rd Regiment, on the night of the 18th June last, between the hours of eight and nine o'clock, by shooting him with a revolver in the barrack-room of the regiment. Also for shooting private Carroll on the same night and at the same time, and from the effects of which Thomas Carroll died in the hospital, after suffering for twenty-six days. The statements of the several witnesses were recorded, and Private Patrick Smith will be committed for trial before the High Court of Bombay on the ensuing Criminal Sessions. We regret to state that Private Thomas Carroll died on the 13th inst. at the regimental hospital.—Poona Observer.

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA.—Private letters from Shiraz as lateas the 10th June leave no doubt of the terrible reality of the famine. The loss of life has been, and still continues to be, fearful. In the town of Kazerun, for instance, which a few months ago contained a population roughly estimated at 10,000, only 2,000 remain, 4,000 having died, and the rest have fled in despair. Our informant could scarcely credit the statistics furnished to him, but the emaciated and miserable appearance of the few inhabitants he saw, and the speaking silence of the hovels, gave evidence of its possible truth. Yet Kazerun is readily accessible to relief from Bushire and Shiraz, being about midway between the two. The harvest that will now be gathered, or that, in some places, has been gathered, may save many lives, but the sufficiency of the crop is doubtful. The old women and children who have lost their male supporters appear to be the most helpless. Cholera does not seem to have been so bad as represented. Not disease but starvation has killed its tens of thousands. From Yezd the accounts are still worse.—Pioneer.

To London—Cotton, £2. 15s.; Seeds, £2. 7s. 6d. to £2. 10s.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, July 25.—Grey Goods: The market has been extremely dull, and the smallest business we have had to report for several years back has been done during the week. Prices of some descriptions have declined about 1 anna per piece. Bleached Goods: The market remains unaltered in all respects. Dyed and Printed Goods quiet, and no change. Turkey Red Goods continue very dull; and no sales. In Grey Yarns a very small business has been done, and prices of some descriptions have nominally declined about ¼ to ½ annas per lb. Metals: A moderate business has been done during the week. In Copper prices have generally advanced 8 annas to 1 rupee per cwt. In Yellow Metal there has been a general decline of about 8 annas per cwt. Of Spelter, English has been sold at Rs. 93 per cwt.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, July 25.—Cotton: The market here has been extremely dull, so much so that, until the 22nd instant, when the Liverpool market was said to be firmer, hardly any business whatever was done; but prices, notwithstanding, have throughout remained unaltered. The total purchases made in the week for export amount to about 2,200 bales only.

GOVERNMENT PAPER.—A large business has been done in the week at advanced rates, and the market closes very strong.

EXCHANGE.—Rates close a shade weaker than they did last week; a fair business has been done in the week, but there was more difficulty yesterday in placing Credits and Documents. The rate on China for 60 days' sight closes at Rs. 225 per 100 dollars.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 103RD REGIMENT.—On Saturday afternoon his Royal Highness Prince Arthur presented new colours to the 103rd Regiment, now quartered at Parkhurst, Isle of Wight, in the presence of the Prince and Princess Imperial of Germany and their two eldest sons, Prince William and Prince Henry. Prince Arthur, who wore the uniform of the Rifle Brigade, was attended by Colonel du Plat, Equerry to the Queen. The Imperial party drove to the grounds in an open carriage and four. The Prince Imperial wore the German uniform, and the Princess a light blue satin dress, trimmed with white lace, and a white tunic with gold trimmings. The Bishop of Winchester consecrated the colours, and the Prince, in presenting them, said that he felt he was giving them to men who would defend them from danger and dishonour at the risk of their lives. He spoke of the services rendered by the regiment in India, and said he was sure that, should occasion arise when they would have to follow these colours into action, they would think of Guzerat and Seringapatam, and do their best to imitate their predecessors; but he trusted that the blessings of peace would be continued to us. He hoped the men and officers would endeavour to perfect themselves in their noble profession, and that the officers might be followed by men who would be proud to do so. The ensign then took charge of the colours. Colonel Furneaux thanked his Royal Highness for his good opinion of the regiment. The old colours were, he said, presented to them six years ago by the late Sir Charles Napier, but since then they had not had opportunities of adding many more names to their old standard.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ADMISSIONS TO THE STAFF CORPS.

Simla, June 30.—With reference to Clause VI. of the rules for the examination of military officers seeking admission to the staff corps in the civil department in the non-regulation provinces of the Lower and North-Western Provinces of Bengal, published in G.O. No. 3,101, dated Oct. 5, 1864, it is hereby notified that Bentham's "Theory of Legislation" (published by Messrs. Trubner and Co., London, 1864), and Fawcett's "Manual of Political Economy," are substituted for Maine's "Ancient Law," and Austin's "Principles of Jurisprudence," Vol. I., and Mill's "Political Economy." This change will take effect at the expiration of twelve months from the publication of the order in the Gazette of India.

OFFICERS' REMITTANCES.

The following despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published :—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

London, April 27, 1871.

My Lord,—In the letter from the Government of India, dated June 23, No. 239, it was recommended in the 22nd paragraph that all payments of the equivalent of Indian pay to officers on furlough at home should be made at the exchange of two shillings for the rupee.

2. In the reply, dated Aug. 26, 1868, No. 297, Sir Stafford Northcote observed in the 16th paragraph that, "in accordance with the present practice," payments of that character would be made at the proposed rate of exchange.

3. Accordingly, in the G.O. issued by the Government of India on November 10, 1868, No. 1,064, publishing the revised Furlough Rules of 1868, it was stated that furlough pay in all future orders and references would be understood as the half Indian salary, within the prescribed limits, converted at the exchange of two shillings for the rupee.

4. It is not clear whether it was intended by this order that furlough pay issued to officers under the rules of 1854 should also be issued at this fixed rate.

5. As the rate of exchange has not varied since 1860-61 until the present financial year, for which it has been fixed at one shilling and elevenpence, it is only on the question at what rate furlough pay for the current quarter should be issued that my attention has been specially drawn to the point, although the order was sanctioned in my despatch dated March 31, 1869, No. 93.

6. On a careful consideration of the matter, it appears to me that there is no reason why the pay of officers in this country should be issued at a different rate from that at which those in India are allowed to remit a portion of their salary to England.

7. I have accordingly to request that your lordship will at once issue an order cancelling so much of that of November 10, 1868, as fixed the uniform rate of two shillings, and announcing that all payments of furlough pay will be made at the current rate of exchange fixed for the official year.

8. Until the date of the general order which you will issue under these instructions, payments of furlough pay will be made to officers, under whatever rules they may be, at the rate of two shillings for the rupee.—I have, &c.,

ARGYLL.

With reference to the above, the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council is pleased to notify that officers who have embarked for England on furlough before this date will be exempted from the operation of this order for the period of their present furlough.

N.B.—It will be observed that, with one exception (the Euphrates goes home via the Cape, with invalids, calling at Beypore), the whole of the troopships homewards and outwards this season proceed via the Suez Canal.

The dates of departure from Bombay may be considered as definite, those of arrival at Bombay will depend on the time actually required for the voyage and the passage of the Canal. The departure of the ships from Suez on the outward voyage will be communicated by telegraph to the authorities at Bombay.

Schools.—British Regiments.—The Commander-in-Chief directs that no school assistant is to be appointed until he has become a thoroughly drilled soldier. The frequent and unnecessary withdrawal of school assistants from their duties at the regimental school, being calculated to give rise to much inconvenience in carrying on the instruction, it is essential that a limit should be put to their absence, which in future is to be required only for the following purposes, viz., attendance during musketry drill, and at one parade a week, and on occasions when they are absolutely wanted for some urgent regimental duty. The schoolmaster will record in his register every occasion on which a soldier assistant is absent from the school.

Military Furloughs, &c.—The following officers have obtained furloughs to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified (in July):—Second Capt. H. L. Ellaby (No. 1 battery, 6th brigade R.A.), from July 17 to July 31, on private affairs; Lieut. D. Russell (D battery, 20th brigade R.A.), from date of departure, to appear before a medical board; Lieut. col. H. E. T. Williams, 108th foot, to remain in England, from May 29 to Nov. 30.

CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA.

The following Regulations for the Open Competition of 1872 have been issued. They are liable to be altered in future years:—

1. On Tuesday, March 19, 1872, and following days, an examination of candidates will be held in London. At this examination not fewer than candidates will be selected, if so many shall be found duly qualified. Of these will be selected for the Presidency of Bengal (for the Upper Provinces and for the Lower Provinces), for that of Madras, and for that of Bombay.* Notice will hereafter be given of the days and place of examination.

2. Any person desirous of competing at this examination must produce to the Civil Service Commissioners, before the 1st of February, 1872, evidence showing:—

(a) That he is a natural-born subject of her Majesty.

(b) That his age on the 1st of March, 1872, will be above seventeen years and under twenty-one years. [N.B.—In the case of natives of India this must be certified by the Government of India, or of the Presidency or province in which the candidate may have resided.]

(c) That he has no disease, constitutional affection, or bodily infirmity unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for the Civil Service of India.†

(d) That he is of good moral character; and must also pay such fee as the Secretary of State for India may prescribe.‡

3. Should the evidence upon the above points be prima facie satisfactory to the Civil Service Commissioners, the candidate will, upon the payment of the prescribed fee, be admitted to the examination. The Commissioners may, however, in their discretion, at any time prior to the grant of the certificate of qualification hereinafter referred to, institute such further inquiries as they may deem necessary, and if the result of such inquiries, in the case of any candidate, should be unsatisfactory to them in any of the above respects, he will be ineligible for admission to the Civil Service of India, and, if already selected, will be removed from the position of a probationer.

4. The examination will take place only in the following branches of knowledge:—

	Marks.
English Composition	500
History of England, including that of the Laws and Constitution	500
English Language and Literature...	500
Language, Literature, and History of Greece	750
Do., Rome	750
Do., Italy	375
Mathematics, pure and mixed	1,250
Natural Science—that is (1), Chemistry, including heat; (2), Electricity and Magnetism; (3), Geology and Mineralogy; (4), Zoology; (5), Botany	1,000
(The total, 1,000, marks, may be obtained by adequate proficiency in any two or more of the five branches of science included under this head).
Moral Sciences—that is, Logic, Mental and Moral Philosophy	500
Sanskrit Language and Literature	500
Arabic Literature and Language	500

Candidates are at liberty to name, before Feb. 1, 1872, any or all of these branches of knowledge. No subjects are obligatory.

5. The merit of the persons examined will be estimated by marks; and the number set opposite to each branch in the preceding regulation denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it.

6. No candidate will be allowed any marks in respect of any subject of examination unless he shall be considered to possess a competent knowledge of that subject.*

7. The examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by viva voce examination, as may be deemed necessary.

8. The marks obtained by each candidate, in respect of each of the subjects in which he shall have been examined, will be added up, and the names of the candidates who shall have obtained a greater aggregate number of marks than any of the remaining candidates will be set forth in order of merit, and such candidates shall be deemed to be selected candidates for the Civil Service of India, provided they appear to be in other respects duly qualified; and shall be permitted to choose,† according to the order in which they stand, as long as a choice remains, the Presidency (and in Bengal the division of the Presidency) to which they shall be appointed. Should any of the selected candidates become disqualified, the Secretary of State for India will determine whether the vacancy thus created shall be filled up or not. In the former case, the candidate next in order of merit, and in other respects duly qualified, shall be deemed to be a selected candidate. A selected candidate declining to accept the appointment to which he may be entitled according to his place in order of merit will be disqualified for any subsequent competition.

9. Selected candidates, before proceeding to India, will be on probation for two years, during which time they will be examined periodically, with a view of testing their progress in the following subjects:—‡

	Marks.
1. Oriental Languages:
Sanskrit	500
Vernacular§ Languages of India (each)	400
2. The History and Geography of India	350
3. Law	1,250
4. Political Economy	350

In these examinations, as in the open competition, the merit of the candidates examined will be estimated by marks, and the number set opposite to each subject denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it at any one examination. The examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by viva voce examination, as may be deemed necessary. The last of these examinations will be held at the close of the second year of probation, and will be called the "final examination," at which it will be decided whether a selected candidate is qualified for the Civil Service of India.

10. Any candidate who, at any of the periodical examinations, shall appear to have wilfully neglected his studies, or to be physically incapacitated for pursuing the prescribed course of training, will be liable to have his name removed from the list of selected candidates.

11. No candidate will be permitted to proceed to India before he shall have passed the final examination, and received a certificate of qualification from the Civil Service Commissioners, or after he shall have attained the age of twenty-four years.

12. The selected candidates who, at the final examination, shall be found to have a competent knowledge of the subjects specified in Regulation 9, and who shall have satisfied the Civil Service Commissioners of their eligibility in respect of age, health, and character, shall be certified by the said Commissioners to be entitled to be appointed to the civil service of India, provided they shall comply with the regulations in force at the time for that service.

13. The seniority in the Civil Service of India of the selected candidates shall be determined according to the order in which they stand on the list resulting from the final examination.

14. Applications from persons desirous to be admitted as candidates are to be addressed to the Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, London, S.W., from whom the proper form for the purpose may be obtained.

* The number of appointments to be made, and the number in each Presidency, &c., will be announced hereafter.

† Evidence of health and character must bear date not earlier than January 1, 1872.

‡ The fee for this examination will be £5, payable by means of a special stamp according to instructions which will be communicated to candidates.

* Including, besides the languages prescribed for the several Presidencies, such other languages as may, with the approval of the Commissioners, be taken up as subjects of examination.

† "Nothing can be further from our wish than to hold out premiums for knowledge of wide surface and of small depth. We are of opinion that a candidate ought to be allowed no credit at all for taking up a subject in which he is a mere smatterer."—Report of Committee of 1854. A deduction of marks will be made under each subject, including mathematics.

‡ This right must be exercised immediately after the result of the examination is announced, on such day as may be fixed by the Civil Service Commissioners.

§ Full instructions as to the course of study to be pursued will be issued to ten successful candidates as soon as possible after the result of the open competition is declared.

Note.—(1.) The Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the Civil Service Commissioners to state that it is his intention to allow the sum of £50 after each of the three first half-years of probation, and £150 after the last half-year, to each selected candidate who shall have passed the required examinations to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, and shall have complied with such rules as may be laid down for the guidance of selected candidates.

(2.) All selected candidates will be required, after having passed the second periodical examination, to attend at the India-office for the purpose of entering into an agreement binding themselves, among other things, to refund in certain cases the amount of their allowance in the event of their failing to proceed to India. For a candidate under age a security will be required.

(3.) After passing the final examination each candidate will be required to attend again at the India-office, with the view of entering into covenants and giving a bond for £1,000, jointly with two sureties, for the due fulfilment of the same.

The stamps payable on these documents amount to £1. 10s.

(4.) Candidates rejected at the final examination of 1874 will in no case be allowed to present themselves for re-examination.

GENERAL DALFOUR ON MILITARY EXPENDITURE IN INDIA.

Reply by the Government of India.

The following note is in reply to Major general Sir George Balfour's letter to the Times, published in the issue of 23rd May :—

The statements in Major-General Sir George Balfour's first letter to the Times, being unsupported by data of any kind, afforded no definite ground for reply. The Times of 23rd May, received yesterday with the English mail, contained General Balfour's second letter, wherein he reproduces his previous statements, with the calculations and reasons on which they were based. These statements, and the reply of the Military Account Department, will now be placed in juxtaposition :—

Statement.

The net military expenditure in England and in India together, in 1862-63, was £1,074,553, less than that estimated for 1871-72.

Reply.

2. The gross military expenditure (which is the true ground of comparison) is thus shown in the Finance and Revenue Accounts :—

	1862-63.	1871-72.
In India ...	£12,853,636 ...	£12,410,000
In England	2,144,737 ...	3,574,000
Total ...	£14,998,373 ...	£15,984,000
Excess over 1862-63 ...		£985,627

If the military receipts were included, the result would be better, i.e., the excess over the expenditure in 1862-63 would be £969,035. The difference between these and Sir George Balfour's figures, however, are not material to the general issue.

Statement.

The Army Estimates for 1862-63 are the last for which Sir George Balfour holds himself responsible. Comparing the effective strength of the Indian Army at that period with the strength in 1871-72, he makes out a reduction of 14,664 Europeans, and 10,000 Natives, representing a saving (at the established rates of cost, viz., £112-4 for Europeans, and £41-9 for Natives) of £2,059,800. Adding to this sum the cost of the Hyderabad Contingent (£208,935), of the Nagpore Force (£74,280), of the Trigonometrical Survey (£59,461), he calculates a saving in all of £2,402,466. This amount, with (£1,074,553), the excess of estimate for 1871-72 over the net expenditure in 1862-63, will give a total of nearly three-and-a-half millions sterling, which is either being spent in vain, or should be accounted for in any case.

Reply.

3. These figures are totally different from those to which Sir George Balfour pledged himself and the Government of India, in the Army Estimates for 1862-63. The Estimates were based upon an established strength of 69,324 Europeans, the then average effective strength being 69,179, according to the Quartermaster-general's return for the three Presidencies. Sir George Balfour's recent statement in the Times gives the established strength for 1862-63 at 78,899, and the average effective strength at 75,407 Europeans. His statements of the established strength in subsequent years also differ widely from those given in the annual estimates, which were carefully reckoned according to the batteries and regiments assigned for service in India, in each year. The differences between his statements and the Army Head Quarters returns, respecting the effective strength, are equally remarkable.

He now compares the supposed effective strength in 1862–63 (75,407) with the supposed effective strength in 1870–71 (60,743), and thus obtains his reduction of 14,664 Europeans. But the comparison being really between the actual expenditure of 1862–63 and the estimate for 1871–72, the actual strength of the former year (69,179, according to the official returns) should be set against (60,445) the established strength in 1871–72. He may be allowed, however, the advantage of his own estimate of the established strength in 1862–63 (69,324) against the established strength in 1871–72 (60,445), or a reduction of 8,879 instead of 14,664 Europeans.

4. If Sir George Balfour's present figures be right, his budget figures for 1862–63 were wrong, and the financial arrangements of subsequent years were likewise framed on similarly erroneous data as to strength. But those data, carefully collated from official records according to the usual methods, were freely proclaimed, and have remained unchallenged until now. The data for Sir George Balfour's present conclusions are not given. Possibly he may have included the depot strength in England, but that was provided in the capitation rate on the strength in India, and cannot be imported into the consideration of the present question. Probably he may have included the officers of the British Army in India, but the difference between the number of such officers in 1862–63 and 1871–72 would be considerably less than a thousand, and that would not account for the difference between his figures and those of the Indian Estimates. Besides, in rating army expenditure, it is not usual to add the number of commissioned officers to the number of soldiers.

5. Again, the reduction in the strength of native troops is now assumed at 10,000 men, besides the Hyderabad Contingent and the Nagpore Irregular Force, or about 20,000 men in all. The effective strength of the Native Army in 1862–63 was stated by Sir George Balfour, when submitting the estimates for that year, at 124,505, and the estimates were based upon an established strength of 127,994 natives, including the Hyderabad Contingent and Nagpore Force. The established strength in subsequent years was as follows :—

1867-68	129,161 (a)
1868-69	130,412 (b)
1869-70	122,442 (c)
1870-71	122,122
1871-72	121,931

(a)—Decrease by transfer of Hyderabad Contingent.
(b)—Increase by augmentation of Bengal and Bombay regiments for the Abyssinian Expedition.
(c)—Decrease by absorption of augmentations.

Thus the Hyderabad Contingent passed out of the Military Estimates in 1867-68, and is duly accounted for. The Nagpore Force was abolished in 1862-63 ; and here it may be remarked that the saving by its abolition is now set down at £74,280, whereas the provision in the budget of 1862-63 was only £20,928, and was not entirely expended owing to the abolition of the force in that year.

6. In respect both of the European and Native Army, therefore, the extent of the reductions effected since 1862-63 has been overstated. Anyhow, the expenditure of that year must needs be judged by the standard of strength on which the estimates and accounts were based. In this case the figures are Sir George Balfour's own, deliberately adopted by his successor in all subsequent commentaries on the military expenditure in India. They accord also with the actual facts as exhibited in the official returns, save that the Native Artillery, the Pegu Sappers, the recruit and pension boys of the Madras and Bombay Native Armies, and part of the Hyderabad Contingent, amounting in all to about 6,000 men, are omitted from the established strength of natives. Adding these to the figures given in Sir George Balfour's Budget for 1862-63—allowing him, for Europeans and natives, the full benefit of the established strength, which usually exceeds effective strength, and, comparing the figures with the established strength in 1871-72, the result will be as follows :—

1862-63	69,324 ...	134,246
1871-72	60,445 ...	121,981
Reduction	8,879*	12,265*

This reduction in numbers, with the reductions in staff and departmental appointments, represents a saving of rather more than one and one-third of a million sterling ; see enclosure A, which exhibits, in detail, the saving from each item of reduction. This method is preferable to that of applying to the respective numbers, general average rates deduced from data alike inapplicable to the expenditure of 1862-63 and to the conditions of the current year. If, then, to this saving of one and one-third million be added £985,627 (being the excess of the estimated expenditure of 1871-72 over the actuals of 1862-63), there will appear a total excess of £2,391,417, instead of the three and a-half millions stated.

7. Before entering upon an explanation of this excess, the rates of former and present cost of the soldier will be briefly noticed, in connection with Sir George Balfour's remarks, quoted in the margin.

Statement.

"The rates of cost were struck at a period of administrative economy, but by no means remain the same at a period of extravagance ; on the contrary, they are liable to a rise of 10, 15, or 20 per cent. ; in fact, just in proportion to the want of proper check on the expenditure."

Reply.

8. Yet the rates of that period of economy are found to exceed the rates prevailing ten years before by nearly 25 per cent. in the case of Europeans, and 64 per cent. in the case of natives :—

	1863.	1863.
Cost per man—
European	£90	£112

Economy and check were of no avail then against inevitable economic changes, and the growing exigencies of the army. Similar causes, and to a much greater extent, have influenced the expenditure since the year 1863. The rise in prices throughout the country has been more marked, the improvements in the pay, shelter, equipment, instruction of the soldier, have been more urgent and more costly than in any previous period. It is owing entirely to these causes, which were never even contemplated in 1862-63, that the cost of the army has not decreased correspondingly with its strength ; it is owing to the persistent efforts to keep down the strength within the lowest limits compatible with safety, and to enforce economy in every practicable direction, that the military expenditure is not higher than it is.

9. But to return to the rates. A consideration of the military expenditure in India must show how impossible it is to fix a unit of cost that shall be true for more than one year. War, famine, epidemics, derange the nicest calculations. And in a large army, in course of reduction, the unit of cost must frequently vary in an inverse ratio to strength ; as, when the reduction only effects rank and file, the diminished number has to bear an increased proportion of staff, departmental, and general charges incidental to organisation and equipment. This is so obvious a truth as to require only a passing remark, in reference to the course that has been adopted of testing the military expenditure of the present day by the experience of 1862-63 and 1863-64.

10. Having thus endeavoured to show that Sir George Balfour is in error as to the extent and value of the reductions in the Indian Army, it only remains to state the countervailing effect of the several measures of military reform that have resulted in increasing the aggregate military expenditure. In stating this, it will be necessary to repeat, though in more detail, what has been mentioned before, in several reports to the Government of India by the late Major-general Broome, in the financial exposition of the Hon. Sir Richard Temple in 1869, and, lastly and more fully, in the statement of Major-general the Hon. H. W. Norman to the Council of the Governor-general of India in the present year. Accordingly, a detailed list is subjoined in the enclosure B of the items of increased charge between the years 1862-63 and 1871-72, amounting to £2,396,830, or over two and one-third millions sterling.

* It will be observed that these figures correspond with the reductions between 1862-63 and 1871-72, detailed in the enclosure A of this note.

A consideration of that list, in connection with the enclosure A, will show that the whole case really stands thus:—

The gross expenditure, in England and in India, on account of the Indian Army in 1862-63 was	£14,998,373
The reductions between 1862-63 and 1871-72 (enclosure A) ...	1,405,790
Except for disturbing causes, the expenditure would now be ...	£13,592,583
But new sources of expenditure have arisen (enclosure B) ...	2,396,830
Making a total of	£15,989,413
The Army Estimates for 1871-72 amount to	15,984,000

11. It will be seen, then, that the savings by reduction of strength, and economy in other directions, have been counteracted by the effect of various measures for improving the condition of the army, and by a general rise in prices attesting the growing prosperity of the country. As remarked by Major-general Broome in one of his latest reports:—"As troops must be fed, housed, clothed, and served at the prevailing rates of the day, no amount of administrative supervision or executive management can prevent additional expenditure, as compared with previous standards, when such standards have been superseded or rendered obsolete by the altered circumstances of the country."

12. It being of importance that Sir George Balfour's representations in the Times should be promptly met, this note is submitted in anticipation of the detailed review of the military expenditure for the past ten years now in course of preparation for the Government of India. The review may indicate some means of saving; but it will show also that in the whole range of Indian military expenditure, only a few grants, aggregating about five millions sterling, are likely to afford scope for retrenchment, and that out of this sum it will be impossible to extract a saving of three millions. G. W. KELLNER, on Special Duty.

THE OUTRAM STATUE.

On Thursday last the statue of Sir James Outram, the Indian warrior and statesman, was unveiled in its place on the Thames Embankment, with some slight ceremonial, in which Lord Halifax took the principal part. There were present the Chancellor of the Exchequer, General Sir G. Pollock, General Malcolm, Lady and Miss Havelock, Sir Mordaunt Wells, Sir P. Martin, Sir J. Kaye, Sir F. Outram, General Downing, General Sir W. Wyllie, Colonel French, Colonel Holland, Mr. A. Kinnaird, M.P., &c. The statue, which is by Noble, is a little to the west of the Charing-cross railway bridge, and faces the river. It is of colossal size, twelve feet high, cast in the best bronze. The pedestal is of Aberdeen granite, about nineteen feet high and fourteen feet square at the base. The upper part of the pedestal is polished. At each angle of the square on which it rests are Indian trophies. The statue is simple in its disposition. The right hand rests on the sword. The chest, round which is a scarf, is thrown forward, and seems full of manly strength. Behind, at his feet, are a helmet and cannon. When the statue had been unveiled,

Lord Halifax ascended the grass mound on which it stands and addressed a few words to the people, who by this time had collected round the memorial. He said that, in the absence of the Secretary of State to India, the Committee of the Outram Testimonial had done him the honour of requesting him to take the chief part in the unveiling of the statue of Sir J. Outram. He had great pleasure in complying with their desire, not only from the position which he once held in regard to India, but from the sincere respect and regard in which he held the memory of Sir J. Outram. The more intimate one was with the history of India the more marvellous must that history appear from its early beginning under a commercial company to its present gigantic proportions. Marvellous must seem the succession of able men by whose ability and energy it was raised to its present condition, and amongst those men there was no brighter or nobler specimen than Outram. (Loud cheers.) In whatever light he was regarded—warrior, diplomatist, statesman, or governor—he distingnished himself in all. Having gone out to India without any special claims or favour, he soon became distinguished by his talents and ability. He was employed against the wild tribes of Bheels, where he showed all those characteristics that distinguished him in future life. Some he conquered, all he conciliated, and then led against others whom he added to the tranquil subjects of the Indian Empire. He rendered most signal services in Afghanistan under Lord Keane and Sir T. Willshire. He was next employed in Sind, and when he thought the Ameers of that country were unduly oppressed, he did not hesitate to come forward to vindicate their rights. (Hear, hear.) He was then employed as Resident at Sattara, from which place he came home. When he was President of the Board of Control, he thought it advisable that Sir James Outram should not remain unemployed, and he sent him out to India with the highest recommendations to Lord Dalhousie. Upon Sir James Outram fell the, to him, disagreeable task of annexing Oudh, but he accomplished it well. His health failed, but he seemed to recover it when placed at the head of the Persian expedition, which he accomplished with success. That expedition was hardly over when his services were again required to quell the Indian Mutiny. He was sent to join Havelock in the relief of Lucknow. As senior officer he was entitled to take supreme command of the force, but his chivalrous nature determined him not to deprive Havelock of the honour, and he served as a volunteer under his junior. (Cheers.) After the relief of Lucknow, Sir J. Outram was engaged for some time as Commissioner in Oudh, and contributed largely to the pacification of that kingdon. He finally returned to this country in broken-down health and shattered constitution, to the approbation and the honours of his countrymen. (Loud cheers.) He was humane, beloved by the natives, and advocated their claims consistently with the true interests of the Empire. He united all the clements of the civil and military services. He deserved the epithet by which he was characterised as "the Bayard of the Indian Army, without fear and without reproach." He deserved the character given to himin an address presented to him on his return. It was by such men as James Outram our Indian Empire had been obtained, and it is by such men it must be preserved to this country.

At the conclusion of his speech the noble lord was very loudly cheered.

Accompanied by most of those who were directly connected with the ceremony, Lord Halifax then proceeded to the Westminster Palace Hotel, where a dejeuner in honour of the occasion was given. Sir John Kaye presided, having on his right the Dowager Lady Havelock, and on his left Sir Francis Outram, only son of the General.

In the course of the speeches which followed the dejeuner reference was made to the facts that Lord Halifax, when at the India Office, had moved in Council that a public funeral be voted to Sir James Outram, and afterwards that a mural monument be erected in Westminster Abbey.

Lord Halifax, in returning thanks for his health, said that in his time he had filled a great many offices, but he looked back with most pleasure to his connection with the India Office. All through life he had worked hard himself, and expected others to do so; but he had never made a call, however severe, upon the Indian branch of the Civil Service to which they had not heartily responded and striven to give effect to his wishes.

Sir F. Outram gave expression to the natural feelings of pride and gratification shared by his mother and himself at the events of the day; and Sir H. Rawlinson made acknowledgment of the great exertions of Sir John Kaye in carrying the matter to so successful an issue.

The absence of Mr. Noble, the sculptor, was regretted; he was obliged, however, to attend a meeting at Liverpool in connection with a monument to the late Lord Derby.

Miscellaneous.

Export of Bullion.—By the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company.—From Southampton, per Poonah, Aug. 5:—Malta, gold, £47,000; silver, £3,000; Alexandria, gold, £850; Ceylon, gold, £320; Madras, gold, £3,426. Per Massilia, Aug. 12: Bombay, gold, £800; silver, £5,000.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were at the average rate 1s. 10$\frac{1}{2}$d. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10$\frac{1}{2}$d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Bombay at 1s. 10$\frac{7}{8}$d. will receive about 32 per cent. There were no tenders for Madras.

Indian Reliefs.—Nothing is of course arranged with respect to the Indian reliefs for the season 1872-73, but we have it on good authority that the 20th Hussars, a brigade of artillery, the 3rd batt. 60th Rifles, 2nd batt. 10th Regiment, 2nd batt. 24th Regiment, 96th Regiment, and 105th Light Infantry will be brought home; the 10th Hussars, a brigade of Artillery, the 80th Regiment, 2nd batt. of the Buffs, 43rd Light Infantry, 40th Regiment, and 67th Regiment going out.—Army and Navy Gazette.

Commercial.—With regard to an impression that the approaching issue of 75,000,000 dols. United States Bonds may have some important influence on the London Money Market, it is stated that the proposed operation will amount simply to a conversion, as the entire proceeds of the 5 per Cent. Loan will be allowed to the paying off of 5-20 Bonds, while, in addition to this, the Treasury is prepared to use a large sum from its gold reserve for the same purpose. Holders of the 5-20 6 per Cent. Bonds will be offered to exchange into 5 per Cent. Bonds, bond for bond, and all payments to the new loan on the part of the public will be able to be made either in cash or in any of the 5-20 Bonds that may be drawn for payment, or in matured coupons of the United States Government.

Young Soldiers.—Referring to a paragraph which appeared in a recently received copy of the Deccan Herald on the subject of the young soldiers composing the 56th Regiment at Poonah, the Globe expresses surprise "that the Government has not yet begun to act upon the recent recommendations made by medical authorities and others against the practice of sending out young troops to India." Our contemporary is not, perhaps, aware that the 56th Regiment embarked for India some six months before Lord Sandhurst made his able speech in the Lords in condemnation of Mr. Cardwell's "stripling system." To the credit of the Secretary of State for War, be it said, he has since taken the advice of those better versed in things military than himself, and, although the 56th went out with an unusually large number of growing lads in its ranks, our contemporary's mind will be eased when we assure him that the error is not to be repeated, and that the 44th, 70th, 54th, and 68th, embarking during the winter, will take out with them very few, if any, youths under twenty.—Army and Navy Gazette.

The Famine and Cholera in Persia.—A telegram received on August 5 by the Galata Board of Health from Tabreez reports the rapid spread of cholera in that city. Last week the deaths from the epidemic averaged 200 a day, and when the telegram was despatched on Friday the inhabitants were flying in thousands to the villages towards Oorumian and Khoi. The intelligence also at Tabreez at the same date was that the famine in the southern provinces, instead of abating, was "worse than ever." Mr. Alison's report to the contrary must, therefore, be received sous benefice d'inventaire. Since the above appeared in our daily issue of Monday we have been favoured with the following extract from a private letter from Teheran by the last Tatar, more than confirming the worst news previously received:—"The famine in the southern provinces has been more terrible than we have been led to believe. In Khorassan one-third of the whole population has perished from starvation, and at Ispahan no less than 27,000 souls have succumbed to it. More than this, in the province of Mazanderan, where rice is the staple of life, the prevailing drought has dried up the swamps and caused a complete failure of the rice crop, while the cattle plague has destroyed the greater part of the oxen and buffaloes. A great curse has, in fact, weighed over Persia ever since the Shah's pilgrimage to Kerbela. Cholera, typhus, small-pox, famine, and cattle plague have combined to ruin the country."—Levant Herald.

PRIZE FOR A MILITARY ESSAY.—The Duke of Wellington, desiring to promote professional knowledge and the expression of original ideas among officers of the army, proposes, with the concurrence of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, to give £100 as a prize for the best military essay, on the following conditions:—1. Subject of the essay,—"The system of field manœuvres best adapted for enabling our troops to meet a continental army." This subject will be treated under the following heads:—(a) Mode of forming the columns of march when a collision with the enemy may be expected. (b) Mode of covering an army on the march, or in position, in order to conceal its movements and to obtain information of those of the enemy. (c) Mode of forming, combining, and employing the different arms for attacking an enemy in position. (d) Mode of combining and employing the different arms for receiving the attack of an enemy. 2. Tactics have lately undergone, and may be expected to undergo, important modifications. The subject, therefore, opens a wide field for the display both of acquired knowledge and of original views. All theories or suggestions should be supported by argument, and, as far as possible, by precedents of recent warfare. Where general principles are laid down, the modifications which circumstances, such as different topographical conditions, may cause should be explained. 3. No essay is to exceed in extent 100 printed pages of the Queen's Regulations. 4. The competitors to be officers on full pay or half-pay of her Majesty's army, without restriction as to rank. 5. The essays to be forwarded before March 1 next to Colonel E. B. Hamley, C.B., Commandant of the Staff College, who has, at the Duke of Wellington's request, undertaken to decide among the competitors. Each essay will be distinguished by a number and a motto, inscribed by its writer, who will also communicate the number and motto, together with his name, to the Duke of Wellington, at Apsley House, Piccadilly, to whom alone they will be known until the prize is awarded. 6. Arrangements will be made for the publication (if it be deemed desirable) of the prize essay, for the benefit of the writer, and his name will also be published.

SOCIAL REFORM IN INDIA.—At a meeting of the executive of the United Kingdom Alliance, held in Manchester on August 15, to hear an address from Babu Sasipada Banerjee on "Social Reform in India" the Babu said the temperance movement was the first movement of reformation in the town in which he lived. They began with the temperance movement, and now they had all the other institutions which were necessary for the improvement of a nation. They had, after much exertion, established female schools, but there was a very strong prejudice against female education. "Orthodox" people would not, on any account, send their girls to school. They said girls had not to work, and therefore they did not need education. That was not all. Superstition was brought forward. They seemed to believe that by educating their girls they would make them widows. He could not make out what education had to do with the lives of husbands. Nevertheless it was a fact, and on no account would they condescend to send their girls to school. Again, the horrid system of early marriages in India was against the beneficial working of those schools that were already established. Girls got married at five, six, seven, eight, and nine years, and when they reached ten or eleven they were taken away from school, so that there could be no substantial result. Hindoo reformers of the present day thought very cautiously as to whether society would prosper by Hindoo women being freely introduced. He thought it was a mistake—a weakness on the part of the reformers to take the matter in that light. If education were to be given to Hindoo women, liberty must first be given, for what could education do without liberty? Englishmen in India did not treat Hindoos as their equals, but would always keep a wide space between them, and as long as that was the case and as long as educated Hindoos would not come over to England, it was not to be expected they would get rid of their prejudice against the English home, and against the liberty of English ladies. Amongst the social evils of the country was the custom of families living together in one house. In fact, a Hindoo house was not a house, but a village—for sixty and seventy people frequently lived in one house. His object in coming to this country was to study English institutions, and better to understand the English home, and if possible to carry home with him the sympathy of England in his work in India. Manchester was known to India in all its towns and villages where its prints were bought and worn; and it was not, he hoped, too much for this town to send its sympathy to India along with its goods.

PRUSSIAN MANŒUVRES.—A paper by Lieut.-Colonel Bray, 4th (King's Own) Regiment, on "The Prussian Mode of Conducting Large Manœuvres," is about to be published at the Royal Artillery Institution for the information of the regiment, and as it is upon the reports of this officer, among others, that the contemplated peace campaign next month will be based, his experiences will no doubt be valuable and interesting. He says that he accompanied Major-General Sir Charles Staveley and three other officers to Berlin in 1868, for the purpose of witnessing the field manœuvres of the Prussian army, and that he was much impressed with the high training of the troops and the practical teaching afforded by the apparent reality of their sham battles. The troops marched out in war-service order and without tents. Every officer, from general to lieutenant, carried a map of the surrounding country, which he consulted at every halt, and every one of them had a field-glass. A printed "general idea" of the day's work was also freely distributed. The opposing forces were placed miles apart and quite out of sight of each other. Fields under cultivation were marked by poles and bunches of straw, and were avoided if possible; but the troops passed where they pleased, and at the end of the day the damage done was assessed by a board of officers and civilians and paid by the Government. Early each morning cavalry outposts were spread out in front to feel for the enemy, and nothing could escape the eyes and ears of the army, the information being obtained, as in the field, at the risk of capture. There were also two or three dragoons with every infantry picket, and altogether the manner in which the outpost duty was performed gave the English officers a new idea of the value of cavalry. Colonel Bray explains the system of umpires adopted by the Prussians in their mimic engagements, and gives a few simple rules by which they and the troops are guided. The umpires, distinguished by a white band, scatter themselves along the front between the contending armies, and decide when a position has been carried, whether a battery has been fairly captured, whether a cavalry charge has been effective, and so on, besides preventing, by their interposition, many of the absurdities which generally arise in sham fights for want of a controlling power. At the end of the day the beaten army had to march some miles further on, to be ready for the next day's manœuvres. He found that the Control Department did its work well, country carts being pressed into the transport service, as they would be in actual war. In fact, he says, the Prussian army has only been carrying out in France what they have been practising for years past at home, and he attributes their late success to four principal causes—better organisation, perfect outpost duty, practice of great manœuvres every year on an intelligent and scientific system, and superior application of artillery fire.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, Aug. 14.—BREECHLOADERS FOR INDIA.—Colonel NORTH, on the motion for going into committee of supply, rose for the purpose of calling the attention of the House to Return No. 306 lately issued to members, and relating to the distribution of breechloaders among our Indian forces. He had moved for the return on the 20th of February, and it was laid upon the table of the House on the 16th of June. On the 28th of July his right hon. friend opposite had been asked whether it was the case that several regiments in India were still armed with the old muzzle-loader, and whether some of the recruits from England who had been instructed at home in the breech-loading exercise had to learn the muzzle-loading exercise. The right hon. gentleman stated that it was true that in some few instances muzzle-loaders were still employed. During the recess, however, he had learnt that the number was very great, and that the latter statement contained in the question was perfectly true. To his great astonishment this return, when presented, showed that there were no less than thirty-one regiments now serving in India armed with muzzle-loaders, and that arms of this description were issued to the 2nd battalion of the 19th regiment and the 96th regiment in 1869, and to the 2nd battalion of the 1st Royal Regiment last year. In the case of the 76th regiment, Snider arms were ready for issue, but no ammunition was available, and probably if the troops were called into action Snider ammunition would be served to the muzzle-loading troops and muzzle-loading ammunition to those who were armed with Sniders. The 10th Regiment was stationed at Madras, and was armed with Sniders, having probably secured all the breach-loading ammunition in the Presidency, as the 76th, also stationed in Madras, could obtain none. On the 23rd of February, a very few days after he had moved for the return, the noble lord, the Under-Secretary of State for War, replying to a question asked in the House of Lords, said that anything approaching the conclusion that our regular forces were not armed with breech-loaders was entirely contrary to the facts of the case. After that statement of his noble friend, he could scarcely believe his eyes when he found from this return that two regiments of cavalry and twenty-nine of infantry were still without breechloaders. (Hear, hear.) Some of the arms, too, went back almost to the time of the Crimea. The 76th, for instance, received theirs in 1859, as did also the 10th. The 108th received theirs in 1857, 1864, 1865, and 1866. He desired, therefore, to ask what her Majesty's Government had done since the 28th of July, 1870, when the question put to his right hon. friend must have drawn the attention of the Government to this matter. Considering the money that was expended on our army such a state of things ought to be impossible. (Hear, hear.) He asked whether the men forming these regiments were properly armed, and ready for any expedition they might be called on to serve in.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said the answer given by Lord Northbrook was perfectly correct, but he referred to the troops at home, not the Indian troops. As regards India he stated that on the 1st of October, 1870, there were thirty-two out of fifty regiments in India still armed with muzzleloaders, but since that, sufficient breech-loaders had been supplied to arm every man in every European regiment in India.—Colonel North stated that the returns were dated March 24, April 12, and April 26, 1871.—Mr. Grant Duff said the returns were perfectly correct at the time they were issued.—Sir J. Hay stated, according to a return laid on the table by the Secretary of State for War, there were 54,000 men then unarmed with the Snider rifle. Could the Secretary for War say that 54,000 Sniders had been sent out since that return was made?—Sir H. Storks was understood to say they had.—Mr. Eastwick wished to know whether they had also been served out.—Mr. Grant Duff said he could not answer that question, but he had no doubt they were served.

Supersession of Colonels.—Colonel Anson rose to call the attention of the House to the supersession of the colonels of the English army by those of the Indian army—a subject which he said had been the topic of much discussion and correspondence and of several reports, but nothing had yet been done. In the first session of the present Parliament the Secretary for War appointed a committee, who were limited to making a proposal which would not impose any expense upon either this country or India. They reported that the case was one of great injustice to the officers of the English army, and that something ought to be done, whereupon a correspondence arose between the India Office and the War Office. Last session he obtained the appointment of a committee to inquire into the subject, and after two or three sittings they reported (with only one dissentient) that supersession should at once cease. That report was presented at the end of the session, and as soon as Parliament was prorogued there was further correspondence relative to the legality of that recommendation. Lord Cairns, Vice-Chancellor James, and Baron Bramwell were appointed to inquire, and they reported that it was a breach of a Parliamentary guarantee that had been given, but they agreed that the case was one of great injustice, and that either a stop should be put to the practice or that some compensation should be given. After that report was made further correspondence passed between the Secretary for War and the Secretary for India, and the result was an agreement that the supersession complained of should cease when the staff corps promotion came into play, but the Duke of Argyll stipulated that the rate of promotion should be reduced from twenty-three to nineteen per annum, which was an increased injustice to the British army officers. He resolved to oppose the Bill which was to be brought forward to carry out that arrangement, as it did not carry out the report of his committee. Two reports had recommended that forty five major-generals should be appointed from the list of officers who had been superseded. That portion of the report of his committee was warmly suported by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was opposed to the second portion, which he did not insist upon; but now he found that he could not get either, although there had been a universal expression of opinion that this was a case of hardship. He hoped the Government would accede to his motion; if they did not, and as it was impossible for him to obtain any redress from the House at the present period of the session, he should bring the subject forward again next year. In this matter the India Office had defended the rights and privileges of the officers of that department, and he wished that the War Office had acted in a similar manner. He did not think that the House ought to grudge any expenditure that might be necessary to do justice to the officers whose cause he advocated. The hon. and gallant gentleman concluded by moving the following resolution:—"That the report of the War Office Committee, dated the 9th day of January, 1869, be adopted, in order to mitigate the hardships inflicted on the British colonels."—The Chancellor of the Exchequer said high legal authorities, to which he was bound to bow, had declared that the course complained of by the hon. and gallant gentleman was in complete accordance with the guarantee received by the Indian officers in 1858, when the East India Company was abolished and its army placed under the Crown. The opinion of those learned judges would have been more satisfactory to his mind had they adverted to a subsequent stage of the affair—that was, to what happened in 1860, when the two armies were amalgamated, the two Governments having been amalgamated in 1858, because it was quite evident to any one that principles that were laid down for portions of the Indian army when it was a separate army from the Queen's army, though it belonged to the Queen, would not necessarily apply when the two armies were absolutely amalgamated and made one army. That being the state of the case, it became absolutely impossible, at least without an Act of Parliament, to give effect to the report of the committee of last year, and the question that remained was whether the Government, under these circumstances, having the report of the committee, but not having legal power to give effect to it, had made a fair and reasonable offer to the hon. and gallant gentleman and those whom he represented. He believed a rule had been laid down to the effect that, when eight or more officers had been promoted, the Staff Corps would be carried over to the English side and would become part of the English service, the Indian officers belonging to the regiments of cavalry and infantry continuing still to enjoy the benefits of Indian promotion. He should have been very glad if he could have obtained a removal of the differences between these two services, so that the English and Indian officers should obtain promotion according to the time of their service, but that having been ruled to be contrary to the guarantee of 1858, the question was what terms he could make for the English army. He thought that since January last four out of the eight officers of the Staff Corps on whose promotion the Indian Government insisted had been already provided for, so that only four officers now stood between us and the time when the Staff Corps would be carried over to the English side. If the plan proposed by the Government had been carried out there would be, perhaps, in about six months not merely an amalgamation of the Staff officers corps of the Indian service; that plan would apply not only to the Staff officers, but to the whole of the officers in the Indian army. The hon. and gallant gentleman repudiated the proposal of the Government that as soon as the remaining four colonels, out of the eight Staff officers, were made generals, the whole of the two services should be entirely amalgamated, so that there should be perfect equality and no difference between them, and he asked him instead to take the course which he repudiated in the committee, and which he thought the House would repudiate. The hon. and gallant gentleman asked him to agree to the recommendation of Colonel Egerton's Committee, that forty-five generals should be created, at an expense of about £12,000, in order to satisfy some forty-five out of 250 or 270 officers who had been superseded, and that the Government should go back to the year 1854 and re-arrange the list of generals according to the services of the different colonels who were promoted to be generals. The latter of these propositions would bring the whole army into confusion; as to the former of those propositions, it was in effect this—that a burden of £12,000 should be imposed upon the taxpayers in order to create forty-five new major-generals, not because they were wanted for the public service, but because the hon. and gallant gentleman was not disposed to accept a proposal as fair as it was possible for the Government to make it.—Sir C. Wingfield, speaking in the name of the taxpayers, had no objection to the charge for an immediate promotion of forty-five of these officers to the rank of general, instead of the gradual promotion to which they were entitled, provided that charge were borne by the Imperial Exchequer.—After a few words from Colonel North in support of the motion, Colonel Anson withdrew it.

Post-office Orders for India.—Mr. Monsell, in reply to Mr. Figgins, said it had been the desire of the Post-office to extend the money-order system not only to the Eastern Presidencies, but to India generally. Some difficulties were raised, however, by the Indian Government as to the terms of the arrangement, but about nine months ago it was supposed that those difficulties had been got over. Accordingly, a despatch was sent to India with an intimation that the arrangement would be immediately carried out if a reply was received by telegraph. From that time to the present no communication on the subject had been received from the Indian Government.—The House then went into committee of supply on the Army Estimates, which were completed at a late hour.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE BILL.

The Times remarks that without altering the powers of the Judicial Committee or changing its composition, except by adding certain paid judges, the Bill passed on Wednesday ought at least to sweep away the mass of business pardonably delayed, and prevent the recurrence of such a discredit to the supreme appellate tribunal of the empire. We have now fairly mastered the discovery, which is not, in truth, far to seek, that unpaid work is always untrustworthy work. It appears, however, that the Government have not yet frankly accepted the kindred lesson that underpaid work is hardly worth the purchasing. To save a thousand a year, or thereabout, the success of an important experiment is imperilled, and the choice of the Government is narrowed so much that we cannot see how the best men are to be got for these new places. Yet it can hardly be denied that we require the best men we can find. It is certainly not too much to say that the judges of the Judicial Committee should be fully equal in ability, erudition, and professional standing to the Vice-Chancellors of our Equity Courts or the Puisne Judges of our Common Law Courts. It is not only that the questions which come on appeal before the Judicial Committee are as intricate and various as any that arise either at equity or common law, but that from the judges who will have to deal with these questions there is required a range of legal knowledge far wider than we look for in any chancery or common lawyer, however eminent. It may almost be said that for the work of the Judicial Committee we need jurists of a peculiar type, with a special capacity for assimilating varying legal systems and administering all with substantial justice. Is it so easy to find men who can do this sort of work efficiently that the Government think they can be got on cheaper terms than a Vice-Chancellor or a Puisne Judge?

SIR JAMES OUTRAM.

The Times, noticing the fact that a statue of Sir James Outram was to be unveiled on the Thames Embankment, says no man better deserved this conspicuous, though slight, commemoration. His career was peculiarly brilliant; but, as he himself delighted to insist, it was but a brilliant illustration of ordinary English work and English character in India. Had such work been done in Europe or such a fame been gained among comrades and subordinates, a peerage would have been deemed an inadequate acknowledgment. As with his fellows, however, in India, his achievements were all performed in the modest discharge of ordinary duty. There are political functions among them, but no political ambitions such as excite European society. Outram was proud to be a servant of the Company, and most Indian commanders have been men of modest origin, single aims, and simple expectations. A great task is laid on them, and they fulfil it to the uttermost, revealing, under pressure of circumstances, qualities which are an honour to our race and our country. There is still no lack in India of either the energy, the ability, or the justice which animated Outram, though they may rarely be fused into such a unique and chivalrous mould. That is, perhaps, the chief of the many services he has rendered to his country and his profession. He has furnished an example, to be loved as well as to be admired, of all the qualities which combine to make the English Empire possible and useful. He possessed the spark of fire which renders them animated, and makes them live alike in history and in the present.

The Telegraph maintains that whoever else among Englishmen may be adjudged worthy of a statue upon the commanding site of the Thames Embankment, James Outram most assuredly deserved that which was on Thursday last unveiled there. There is no more precious possession for a State than the memory of its distinguished sons—men who have been virtuous as well as illustrious. Their work does not end with their lives; the country which claims them is enriched in the eyes of all the world by their reputation, while the lesson of their career impresses a thousand silent students, and thus spreads throughout their native land the influence of their characters. James Outram was emphatically one of those natures which make up the moral grandeur of an empire. Valour is common enough where English blood runs; but when Britons look at Mr. Noble's admirable presentment of Outram, let them envy and emulate his special though chief claims to renown—the pity, the purity, the justice, and the courtesy of this man, who, known or unknown, would have equally lived and died a hero and a Christian knight.

The Pall Mall Gazette observes that the interest excited by the unveiling of the statue of Sir James Outram proves how deep is the national sentiment with respect to all that is truly noble and heroic. Many years have elapsed since this great soldier-statesman passed away from among us, utterly worn out and exhausted by the constant strain upon his energies made by the demands of the public service. But the lapse of years has caused no diminution of the interest taken in this deferred commemoration. The most distinguished members of the Indian civil and military services met together to do honour to a man who will ever be a conspicuous figure in the historical portraiture of India. The oration delivered by Lord Halifax was remarkable alike for the good taste and fine sentiment which ran through it, and for the historical accuracy and the power of compression which delivered a copious biography in a quarter of an hour. Among all the failures and disappointments which in these days we are doomed to encounter, it is something to fall back upon a reality of the true heroic type. In Outram—either as lieutenant, captain, field officer or "General Sir James"—we had a man who did the right thing at the right time. Years may pass, new interests may be excited, but the national mind will always cling fast to the thought that true heroic action is something not to be forgotten. We may perhaps never see again in India such men as Sir James Outram and Sir Henry Lawrence; but there is some consolation in the thought that there is still alive among us an intense appreciation of the good deeds done in that old "nursery of captains" which lies beyond the Indian seas.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 6 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

FOR INDIGESTION, STOMACH AND LIVER COMPLAINTS.—Persons suffering from any derangement of the liver, stomach, or the organs of digestion, should have recourse to Holloway's Pills, as there is no medicine known that acts on these particular complaints with such certain success. They strengthen the tone of the stomach, increase the appetite, purify the blood, and correct depraved secretions. In bowel complaints they remove their primary cause, and soon restore the patient to sound health. Nervous or sick headaches, and depression of spirits, may be speedily relieved by a course of these Pills. They are composed of rare balsams, without the admixture of a grain of mercury, or any noxious substance, and are as safe as they are efficacious.

£75,000,000 DOLLARS
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT FIVE PER CENT. FUNDED LOAN

(In Bonds Issued and Payable, Principal and Interest, in the United States of America).

Principal Redeemable at Par, after 1st May, 1881, in United States Gold Coin; Interest payable Quarterly, in United States Gold Coin; and both Principal and Interest exempt from Taxation, whether under Federal, State, Municipal, or Local Authority,

AS AUTHORISED BY ACTS OF CONGRESS, APPROVED JULY 14, 1870, AND JANUARY 20, 1871.

The proceeds of this operation are to be applied to the Redemption and Cancellation of United States Five-Twenty Bonds, as provided in said Acts.

Messrs. JAY COOKE, McCULLOCH, and CO. are prepared to receive OFFERS, either in exchange for FIVE-TWENTY BONDS, at present in circulation, or for cash, on account of the above-said 75,000,000 dols. FIVE per CENT. BONDS of the existing FUNDED LOAN of the UNITED STATES.

The amount of Bonds of the Five per Cent. Funded Loan, authorised by Congress, is 500,000,000 dols. Of this amount—

75,000,000 dols., or thereabouts, have been already placed in America,
50,000,000 dols. are reserved for the National Banks there,
75,000,000 dols. are now offered, and the remaining
300,000,000 dols., together with the Bonds bearing 4½ per and 4 per cent. interest, are reserved by the Secretary of the Treasury for future disposal.

Total 500,000,000 dols.

The Bonds, to bearer, with Coupons attached, are in denominations of 50 dols., 100 dols., 500 dols., and 1,000 dols. The Registered Bonds are in like amounts, with the addition of denominations of 5,000 dols. and 10,000 dols. Interest, payable quarterly, will commence from 1st November next, the first interest payment being February 1, 1872.

The Bonds may, at the option of the holder, be registered, and United States Treasury Cheques, for dividends thereon, will be sent from Washington to the registered address of the holder in any part of Europe, on the principle adopted by the Bank of England in paying the interest on British Consols. For the convenience of applicants, an Office of the United States Treasury will remain for some time in London, and will inscribe the Registered Bonds directly into the names of purchasers.

Applications for the above bonds, in exchange for existing Five-Twenty Bonds, will be effected on the following conditions in the accompanying form A.

Holders of Five-Twenty Bonds, bearing May and November interest Coupons, will retain the Coupon due 1st November next, and will receive in exchange Bonds of the Five per Cent. Funded Loan of equal amount, ex November Coupon.

Holders of Five-Twenty Bonds, bearing January and July interest Coupons, will be paid the interest from 1st July last to 1st November, at 6 per cent., or £2. 0s. 10d. per Bond of Five Hundred Dollars, and will receive in exchange Bonds of the Five per Cent. Funded Loan of equal amount, ex November Coupon.

A Deposit of 5 per Cent. will be required, which may be made in cash, or in any United States Government Security, which will be returned on effecting the exchange.

Applications for Bonds by Cash Payment will be received on following conditions in the accompanying Form B:—

		Per Bond of 500 dols.
Deposit on application	5 per cent., or	£5 12 6
Pymnt. on Dec. 1 next	86 per cent., or	96 15 0
	91 per cent. (= ex 4s. 6d. per dol.)=	£102 7 6
Plus one month's interest at 5 per cent., being that accrued from Nov. 1 to Dec. 1 (to be paid in sterling) =	... ...	0 8 8
	Total Cash	£102 16 2

Such United States Government Bonds as shall have been notified for redemption, and matured United States Government Gold Coupons will be received as Cash, dollar for dollar, except that the month's accrued interest must be paid in Sterling as above-said. The Deposit may be temporarily made in any United States Government Security.

Provisional Receipts (Scrip) will be given for the deposit. The Bonds of the Funded Loan (which are issued in the United States) will be furnished in London at an early date, against corresponding amount of Five-Twenty Bonds or payment in full. Cash Payment in full may be made on August 31 only, under discount, at Bank of England rate.

Should the application for Bonds not be complied with, the Deposit of the Applicant will be returned forthwith.

Non-payment of the balance due will render the deposit liable to forfeiture.

Lists will be opened in London, and in the principal Cities on the Continent, on Tuesday, the 22nd inst., and will be closed on or before Thursday, the 24th inst.

Applications will be received in London on the accompanying Forms which may be obtained at the Banking House of Messrs. Jay Cooke, McCulloch, and Co.

A Bond and the Acts of Congress above referred to, may be inspected at the Office of Messrs. W. and H. P. Sharp, 92, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 1; Agra and Madras, July 30; Calcutta, July 29.

The rainfall in Bombay appears so far to have been unusually scanty, only twenty-five inches having fallen by the end of July out of the normal average of eighty inches for the whole season. At Poonah the rain-guages record only about eighteen inches. Instead of the usual steady downpour of the monsoon, showers, relieved by frequent breaks of sunshine, have made the weather enjoyable for man at the expense, it is to be feared, of the crops by which he has to live. People were already looking forward to a late and poor harvest; but as the monsoon had still two months to blow, we may hope to hear of an early change for the better.

THERE is to be a cold-weather campaign against the Loshais after all; and it is, we learn, to be carried on under the supreme control of Lord Napier himself. With his plans for that end there will be no interference, so long, we presume, as he keeps within certain bounds of expense. We may therefore reasonably hope that whatever is to be done beyond Cachar this cold weather will at least be well done by the conqueror of King Theodore and his chosen lieutenants. That some decisive attempt must be made to deliver the rising province of Cachar from periodical inroads and their disturbing effects on its commercial growth, is a necessity beyond question, however widely opinions may differ as to the best way of making the attempt. As the process of retaliatory warfare seems to have found most favour with the Government, we can only hope that it will be applied with a thoroughness which may teach the Loshai tribes a lesson of good behaviour for the future. Nothing short of that will justify the proposed campaign as a movement in defence of the British frontier. It is no holiday task which Lord Napier has undertaken; but if his hands are left unfettered in all essential respects, we may reckon upon seeing it brought to a thoroughly successful issue.

WE are indebted to Mr. R. Carnac for the following copy of a telegram forwarded to the Secretary to the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, dated Nagpore, July 30, 1871:—

"Since my letter of the 19th inst. crop prospects have improved. Reports from Wurdah Valley and East Berar are favourable. In West Berar sufficient rain has fallen during the week. Mr. Dunlop reports—Prospects are now better, the young crops look well; they have got a fair though late start.

(Signed) "H. RIVETT-CARNAC, Cotton Commissioner."

Mr. Carnac is now on tour through the cotton districts, and hopes to furnish further information by the next mail.

THE Rajkoomar College, lately opened by Sir S. Fitzgerald for the benefit of the noble youth of Kattiawar, already counts among its pupils nearly all the young princes and noblemen of that province. Besides the countenance they had previously given to the new institution, by subscribing money for its foundation and sending their sons to gain knowledge within its walls, the chiefs and princes of Kattiawar have now come forward, at Colonel Anderson's prompting, with a fresh subscription of £18,000 for the complete endowment of the new College.

WE are glad to hear that the Bombay Government is at length bestirring itself to remove the scandal arising from the scant accommodation provided for insane patients in the Colaba Asylum. It proposes to build two new asylums, one in the Konkan and the other in the Dakhan, and so to alter the Colaba Asylum as to ensure separate rooms for male and female patients. All this it will do if it can only raise the needful funds. In Bombay opinion seems to set strongly against any waste of money on the present building, which is said to be utterly unfit for hospital use. A far healthier and roomier site has been pointed out at Worlee, a height sufficiently near Bombay, but not too near for the comfort of those who need retirement. There is a swamp at present at the foot of the hill, but its drainage appears to be an easy matter.

THE pleasant and popular station of Bangalore does not recommend itself just now as a good school for manners. We have lately seen how two young English officers got badly punished for invading a gentleman's compound after dark with intent to hurt somebody. And now we read of other officers of higher rank, who seem to have kicked and cuffed a harmless Government Surveyor in broad daylight on the very slightest provocation. It would appear as if these little ebullitions of British feeling are not so uncommon as quiet folk might desire; for Mr. Norris's assailants were fined by the Cantonment Magistrate no harder than five rupees each. The next time Mr. Norris feels thirsty on a race-course, we hope he will take care in what company and under what conditions he proceeds to quench his thirst.

PENDING the final sanction of the home authorities, the Indian Government has appointed Dr. Francis Day, of the Madras Medical Service, Inspector of Fisheries for India on a salary of Rs. 1,500 a month. His appointment is to be "experimental" up to 1874. Dr. Day is to begin work at once in the North-Western Provinces, whence he will proceed to the Punjab Frontier first; reserving for the cold weather his inspection of the various fisheries on the Bombay coast.

THE idea of separating the civil from the military branch of the Indian Medical Service appears at length to have hardened into a practical purpose. According to a Bombay paper the separation has already been determined. Every army surgeon is to make his election between the two careers, and those who elect for military service will be placed under Inspectors-general of the Royal Army, while the civil surgeons are to have their own chief appointed by the Indian Government. From this we gather that the first step has been taken to amalgamate the Indian Army surgeons with those of the Queen's Army. That may or may not be a change for the better; but the drawing of a sharp line between military and civil surgeons in India seems to us very like a change for the worse. Dr. Thom is named by the Bombay Gazette as likely to be placed at the head of the civil surgeons on the Bombay side.

The new Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has no idea of letting his subordinates go to sleep over their work. Not long ago he took the Revenue Board severely to task for the shortcomings in their last Report. It contained hardly anything that he wanted to know, and so he requested the Board to oblige him for the future with information of the proper kind. The Board in their reply complain that not much information can be given "without a careful enquiry into the statistics of each separate district," and that such enquiry would involve "a detailed examination of the past revenue history of each district from the time of the original settlement." The collection of the needful data would be all the harder, because in the permanently settled districts there is scarcely a collector who has been long enough in charge of his district to be "at all thoroughly acquainted with the details of its past and present physical and social condition," and because the district officers have had no experience in drawing up the kind of reports now demanded of them. Hitherto the Government has interfered so little with the landholders regarding the management of their estates, that Government officers have no means of readily obtaining the kind of detailed information which those who administer a ryotwar land-system can easily acquire. They have little in fact to work upon except mere "surmise and vaguely formed opinion" regarding the important questions of land-tenure and popular well-being. The Board in short appear to shelter themselves under the good old plea of "you're another." While the Government itself was sleeping, how could its servants be expected to keep awake?

Mr. Campbell however appears loath to admit the plea. He points out in his answer that down to 1833 at any rate the Government continued wide awake to the domestic affairs of Bengal, and that the very Code of 1793 provided for frequent interference with the new rights conceded by it to the zemindars. It was only after the separation of the North-Western Provinces that a school of officers sprang up, who laid down and acted upon the new theory of learning the zemindars and the people to "settle their affairs in the Courts." Mr. Campbell however is willing to ascribe a large share in the ignorance of which he complains to that frequent shifting of Collectors from one district to another, which has grown into a system by no means easy of amendment. "The necessity for devising a remedy for this evil has the Lieutenant-Governor's most anxious attention." To this end something may be done, he thinks, by the direct agency of his own government; but no permanent remedy will be secured without "some considerable change in the distribution of civil offices," a change which his Honour hopes in time to carry out, when his plans have been so fully matured as to need only the final sanction of the Supreme Government. That such a change will involve some addition to the salaries of district officers in Bengal, which being fixed at a time when they were neither magistrates nor general administrators, are far below those of similar officers elsewhere, Mr. Campbell readily allows; expressing also his fears lest the Financial Department may prove hard to convince of the need for further outlay to that end. Nevertheless he boldly pleads the cause of the district officer, and distinctly counsels the employment in their behalf of any savings which "can be effected in other quarters." Some people will be surprised to hear that any class of covenanted civilians are badly paid in proportion to their work; but Mr. Campbell is not one of those who shirk their duties, and we have his own authority for believing that "the duties now required of district officers in Bengal are to the full as onerous and important as in any other part of India." For our part we should like to see those duties shared between judicial and revenue officers; but this would probably involve an outlay yet larger than that recommended by Mr. Campbell.

The Indian Police are finding out the use of scientific means for unlawful ends. At Nagpore the other day one of them turned a galvanic battery on a woman suspected of complicity in a heavy case of theft. The subject of this new mode of torture got so frightened from the shock that she hurried home full of the idea that a devil possessed her, and forthwith took poison to save herself from some worse fate. She lived long enough however to attest her deposition, and her friends have entered a criminal suit against the police.

To judge from a telegram of August 23 from Calcutta, which appeared in the Times, some curious rumours have found their way into the Indian papers. Shere Ali had been murdered, and Abdurrahman Khan was advancing on Kabul. From the aforesaid telegram however it appears that up to the 13th August there had been no foundation for the rumours in question. Seeing that Shere Ali had been reconciled to his son Yakoob, it is to the last degree unlikely that Yakoob's cousin and former antagonist should have once more turned up so near the scene of his past reverses. No news can be deemed surprising that comes from Afghanistan, and to the people of that country bloodshed is a trifle; but the story of Shere Ali's murder may be dismissed, we fancy, as an idle invention.

According to the latest telegrams forty English regiments in India are now armed with Sniders, and fifty-nine Sepoy regiments with Enfields. Of regiments armed with breech-loaders there are now in India ten more, and of native regiments armed with Enfields twenty-eight more, than there were six months ago.

We suppose that a good many of our countrymen in India will have found something to their advantage in the new Warrant of Precedence. Henceforth at any rate the Uncovenanted Services will be brought into pleasanter social relations than before with their covenanted rivals. It is much gained for them when a Chief Engineer of the First-Class or a Director-General of Telegraphs is allowed to rank with Brigadiers, Major-Generals, and Civilians of twenty-eight years' standing. Colonels and Civilians of twenty years' standing are to be classed with Directors of Public Instruction, with Chief Engineers of the Second and Third Class, and with the Head of the Forest Department. In the Third Class, headed by Civilians of twelve years' standing and Lieutenant Colonels, we come upon the Educational Chiefs of the minor provinces, followed by officers of the second grade in the Education and Financial Departments, by local Conservators of Forests, Superintending Engineers of the First Class, Deputy-Directors of Post Office and Telegraphs, Postmasters-General, and so forth. In the Fourth Class Educational and Financial Officers of the third grade and Telegraph Officers of the second grade take rank with Majors and Civilians of eight years' standing. The next class includes Educational Officers of the fourth grade. There is a Sixth Class led off by Civilians of four years' standing and Subalterns, which appears to include the ruck of uncovenanted officers. In the matter of precedence therefore something has at last been done to redress the grievances of the uncovenanted services. The work of improvement however can hardly stop here. After the social gain must come a corresponding change in furlough and pension rules before the uncovenanted servant can appreciate the just dealing of his employers.

The rules lately published for the next examination of candidates for the Indian Civil Service are open to criticism in respect of the preference shown for mathematics over other branches of study at least as serviceable in their way. While only 500 marks are allowed for each of the three branches of English study and as many apiece for Sanskrit and Arabic, while 750 is the highest figure for each of the two classical languages, Greek and Latin, to mathematics alone are assigned as many as 1,250 marks, or 250 more than the number reserved for the examiner's second favourite, natural science. As the young men who will come up for examination are to be above seventeen and below twenty-one years of age, this arrangement looks very like a fresh bait thrown out to crammers and a new blow dealt at public schools. One would imagine that its authors had somehow got confused between the equipment needful for a civil engineer and that of a covenanted civil servant. For the former a due knowledge of mathematics and natural science may be indispensable; but why the first place should be reserved for these two studies in the opening competition for a service which demands no special knowledge of either, is a question for which we can find no sufficient answer. It may be good for the young civilian to develop a decided taste for scientific studies; but we always fancied that the opening examination was meant rather to test his general culture than his special knowledge of things not generally taught in English schools, nor absolutely essential for his future career. If special training for his future business were the one thing needful, some knowledge of Indian history and geography would be more to the purpose than all the mathematics and science in the world; and indeed in the subsequent examinations such knowledge is not overlooked, however low the rank assigned to it in comparison with law and even with Sanskrit. But if even Indian history is left out of the subjects named for the first examination, we may well ask why a place so prominent should be accorded to a study like mathematics, in which comparatively few English schoolboys have the will or the means to make much progress, and for which no place is reserved among the special subjects taken up by candidates during their two years' probation.

The Pall Mall Gazette has fallen into an amusing error in its satirical comments on the new examination rules. In pointing out the care which has been taken to "prevent the competition-wallahs having any knowledge of the country in which their official life is to be spent," it compares the 350 marks assigned to Indian history and Geography with the 750 at which the histories of Greece and Rome are severally valued. Unluckily for the comparison, and the whole effect of the satire suggested by it, the Gazette appears to have confounded the first examination with those that follow. In the former, as we said above, no place at all is reserved for Indian, nor any in the latter for Greek and Roman History. It may be a mistake to exclude Indian History from the list of preliminary studies, but our clever contemporary may find comfort in hearing that the selected candidates have nothing to do thenceforward with any other history than that of India. Another difference moreover is worth pointing out. At the first examination the candidate may, if he pleases, take up Greek and Roman History. At the subsequent examinations he must, in addition to Sanskrit, the Indian Vernaculars, Law, and Political Economy, display a sufficient knowledge of Indian History and Geography. Whether for the last-named studies 350 marks may seem too low an estimate, in comparison with the number assigned to Law and Sanskrit, is a separate question which our contemporary might do well to discuss.

A good deal of murmuring was to be heard in India at the result of Mr. O'Connor's suit against Major Parsons, the Simlah Magistrate, for wrongful imprisonment. Mr. O'Connor has been nonsuited with costs, a verdict which may, for all we know, have been good law, but amounts in fact to a great injustice, so far as the Simlah tradesman whom Major Parsons, acting as accuser and judge in one, imprisoned for an alleged breach of the conservancy laws is concerned. The non-official community are very sore at the sanction thus given to the violent proceedings of an official who had openly spoken of his victim as one "who ought to be put down with the strong hand."

It appears from an official return that on the 1st April, 1871, out of a total of 3,069 officers in the Indian army, 599 were unemployed, 488 on furlough, 1,347 in military employ, and 625 in civil and other departments. Of the unemployed, 185 are lieutenant-colonels, 112 majors, 266 captains, and 36 subalterns. What is to become of these expensive idlers?

The next mail from Bombay will not be due in London before Sunday night.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

RAILWAY PROGRESS IN INDIA.

From Mr. Juland Danvers's latest Report on Indian Railways, we learn that 557 miles of new railway were completed in the last and 211 miles in the early part of the current year; so that the whole railway mileage of India now amounts to 5,051 miles. The system of lines projected under Lord Dalhousie may thus be regarded as complete, now that all the presidency towns have been brought into a certain connection with each other, and with the capitals of the Punjab, Oudh, the Central, and the North-Western Provinces. If these trunk lines make no very great show on the railway map of India, they represent at any rate the continuous labour of twenty years, and an average yearly profit of about 3½ per cent. upon a total outlay of 70 millions, to which may be added the 18 millions expended on branch lines already opened or in course of construction up to the end of last March. Twenty-eight millions' worth of materials have been sent out from England for the use of these lines, which belong to nine companies, representing in all 51,887 shareholders, 5,367 bond or debenture holders, and 1,392 holders of debenture stock. Of the whole number thus interested in Indian railways, only 368 are natives of India; a fact for which no explanation is offered in the Report. Not one native appears on the share list of the Madras Railway, and only seven on that of the Great Southern. The East Indian, in which 126 natives have invested, has hitherto found most favour in native eyes, perhaps because it already pays more than the guaranteed five per cent. In the Great Indian Peninsula Line there are 97 and in the Bombay and Baroda 69 native investors.

On the mileage completed in the past year about £5,500,000 was expended. Twelve millions more will probably be required to complete the guaranteed lines already sanctioned. The probable cost of making 1,328 miles of State railway is reckoned at about twelve and one-third millions, of which five millions are assigned to the Indus Valley Railway of 500 miles from Mooltan to Kotree, and three millions for the line from Lahore to Peshawar, 270 miles long. Most of this outlay is still to incur, for the question of guages necessarily delayed the progress of the new State lines. With the actual settlement of this question in favour of a guage of three and a quarter feet, equal to the French metre, we may hope for some more tangible fruit erelong from the new arrangement, than a branch line of eight miles to Kangaum, and another of about the same length to Oomrawattee. On the Jhelum section of the proposed line from Lahore to Peshawar some time has been taken up in altering designs at first intended for the standard guage, but the line itself has been laid out as far as Jhelum, and the progress making with it this year is indicated by a probable outlay of £200,000. A State line of 236 miles from Agra by way of Jeypore and Sambhar to Ajmere in the heart of Rajpootana, and another line from Delhi through Rewaree and Ulwar to Jeypore, have already been surveyed, and work on the latter branch begun. For a broad guage line from Goolburga to Hydrabad through Secunderabad and Trimulgherry the Nizam of Hydrabad is to furnish the needful funds.

Last year proved bad for traffic in comparison with the mileage opened. The gross railway receipts were about £6,214,000, but the net revenue was only £2,846,000, or £340,000 in excess of the previous year. This left about £1,366,000 chargeable to the Indian revenue for guaranteed interest. There is still much room for reducing the working expenses on some of the lines, where they mount as high as seventy-one and seventy-nine per cent. of the gross receipts, while in others the proportion varies from forty-two to sixty per cent. On the Carnatic line it rose to nearly 113 per cent. At present the Bengal lines have the advantage of using cheaper fuel, but if the new coalfields at Chandah and on the Nerbudda prove equal to present expectations, the working expenses on the Bombay side will soon be largely reduced. Madras still depends on wood fuel, for a due supply of which at a moderate rate effective measures have been taken by the Forest Department. Similar measures have been carried out in the Punjab and Sindh. Wood where it is plentiful may be cheaper to work than imported coal; but in one respect, namely, its greater liability to produce fires through sparks from the engine, its use appears to be rather costly. In the first half of 1870 the Madras railway, which burns wood, had to pay Rs. 14,983 in compensation for damage done, against Rs. 9,529 paid by the East Indian, and Rs. 500 paid by the Great Indian Peninsula line, both of which burn coal. Of the fifty-three cases of fire reported for last year thirty-nine happened along the Sindh, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, and in 1869 it was the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway that caused the greatest number of fires.

Last year the number of trains that ran off the line was 258, a serious increase on the total for 1869, and more than double the figures for 1868. Of these mishaps only ten occurred on the largest and busiest line of all, the East Indian, while 182 befel the Great Indian Peninsula. Some of these accidents were caused by cattle straying on the lines and getting run over. As many as 314 beasts came last year in the way of the trains, and suffered for the faults of others or their own misfortune. It seems hard, as Mr. Danvers hints, to hold the railway companies answerable for damage done to or through such stray "cattle" as elephants, camels, bears, wild buffaloes, goats, and boars. Already they have spent between them at least a million in fencing 5,000 miles of railway; but what amount of money would suffice, we wonder, to keep an elephant or a buffalo off the rails? According to Mr. Danvers, it is a question whether the fences are not too good for the purpose, or whether it might not often be safest to dispense with them entirely. It appears moreover that cattle often stray into the railway lands with the cognisance if not with the encouragement of the herdsmen. Once over the fences, they find it no easy matter to return under the terror inspired by the sudden approach of a railway train. Now that the Government are making their own lines, they have begun to see good in the American system of leaving the lines unfenced through grazing lands, and the Legislative Council is already considering a Bill for levying fines on herdsmen or cattle-owners who let their cattle trespass on railway ground.

In respect of accidents to human life the returns for 1870 show well by comparison with almost any former year. Not more than 13 passengers were killed and 63 wounded, including eight lives lost by the fall of a bridge over the Cheyair river on the Madras Line. Of 113 railway servants killed, and 134 injured, 100 in the one case and 114 in the other suffered from their own fault. The number of persons who died in trains or at stations from heat-apoplexy, cholera, exhaustion, and so forth amounted to 114, not a very large figure for such a climate, but one which, under better arrangements for cooling the carriages, ought, we think, to be greatly reduced. Lord Mayo at any rate has been doing his best to mitigate the dangers of a railway ride in India during the hot weather, and we trust that future reports will show how successfully the railway companies have striven to realise his humane intentions. Of the 69 collisions reported last year no fewer than 46 occurred on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, as against six on the East Indian, which did twice the work of the other line. Of 45 other accidents 12 were due to defective rolling-stock, 16 to the neglect of gatemen or police, and 12 to the locomotive department.

The entire strength of the Indian railway service amounted last September to 69,233 persons, or about fifteen per mile, of whom 3,865 were Europeans to 1,707 East Indians; the remainder being natives. These were distributed among 477 stations, in proportions varying from 10 per mile on the Madras Railway to 18 per mile on the Great Indian Peninsula. Of the European servants 48 died to 11 East Indian; 456 Europeans and 183 East Indians left the service; and 317 Europeans and 62 East Indians were dismissed. Apart therefore from those who died, 20 per cent. of the European staff had to be replaced during the year. How much the efficiency of the service is weakened by changes so extensive, we need not say. In view of the greater costliness of an European staff, an attempt is now making to exchange European for native agency, and in Madras the movement has so far proved successful. This however is a question which craves wary walking in the interests of the railways themselves. Native agency is of course cheaper in respect of mere pay than European; but for all duties demanding presence of mind, great muscular energy, or continuous strain of mind or body, the Englishman will always claim with justice the first choice. "To train and educate natives to perform the duties now allotted to Europeans" is no doubt "an important object" on other than economical grounds. But whether on behalf of the millions who use the railways, or of the thousands who have invested money therein, we would ask the authorities to be very careful how they jeopard a larger number of human lives by the wholesale substitution of native pointsmen, guards, and drivers for Europeans of the same class.

One passage in Mr. Danvers's statement demands further explanation. It has been finally resolved, it seems, to adopt the new narrow guage for the 500 miles of railway between Mooltan and Kotree. This seems at first glance a questionable move, involving all the worst drawbacks attendant on a break of guage in the very midst of a line already in part constructed on a broader guage. We are told indeed that a net saving of at least £800 a mile will thus be effected, but is it really worth while to save about £400,000 on a line where, for strategic purposes, if for no other reason, a uniform guage seems specially desirable? If Kurrachee is destined to be the true base of military connection between England and Lahore, and a broad-guage line has already linked Kurrachee with Hydrabad and Mooltan with Lahore, we are at a loss to see the advantage of connecting Mooltan with Kotree by a line entailing a serious break of guage at either end. It is certainly better to have a narrow-guage line down the Indus Valley than none at all; but we should like to feel sure that the new line will prove equal to the safe and speedy carriage of all kinds of military stores on any emergency.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In 1844, when Outram held charge of the Mundlesir District, he instructed a young assistant magistrate on what foundation our Empire in India rests. History since that year has shown how much that wonderful Empire has been steadied or shaken by the financial policy of the Government.

During Sir Robert Peel's administration two schools of politicians in India were vehemently opposed to each other. The policy of the one school was to frighten the natives; that of the other was to make them love us.

The advocates of the former declared that our Empire in India depended on the sword alone; that we were encamped in the midst of a hostile nation, and must, therefore, rule the natives by fear and brute force.

This school ridiculed the idea of our ever being able to attach the affections of the natives to our rule. What native, argued they, can ever be induced to love either a Scotchman or an Englishman? We are perpetually offending the prejudices of the conquered race. We are constantly offending them by our ignorance of their language, habits, customs, and religion. We offend the Hindoos daily and in every corner of India by killing and eating the sacred cow. We offend the Mahommedans by eating pig and drinking wine, by our discourtesy and brusquerie. Mahommedans, Mahrattas, and Sikhs will never love those who have deprived them of empire.

What do the disciples of this school now say? I read in the Times of the 22nd inst. a letter from its Calcutta correspondent, showing how the bad manners of some of the young competition magistrates are alienating the goodwill of many influential natives, who as Municipal Councillors have hitherto been the best means of communication between the bumptious young district officer and the people whom he has been appointed to govern.

The disciples of the school who urge that we should seek to gain the friendship of the subject race have greatly dwindled in numbers and influence since the death of Henry Lawrence. That great statesman has left no successor, and the conquering race is fast forgetting the maxim that no government is worthy of the name which cannot sympathise with the wants and feelings of the nation.

Henry Lawrence well understood the value of the army; no one in India has done more for its wellbeing than he did; but he knew that the English Army if deserted by the people must perish. Even supposing that the English soldier could dispense with the camp followers, with the coolie bearers, with the water carriers, the tent pitchers, the sweepers, the bakers, &c., &c., still we must have an army of natives to supplement the English Army, which otherwise would speedily be worn out by outpost duties, by guarding military stores, treasure, and prisoners, and by keeping open communications. What could we do without loyal natives to keep open thousands of miles of railroad and telegraph wires, and to act as spies? Is it known in England that during the Mutiny we had much better information than the rebels had?

There is therefore some reason in cultivating the goodwill of the natives, as well as in relying on brute force, notwithstanding that the Sniders and English cannon may do wonders.

Outram knew this. He knew that good finance meant not only the supplying of the British Army with all the means and material of war, but also the imposition of taxes wisely.

Are the foolish Income-tax and excessive Salt-tax proofs of wise taxation?—Your obedient servant, T.

A CAUTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—That notorious impostor and agreeable rogue who has been living upon the credulity of simple-minded people for the last twenty-five years has again reappeared, as it were, from the clouds. I therefore consider it my duty, as a useful member of society, to call public attention to this barefaced swindler.

To the best of my recollection he has been taken up several times, and has been sometimes convicted, while he has at other times got off, as it were, by a legal loophole. He watches with wonderful care for the fresh arrival of Indian officers or their families. He sets to work until he discovers their whereabouts, and something of their antecedents. Then he attacks his victims.

He has cheated no less than nine ladies and gentlemen within my acquaintance. Some of them are widows encumbered with large families, who can ill afford the money obtained from them by this heartless swindler. Others only laugh at being bamboozled by this sharper.

A few days ago he called upon an Indian statesmen, well-known for his generosity, amiability, piety, and constant charity. This nobleman had heard a great many anecdotes of Master Hobson Jobson, and was fully expecting his advent. On my inquiring from him one day if he had received a visit from a philanthropist, who was about to establish a useful Institution for European Children in India, his reply was, "No, not yet." I replied, "Well, be prepared to give him a warm reception." Lo and behold! one fine morning this wolf in sheep's clothing made his appearance, and with his usual familiarity was about to make himself quite at home, "hand and glove" with the magnate, when the latter, who is naturally so mild and amiable that he would not hurt his greatest enemy, stepped back and quietly observed, "I have already heard all about you. There is no use in your trying any of your games with me." No sooner were the words uttered than off went the fellow, like an escaped thief.

Mr. Editor, the swindling of this landshark has caused many heartaches and annoyances. It would be an act of real benevolence to put up a printed notice in every steamer bound for England, something to the following effect:—"Caution to those who are going to London. Beware, beware of a dark man, aged about sixty-four, who will call to solicit subscriptions for an establishment in the hills." Such an advertisement would no doubt be a beacon to all.

A detective who arrested this rook for swindling an Indian officer in 1860 told me that he lives in a well-furnished and handsome house, and according to all that could be ascertained in the neighbourhood he must eke out a handsome income by this system of barefaced imposition.

An elderly woman, fat, fair, and forty, is generally seen in his company, like a pilot fish, and doubtless pockets some of the proceeds of his deceit, or picks some dainty morsels while he hunts his victims down.

Hoping that you will give this a prominent place in your next issue, and that other Indian papers will be ready to forewarn and forearm those about to return to fatherland after a lapse of many years,—I remain, yours obediently,

Aug. 26. Syed Abdollah.

INDIAN SALARIES.

The Indian Observer reminds us that when Mr. F. S. Chapman, in the debate on the last Budget, took exception to the high salaries paid to the Judges of the several High Courts in India, Mr. Fitzjames Stephen took up the cudgels in their behalf, and expounded very clearly the grounds on which this apparent extravagance was justified. After pointing out the essential difference between the employment of European and native agency, he explained that it was necessary to offer about three times a man's English income in order to induce him to come out. But, on the hand, he was very careful to mention that the reasons which existed for paying the large salaries which high European officials enjoy in this country, ceased at once to apply the moment a native was elevated to the same post. The difference was precisely that which existed between the use of an imported article and one of native manufacture. This is a very important truth, and we are extremely glad to see the Government at last recognising its importance. As for the native, of course he will cast it in our teeth that we write in the pride of civilian bureaucracy—that there is no difference between a native and a European, except in the colour of his skin, and that it is merely a race antipathy which supplies us with arguments like these for appropriating all the corn ourselves, and leaving him naught but chaff. With such a man we can only use the argumentum ad hominem, and ask him in reply if he would pass the best years of his life in service in England for the same amount of salary which he is permitted to draw here. This is the question to which he must give an honest answer, before he urges the equalisation of the terms of European and native service in this country. The fact is that by the admission of a few natives to the High Court, the Civil Service, and some other high posts, we have been encouraging them to expect to enjoy the same high salaries as are required to bring out competent men from England; and this expectation is permeating all ranks of native society. For this reason alone it is quite time that we reversed our policy. The exigencies of the country require that we should no longer encourage such extravagant views, and if they were really fitted for self-government, the native public, who form the bulk of the taxpayers, would be the first to insist upon such a policy of economy as the Government of India would now seem to have inaugurated.

AN EDUCATED ARMY.

The Delhi Gazette holds that until every officer is educated to the present Staff College standard he remains an officer but in name, and so long as the great mass of the men are but peasants who can shoulder arms and march in line, they are not soldiers such as the present age requires. Idleness reigns in our barracks, and devours officers and men alike; and with a profession immensely wide in its scope, and every year getting wider, we lie asleep and unmoved. The country has spared no expense in arming the men, no expense in keeping them in that way up to the age. But more she cannot do. The rest remains with her paid superintendents—the officers of her army. Until they work at their profession as the professional classes in England have to work, as their fathers and brothers have to work, and until every private soldier works as his people at home have to toil and labour, efficiency is as far off as ever. In one year a great and boastful army has passed away to prison in a foreign land, a fact that speaks a great lesson to all of us. With the abolition of the system of buying the command of men we must look forward to a great change, and it is to be hoped that the future officer will be a more professional soldier and a harder working man. The army is no idle lounge, a place from whence to get long leave, and do very little save a parade once a day; it is a difficult and laborious calling, particularly with our men, who are after all only ploughboys or untaught labourers, and who need careful and enlightened teaching, not in drill only, but in the numerous requirements which the individual soldier should be acquainted with. To-day he is a baby in the hands of his officers, and yet the same class in any other calling can be made anything of, good carpenters, or masons or tailors, good colonists. How is this done? Simply by teaching. England succeeds in everything but soldiering. She pays more for her army than any other departments, and yet she gets but a poor return for her money. And why? Because those whom she entrusts with the training and teaching of her soldiers have but little interest in their work, and, untaught themselves, cannot see the value of teaching their men. The abolition of a system by which one man can buy the power of commanding others will be a great thing. Let us hope a new day will dawn with its advent.

RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS.

The Englishman has drawn attention to the unscrupulous manner in which the funds of a wealthy Mohammedan endowment at Hugli had been appropriated by Government to purposes not only foreign to the intention of the founder, but such as he would have regarded with abhorrence. The case of the Mohammedan endowment at Sasseram involves a similar injustice, none the less gross because the income of the charity is less considerable. In this case, though the Government have not actually set aside the hereditary manager, and taken the trust into their own hands, they insist upon his making over a considerable portion of the funds to be expended at their discretion for educational and other purposes, never contemplated by Sher Shah when endowing the charity, to the detriment of the objects plainly laid down in the firman, and dear to every Mussulman. We cannot help thinking that, however excellent its motives may be, the Government in thus treating the endowed property of the native community entirely forgets the peculiar relation in which it stands to them. Precedent may no doubt be found in English history from the time of Henry the Eighth downwards, for not only diverting, but actually confiscating, pious and charitable bequests. But the English Government is a Christian Government, legislating for a Christian country, and its position in respect of the religion of the nation affords it plausible, if not perfectly logical, grounds for interference. In this country the declared policy of the Government is to separate itself entirely from the religious affairs of its subjects. As a Government, it has no more concern with the progress or conservation of Hinduism than Mohammedanism, or of Christianity than either, and its manifest duty under these circumstances is to confine its interference with religious and charitable bequests, to seeing that the intentions of the founders are honestly carried out. Even this duty, we think, it might more consistently make over to the representatives of the communities concerned, in concert with the courts of the country. Instead of this it really diverts the funds bequeathed to the fulfilment of its own policy, even though that policy be opposed to the feelings which dictated the bequests. If a magistrate wants a road made, or a dispensary established on European medical principles, or a common school supported to teach native children English, he has only to recommend the Commissioner to call for a subsidy from the nearest Mohammedan endowment, and his object will be accomplished. The trustee may be compelled, for want of the funds which have been thus filched from him, to turn away the fakír from his doors, to stop the teaching of Arabic, or the reading of the Koran. But in the eyes of the European officials this is a change for the better, and their word is law. A specious distinction has, we are aware, been drawn between religious and charitable bequests. But what such a distinction has to do with the right of Government to divert funds from the objects prescribed by their donors we cannot see. In the eyes of the Mohammedan community a charitable bequest is a religious bequest, even although the charity is devoted to the profane object of relieving the fakír, or furnishing a Turkish bath to the weary traveller. A Government that stands aloof from the spiritual concerns of a people like the Mohammedans can hardly enter into their feelings so fully as to be entitled to arrogate to itself the right of interfering in matters of this kind.

ENGLISH AND NATIVE MANNERS.

In a letter to the Englishman "Brittanicus" thus discourses:—

Now, geniality, polished courtesy, and expansive sympathies are not, in sober truth, the qualities that most distinguish the average Briton. But I think you will agree with me that the exclusiveness and want of sympathy are not all on one side. When we find ourselves regarded as mleches by one large section of the native community, and as kaffirs by the other, we should indeed be little short of angels if we did not more or less reciprocate the feelings implied in these not very complimentary epithets. Even in the eyes of educated Hindoos we are a race superlatively unclean in our habits and food, and unintelligible in our ways of thought, while the meaner sort have a vague idea that we are a semi cannibal people, whose constant diet is half-raw beef, washed down with copious draughts of brandy sharab. The Mussulman dislikes us doubly—first as infidels, and secondly, as the destroyers of the glory and supremacy of Islam in this country.

Conscious of all this, the Anglo-Indian has come to the conclusion that to hold himself somewhat aloof from the native is the best and pleasantest course for all concerned, and that if he keeps up an interchange of the barest civilities, it is all that is required. He does not visit natives because he has a strong impression that they would much rather he didn't, and the visiting process would certainly be an intolerable bore to himself. When in communication with natives of any rank, he has an uneasy feeling that there is an elaborate code of etiquette which he may, unknown to himself, infringe, and feelings and prejudices which he cannot by any possibility understand or appreciate, and to which he may at any time administer a rude, though perfectly unintentional shock. The dash of brusquerie, which marks the social intercourse of his own countryman, makes extremely distasteful to him the elaborate and somewhat fawning ceremonies of Asiatic courtesy.

It is impossible that any European gentleman should ever be received into a native gentleman's family circle as he would into that of one of his own countrymen; nor is it, indeed, desirable that it should be so. On his side, knowing that the native's ideas with regard to women are extremely repuguant to his own, he is no way desirous to encourage the latter to any degree of social familiarity. As a general rule, indeed, he only desires to get out of his house as quickly as possible a man who would feel insulted by being asked to sit down at the same dinner-table with him; and I take it those high officials and others who make an attempt at freer intercourse with natives do so, not from any pleasure it gives them, but simply because they believe it to be one of the duties of their station.

In fine, I cannot think that too close an amalgamation of the European and native elements in this country is in any wise desirable. In your remarks on Mr. Atherton's letter you clearly pointed out the physical obstacles that stand in the way of his scheme—obstacles which are, and must, in the nature of things, remain insuperable. Giving Mr. Atherton full credit for the purity and philanthropy of his motives, it still seems to me that his ideas, if carried into practice, would inflict considerable damage in many ways on our position in India. Greece conquered her conquerors, and Hindustan, from whatever cause, has in no case exercised a benign influence on those whom she has received into her bosom. Where are now the fair-faced, stalwart, joyous Aryan warriors of the old Vedic times, where the hardy and warlike Mussulman and the once lordly Portuguese? They all of them yielded to the influence of the Circe's cup held to their lips by hands well skilled in ministering to every depraved desire of indolence and sensuality. And they fell one after the other. It was reserved for the rugged and ungracious islander, strong of hand and cool of head, to grasp the mighty prize that fell from their enervated grasp. To the last day of an existence in India we shall still have need of the strong Saxon hand and the cool Saxon brain, and these, with all due deference to Mr. Atherton, no Indian mothers can give us.

OUT IN THE RAIN.

Raining! and apparently not going to stop for a week! The trees all in their places are standing quiet, like whipped children, not a leaf daring to stir while the thunder scolds. Now and again comes up a blast of wet wind, driving the rain into fine spray before it and shaking all the garden. The bamboos are taken by surprise and sway in confusion here and there, but, as the wind settles down to blow steadily, bow courteously to their neighbours, sweeping their plumed boughs in graceful unison. The tough teak tree feels the wind and flaps its thick leaves lazily; the jamoon is fluttered from crown to stem; the feathery tamarinds are shivering in consternation; and panic-stricken acacias toss about their tasselled leaves. There is something almost piteous in the way the plantain receives the rude wind, throws up its long leaves in despair, now drops them down or flings them helplessly about; but it is not often that there is high wind with the rain. Generally there is only rain—a great deal of it. The birds knew what was coming when they saw the drifting clouds being huddled together and worked up into a black mass, and then spread out like a grey plaster on the ceiling of the sky, and the air has been filled this hour past with their warning cries. They have now gone clamorous home; but after a long interval come the late birds, who had dawdled over their last worm too long, calling out as they pass to their comrades far ahead to wait for them; and then, after another while, comes the last bird—for when the storm is at its worst there is always one more bird to pass, flying too busily to speak, and which scuds, albeit heavily, across the sloping rain, cutting its way to a dry resting-place as straight as did the dove of the Deluge. The green parrots—birds of the world as they are—went over long ago, screaming and streaming by. The crows, too, after casting about for a nearer shelter, have flung themselves across the sky towards the hospitable city; one young crow meant to have seen the storm out, and so he kept his seat on the roof, and in the insolence of his glossy youth rallied his old relatives escaping from the wet; but a little, later as he flapped his spongy wings ruefully homeward, he regretted that he had not listened to the voice of experience. For the rain is raining—raining as if the water was sick of life on the sky—raining as if the rain hated the earth with its flowers and fruits. The clouds have a great deal to get rid of, and they mean that it shall all be gone before night. There is more, they know, coming up with the night wind which it will take them till the morning to bale out. And now the paths begin to show how heavy the shower is. On either side runs down a fussy stream, all pitted with rain pock-marks, from which jut out pigmy Teneriffes in a mimic Atlantic, the larger kunkur stones. But the rain still comes down, and the two fussy streams have joined into a shallow smoothly flowing sheet, and there is nothing from bank to bank but speckled water-bubbles hurrying down, but, haste as they may, getting their heads broken by the rain-drops before they reach the corner and the rank grass blades, born of the rain and the steamy heat. And now you begin to suspect rain on the sunken lawn; but before long there is no room for mere suspicion, for the level water is showing white through the green grass, in which the shrubs stand ankle-deep. How patiently the flowers stand in their ditches, bending their poor heads to the ground, and turning up their green calices to be pelted! But besides the trees and flowers and washed-out insects, there are but few creatures out in the rain. Here comes a seal carrying a porpoise on his back: no, it is our good friend, the bheesty. Dripping like a seaweed, a thing of all weathers, he splashes by through the dreary waste of waters, like one of the pre-Adamite creatures in the Period of Sludge. Who can want water at such a time as this? you feel inclined to ask, as the shiny bheesty with his shiny mussuck squelches past, his red apron, soaked to a deep maroon, clinging to his knees. A servant remembers something left out of doors, and, with his master's wrath very present to him, detaches his mouth from the hookah bowl, and with his foolish skirts tucked round his waist paddles out into the rain, showing, behind his plaited umbrella, like a toadstool on its travels. A young pariah dog goes by, less dusty and less miserable than usual. The rain has taken the curl out of his tail, has washed away his landmarks from the familiar posts and pillars—but he is, and he knows it, safer in the rain. There are no buggies passing now, from beneath whose hoods, as the levin lightning leaps out of the black clouds, will leap sharp whiplashes, curling themselves disagreeably round his thin loins or tingling across his tender nose. There are no proud carriages with arrogant drivers to be rude to him if he stands still for a minute in the middle of the road to think, no old pariah dogs on the watch to dispute, and probably to ravish from him, his infrequent treasure trove. The worms, too, like the rain, for they can creep easily over the slab ground, opening and shutting up their bodies like telescopes; and the dank frogs doat on it. They hop impatiently out, albeit in a stealthy way, from clammy corners behind pillars and under flower-pots; to see if their ditches are filling nicely, and hop back happy. But there is one creature to whom rain is an unmixed abomination—the punkah cooly, for whom the architect foregoes to build a verandah. He sits perched, like a desolate fowl, on an empty beer box under a roof of his own construction, fearfully and wonderfully made out of remnants—not, however, so cunningly devised, but the resolute ruthless rain finds its way in, soaking the cooly on its cramped perch and sopping his wretched "property" in the corner—a brown cloth and a pink cloth, a dingy horse rug variegated with dingy patches, a shiny brass lotah and a yard string. But the rain has no bowels.—Pioneer.

STATION TALK.

Nusseerabad, July 15.—During the past two or three weeks the weather has been very changeable. Sometimes we are favoured with clouds and rain for days together. The sun's ascendency is but short-lived; the clouds come to the fore again, and reusurp the sway of affairs above. There is a contest going on between the two now as I write, and although aided by a high easterly breeze, the old fellow's rudder will, I fear, again come to grief. With but few exceptions, the rain we are having falls in a monotonous drizzle. This, though very annoying to those whose disposition or duty calls them out of doors, is, I believe, the best for fertilising the soil, which, after all, is, or rather should be, the main consideration. The cultivators appear to be happy at the prospect of a glorious harvest, as I observe them every evening, when come home from their day's toil, giving vent to their high spirits in songs and laughter. It is to be hoped that their expectations will not fail to be realised, and that as a consequence the grain market will wear a less gloomy aspect than it does at present.

Banda, Bundelkhund, July 18.—Two atrocious offences swell the calendar for this month. One of them occurred in Pylanee police station, in the Banda portion of the district, and the other in Bhowree, in the Kirwee sub-district. In both cases the circumstances under which the offences were perpetrated point them out as crimes of singular atrocity. In the former case it appears that the husband anticipated the unfaithful conduct of his wife, and took no steps to prevent it, but on the contrary kept watch until its accomplishment enabled him to execute the plan of vengeance which he had formed. This is proved by his having actually overheard the assignation for that night, and to his being a witness of a visit paid by the paramour. He struck the paramour eighteen blows with a sharp axe, nine of which are declared by medical testimony to be dangerous. In the latter case it is evident that the defendant did not act on a sudden and incontrollable impulse, but being cognisant of an intrigue between his brother's wife and another man, he with "malice aforethought" determined to kill her; or to quote his own words, "I led her to a secluded spot and there murdered her to save the family honour, because if the intrigue were known, disgrace would have inevitably followed." It, however, never entered the head of this ignoramus that both police and judicial inquiry would have "inevitably followed" the murder, and the family honour, or "hoormut," as he termed it, would be at stake. In the first-mentioned case the defendant had it in his power to prevent the intrigue, but preferred to allow it to proceed, and then deliberately, and by repeated blows of an axe, half murdered the adulterer, and then attempted to serve his wife in the same way, unmoved by the earnest appeals to his mercy made by the wretched woman. In both cases the defendants have been secured by the police. They have the sympathies of the native public, in accordance with a theory propounded in the Shastras, which constitutes male relatives the arbiters of life and death, in regard to all cases of adultery and fornication in which their female relatives are concerned. The Pylanee case came on for hearing at the Deputy Magistrate's Court, when the defendant expressed his regret in not having murdered his wife's paramour outright.—Wells: The water of about three-fifths of the wells in Banda is undrinkable for three or four months of the year, and at a time when water is so greatly in requisition, the hot weather. This is caused by the wells being dug under the sheiter of some huge tree, the leaves of which, decaying inside, give the water an abominable smell. To this may be attributed a great deal of the sickness which is prevalent in some districts. Another evil in connection with the Banda wells is an insufficiency of water. Both evils attracted the attention of the magistrate, Mr. E. B. Thornhill, and he personally inspected the wells, and has done much in remedying the evils alluded to. A great many have been cleaned out, and to hear the shouts of joy when a well situated in a crowded part of the city was made to produce abundantly, at once proved that Mr. Thornhill's efforts were appreciated by the hundreds who were furnished with water from that particular well. If the magistrate had merely issued an official order the work would have been done, but not so speedily. He, however, did not do so, but undertook to have it performed under his own supervision by frequently visiting the several localities himself. I do not know if such a phenomenon exists in other districts, but at Banda there are two or three wells which produce both brackish and sweet water, that is, if you draw from one side you get brackish water, and if from the opposite side you take up sweet water.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

The Wahabis' Trials.—A telegram from Patna informs us that Pir Muhammad, one of the so called Wahábís, has been acquitted and released. The other prisoners have been convicted, and sentenced to transportation for life.

O'Connor v. Parsons.—The case of O'Connor v. Parsons at Simla, for damages for wrongful imprisonment, has been decided in favour of the defendant with costs. The case will be appealed to the High Court, as otherwise a magistrate, so long as he believed himself to be right, might imprison any European on his own evidence, sitting himself as judge in the case, for the breach of an order, the time for the completion of which had not expired.

Assam.—A private letter from a tea-planter in Assam says:—"Splendid weather for tea now. The spider for the season, I think, has spun its last web, and the blister blown its finale bubble. The tea tree looks verdant, healthy, and like itself again, while all around the crops (near the splendid nurseries of dhan—for they have not yet been transplanted to the pattars) augur an abundant harvest. What a country this is! No famine—no starvation—an El Dorado indeed for the thousands we read of who perish in those famine-stricken countries!"—Englishman.

Musketry.—The 1-19th regiment heads the list of regiments in the musketry practice in India for last season, with a figure of merit of 153-50. Captain Moffatt, of the same regiment, is the best shot amongst the officers, and Private Bryant, of the 62nd regiment, amongst the rank and file.

International Exhibition.—The Lieutenant-Governor has appointed the following gentlemen to be the Bengal Committee for making arrangements in connection with the International Exhibition of 1872:—Mr. J. A. Crawford, Baron Dowleans, Mr. W. Stalkart, Bábú Degambar Mittar, Khajah Abdúl Ganni, c.s.i., and Mr. F. Wyman. Mr. H. H. Locke is both a member and Honorary Secretary.

Missions.—The report of the American Free Baptist Mission in Lower Bengal for the year ending March, 1871, has just been published. The report states that at Bhimpore the Santal Christians are making good progress. The most cheering fact about the Bhimpore branch is that a chapel has been built entirely by the native Christians. The work done during the past year in connection with the Santal village schools is very satisfactory. No fewer than 720 boys and girls are taught in these schools. The greater part of the scholars are Santals, and the rest generally belong to the lower class of Hindoos. The receipts during the year on account of donations and subscriptions amount to 2,177 rupees, and grants from Government to 8,993 rupees, making a total of 11,171 rupees.

Duties of a Subordinate Civil Officer.—The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that amongst the other qualifications for future members of the Subordinate Executive Service they should be able to ride. His Honour says:—"It is of immense importance that a sub-divisional officer should, for example, be able to go out ten or fifteen miles before breakfast, and make a judicial recognition into the circumstances of a murder,—the body, the blood, the scene of the struggle, and so on, without interfering with his regular work for the day; and in very many of the duties of an executive officer such activity is required. Riding should therefore be added to the obligatory subjects of examination, and I will thank the committee now sitting to arrange this."

Colonel Garden.—We regret to learn that Colonel Garden's (the Deputy Quartermaster-General), state of health is such that it seems probable that he will have to take leave to England as soon as the cessation of the rains permits his leaving Simla. Colonel Garden has for some time been the right hand of his department, and is practically Quartermaster-General elect, as Colonel Lumsden's period of office expires next year. We trust that rest and change of climate will tell favourably upon the liver-complaint from which he is suffering, and that he may yet be enabled to take up the high appointment to which his services would next year entitle him. Lieutenant-Colonel Roberts, v.c., first assistant in the Quartermaster-General's office, will succeed Colonel Garden as Deputy Quartermaster-General.—Englishman.

Death of the Rev. A. W. Wallis.—The Indian Church Gazette deeply regrets to announce the death of the Rev. A. W. Wallis, Chaplain of Berhampore, who committed suicide by hanging himself on Saturday, 8th July. The unfortunate gentleman had been for some time in a melancholy state of mind, and his conduct at a funeral, a few days before his death, was only explicable on the supposition that he was not accountable for his actions. The Rev. A. W. Wallis was of Magdalen Hall College, Oxford, and his attainments as a classical scholar were considerable. A touching Latin epitaph in St. Paul's Cathedral at Calcutta to a son he had lost is an evidence of the elegance of his scholarship. He had completed his twenty-fourth year's service, and would, in the ordinary course, have retired in April 1872. He has been Chaplain of Berhampore since February 1866. The funeral service was read by the Rev. Mr. Hill, of the London Missionary Society.

The Banda Prize.—A legal opinion has been given on the Banda-Kirwee prize money. It is decided, says the Friend of India, that the debts due to the ex-chiefs are property of the description ordinarily distributable as booty or prize to the troops engaged, and that the rejection of the claim by the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury in May, 1869, is in direct conflict with established precedent. It continues that the question raised in this case may be properly referred to the High Court of Admiralty, and suggests that the most expeditious course will be to present a petition to the Queen in Council, praying for such a reference. It will be within the memory of our readers that Government paper to the value of many lacs of rupees was captured by our troops at the taking of Kirwee, and that Government refused to redeem its own bonds on the plea that they had become forfeit by the rebellion of the ex-rajahs of Banda and Kirwee. The legal opinion quoted will probably reopen the whole question—to the great chagrin of the lawyers!

The Camp of Exercise.—It is said that the proposed Camp of Exercise has caused something very like a panic among some of the elderly Brigadiers and Colonels. Assuming the number of troops at six thousand there will be two Generals and five or six Brigadiers on the ground; and it is the qualifications of these officers, rather than those of their subordinates, which will be most severely tested. The regimental officers of the different arms will learn a good deal without much risk of exposing their supposed deficiencies, but any incapacity on the part of the higher officers in command of divisions or brigades will lead to open confusion and a public breakdown. We take it, however, that this is precisely one of the benefits which will accrue from Camps of Exercise. They will test the capacity of senior officers for practically handling the masses of troops whom they command. Underlying the army agitation at home is a wide spread impression among Englishmen that our military system does not produce generals able to direct military movements on a large scale, and that a war is half over before they get rid of incapables, and the right men come to the front.

Do We All Drink Leather?—The Pioneer reports the interesting discovery, on the part of a savant, of a sudden formation of leather at the moment when milk is poured into a cup of tea. The contact of the albumen of the milk with the tannin of the tea engenders "minute flakes of the very same compound which is produced in the texture of tanned hides." The savant, who has made this discovery with the aid of a microscope, calculates that in the course of a single year a tea-drinker of average capacity must imbibe enough leather to make a pair of shoes. As there can be no doubt of the bona fides of this valuable discovery, we venture to protest against the criminal luxury which it reveals. We see no reason why a machine, similar to the apparatus which makes smoke "self-consuming," should not be invented for the purpose of apprehending the stray particles of home made leather in our tea-cups, and considering them for their proper uses in the economy of creation. We can hardly conceive of anything that more clearly partakes of the character of criminal luxury than a systematic course of drinking boots; and we think that the warning recently furnished by France should not be lost upon us.—Englishman

The Faith of a Mahajun.—The general good faith and honest dealing of the mahajuns of this country among themselves are almost proverbial, and deserve to be so. A curious instance of their mutual confidence may be seen in an old custom still prevalent in Mirzapur. In that city there circulate among the bankers sealed bags of Furrackabad rupees, each bag bearing the name of a banker and the amount contained in it. These bags are never opened nor their contents counted or examined, and even though in weight the bag should be as much as 10 per cent. below the nominal value put on it, it still circulates for the full amount, on the faith of the name written on it. In the event of the rupees being sent to the mint to be melted down, the loss would be borne by the banker whose name was on the bag, but the mahajuns themselves are very adverse to pressing matters to this point; and so, as it has been the dustoor among them for many years, so it is probably the bags will continue to circulate for many years to come. Originally the Furruckabad rupee was coined of exactly the same value as the Government one, but as none have been coined for about fifty years they have probably lost somewhat in weight from circulation. They generally pass current at a discount of from 6 pies to 2 annas 6 pies per cent. though occasionally they have fallen much below that.—Pioneer.

Afghanistan.—Letters from Cabul up to July 3 inform us that a few durbar officials, who are indisposed towards Sirdar Mahomed Hoossein Khan, have told the Ameer that Sirdar Mahomed Aslum Khan and Sirdar Mahomed Hoossein Khan had resolved between themselves that the former, after killing the Commander-in-Chief, should take possession of that part of the kingdom where he at present is, and bring the army under his command, and the latter (i. e., Mahomed Hoossein Khan), by putting gunpowder under the ground of the durbar apartment, should dispose of his Highness. Many and other similar accusations have been put on Sirdar Mahomed Hoossein Khan; consequently the displeasure of the Ameer against the members of this family is enhancing every day. About Rs. 40,000, placed at credit of Sirdars Mahomed Aslum Khan and Mahomed Hoossein Khan, have been realised from various people, and the other property of both brothers is still under a guard. Sirdar Meer Afzul Khan, Governor of Furrah, has reported to the Ameer that when Sirdar Mahomed Aslum Khan arrived in Furrah he absolutely denied having killed the Commander-in-Chief. Sirdar Mahomed Aslum Khan had arrived in Grishk with irons on his legs, under a guard of two or three hundred sowars. The men from the Cabul troops in Sebzwar, having arrived in Cabul, reported that all the officers of the army are under the impression that Sirdar Mahomed Aslum Khan caused the death of the Commander-in-Chief by a gunshot through the agency of his own servants.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, July 28.—The past week has been marked by extreme quietness, and, were it not for the firmness which importers continue to exhibit, we should no doubt have to record a serious decline in values. As it is, a small concession has been in some instances unavoidable, and in many cases quotations are, in the absence of demand, almost nominal.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, July 28.—Saltpetre: The supply of refined 5 per cent. refraction is exhausted; higher rates were given for the small quantity of refined in hand, in some instances as much as Rs. 7-10 being paid; but the price of washed and crude remains unaltered. Rice: The principal business has again been in Ballam for the outports, white being neglected, with a falling market. The new Moonghy is coming in but slowly, and the quality of what has arrived is by no means first class. Linseed: A brisk business has been done during the week both for Europe and America, and we now quote good bold at Rs. 4-5 to 4-6; medium, Rs. 4-2 to 4-3; and small, Rs. 4-1 to 4-2. The new crop is now rapidly coming into the market. Rapeseed: During the last two or three days there has been rather more activity in the market, but rates have slightly declined. The new crop from Eastern Bengal is rapidly coming forward, and is of good quality, but at present there is little demand for this description. Silk: There has been less activity in the market during the week, but prices for filatures have been fully maintained, though native is somewhat weaker. The prospects of the rainy bund are still reported as favourable.

FRACAS AT THE BANGALORE RACE-COURSE.

The following information was laid before the Acting Cantonment Magistrate on Monday last, Mr. P. B. Gordon appearing for the applicant.

Owen Vincent Norris sworn—I am an Assistant Surveyor in the Great Trigonometrical Survey, and reside at Bangalore. On Saturday, the 22nd July last, I went to the race course. Just as the races were over, and as I was seated in my coach, some of my friends, Messrs. Mitchell, Torrens, and Bond, came up and asked me to the stand to partake of some champagne, which was being distributed by Mr. Abdoollah. I proceeded to the verandah of the stand, where I saw the cup on the table and champagne being served out in glasses. There was a crowd round the table. I saw my friends helping themselves to champagne as everybody appeared allowed to do. After the crowd had somewhat disbursed, I went to the table and took up a glass of champagne. I was previously seated on a bench. There were many filled glasses on the table. On my taking up the glass, Colonel Ramsay addressed me in a loud and offensive manner, saying, "Put down that glass, will you? put that glass down, who told you to take it up?" I felt abashed, set down the glass, and said, "I beg your pardon, I thought it was open to the public; I saw my friends round the table helping themselves." Colonel Ramsay replied, "It is not open to the public, but only to the friends of Mr. Abdoollah, or for those who had done work." I said I was sorry for the mistake, and went back two or three paces. After helping some jockeys and sergeants, Colonel Ramsay left the table, and coming up to me said, "Oh, you're the person, you may now take a glass." I said, "I now beg to decline it." Stepping forward a little I raised my hat and said, "Colonel Ramsay, should you again have occasion to speak to a gentleman, please speak more civilly." He turned on me fiercely and said, "If you don't stop your —— jaw, I'll kick you —— over tip and turn you out," or words to that effect. I am certain of the words (represented by dashes). I said, "You are taking too much on yourself, Colonel Ramsay; you know you dare not do so." He at once cuffed and collared me with one hand, and kept pushing me violently with the other. I cried out, "Major Ramsay, you are an old man, and I wouldn't like to strike you." He then grew more violent, and seized my coat, and some others joined him in pushing me. I tried to extricate myself, but found myself pushed till I got to the top of the steps. There seemed to be about half-a-dozen men pushing me. A person came behind to drag me down the steps, and when I shook off Colonel Ramsay, I found myself pinioned behind by the arms, and in that way I was dragged down two or three steps towards the course. I turned round by an effort and recognised Mr. Lavelle as the man who was pushing me from behind. I said, "Mr. Lavelle, let me go, you have nothing to do with the matter, I wish to speak to Colonel Ramsay," and I tried to get away. Lavelle then hit me with his clenched fists several blows; one hit me on the chin and the others about the neck, arms, and shoulders. As I was warding off the blows, Mr. Mitchell ran up and seized Lavelle and pulled him away, three or four others also came up to separate us. Just then several gentlemen came rushing up to the spot, among others one of the stewards, whom I afterwards found to be Captain R. C. Stewart, and said, "Don't make a disturbance, go away quietly." I replied, "I am not making a disturbance, I have been assaulted, but I'll go away if I get my hat." After I had got my hat, a third gentleman came up and seized me by the coat saying, "Where are you going to?" I do not know who he was.

By the Court—I had no stand ticket when I went to the stand; but my friends said the ropes had been taken down and the stand was open to all. I can't myself remember if the ropes were taken down.

His Worship—Ropes or no ropes, did you suppose the stand was open to the public without tickets.

Complainant—I certainly thought so, especially as my friends were passing in and out, and they had no ticket. They had gone in the same way on the previous day. I now charge Colonel Ramsay and Mr. Lavelle under the Penal Code with assault and criminal force, and seek the protection of the Court.

Upon the above information, summonses were granted against Colonel Ramsay and Mr. Lavelle, made returnable at nine o'clock on Friday, the 28th inst.

With reference to the above the Madras Times has the following:

"We learn by telegram from Bangalore that Mr. Norris's complaint against Colonel Ramsay and Mr. Lavelle for assault was heard and decided yesterday by the Cantonment Magistrate, who considered that the ends of justice would be sufficiently met by the payment of a fine of five rupees by each of the defendants, who at once admitted the assault."—Madras Times, July 27.

Miscellaneous.

Gun Accident.—Madras has had another horrible gun accident. On the morning of the 26th July, while some guns which had been rebushed were being proved at Saint Thomas' Mount, one of them burst, and six gunners were injured. One man had his leg blown off below the knee, and died shortly after he was taken to the hospital. Another man sustained a fracture of a bone of the right leg. Two men were severely injured by splinters and grains of powder, and the remaining two men escaped with slight injuries.

The Bangalore Row.—Further details have appeared regarding the progress of the police investigation into the famous Bangalore fracas, wherein two officers of H.M.'s 21st Fusiliers were severely shot. The examination of witnesses was continued on the 21st July, when the evidence of two Misses VanIngen was taken. Both denied having received any letter from Mr. Lambart stating that he would call on the night of the affray. Dr. Lougheed, 21st Fusiliers, who is in attendance on the wounded officers, having stated that he could not say on what date they would be well enough to attend the Court, the case was adjourned sine die. Mr. Gordon again applied to the magistrate to accept bail for Mr. E. VanIngen, and the magistrate promised to consider the application. The application has, however, been since refused. Both the wounded officers are progressing favourably. Mr. Frere is quite convalescent, and is recommended driving exercise. Mr. Lambart is still unable to bear his weight on his leg. With the aid of crutches and a starch bandage he can get into a carriage, but it is not known when either gentleman will be able to give evidence.

The King of Burmah is said to have bought up Rs. 90,000 worth of piece-goods on three months credit for the royal bazaar, which is said to be underselling the Mandalay market. His Majesty, who has evidently learned the political importance of entertaining, has given another breakfast to the European and Eurasian community of the capital.

Agriculture.—We hear that the question of agricultural improvement is now the principal question engaging the attention of the Madras Government, and that it is likely to form the stock subject of discussion during their stay at Ootacamund. It is proposed to establish in different parts of the Presidency experimental farms as branches of the Government experimental farm at Madras, the whole to be under the general direction of Mr. Robertson, now at Sydapet. The objects of these farms will be to ascertain the proper rotation of crops in the various districts, and to introduce new crops suitable to the climate. There can be no doubt that the Government possesses in Mr. Robertson a man admirably qualified to direct an undertaking of this kind.—Madras Times.

Model for Cholera Hospitals.—A few sheds are now to be seen in the compound of the Medical College. These sheds have been, we learn, designed by Dr. Balfour, Inspector General of Hospitals, Indian Medical Department, and are intended as a model for cholera hospitals throughout the Presidency. They consist of a cholera shed to contain six or eight patients with fittings; a shed for the dispensary and for the stowage of comforts, &c., which is fitted with a table field medicine chest and other requisities; a shed for the medical officer arranged to meet necessary requirements, and a shed for servants attending upon the sick. The material with which these sheds are constructed is common bamboo matting for the walls, and cadjan leaves for the roof. Lord Napier, on the afternoon of Tuesday last, inspected the sheds.—Madras Times, July 27.

Abolition of Slavery in Siam.—Notwithstanding all that has been said regarding the first King of Siam, and his doings and prospects, yet there still occur now and then accounts of further steps towards civilisation, and an onward progress towards material prosperity. The following intelligence from a Java paper cannot fail to be interesting to many of our readers. The King of Siam, after his return to his States, abolished slavery in the kingdom of Siam from and after the 1st January, 1872; slaves then in being will be manumitted from the produce of a tax laid upon the slave proprietors from the present time. A good commencement has also been made in the laying out of new roads, and the erection, or building, of new bridges, of a substantial nature, whereby the development of the varied resources of the kingdom of Siam will be much furthered. The proposed visit of his Majesty and suite to Calcutta will enable them to carry out plans for improvement with creditable vigour and effect. Good roads not only favour despatch for commerce in time of peace, but materially aid military movements in time of war.—Straits Observer.

The King of Burmah and Major Sladen.—A correspondent furnishes us with the following notes of a conversation that lately took place in the Royal palace at Mandalay between his Majesty the King and an English clergyman who resides at the capital:—King: Phoongyee, I have sent for you, as I wish you to take an oath.—Clergyman: Your Majesty, I will be glad to hear of what nature the oath required is.—King: I wish you to swear that if Sladen ever returns here you will not speak to him, nor communicate with him in any way.—Clergyman: Your Majesty, I cannot take such an oath, Major Sladen having been my friend for many years.—King (angrily): Then you must swear that you will come and tell me everything he says.—Clergyman: Your Majesty, I cannot do that—it would be an unpardonable breach of confidence on my part.—King: If you will not do as I want, I will burn down your kyoungs.—Clergyman: The kyoungs are your Majesty's, and so your Majesty can do with them as your Majesty pleases. The King in a rage then took his departure. Next day his Majesty's sons presented themselves at the clergyman's school as usual, but were politely told that they had better return to their father, because, as the King had said that he would burn down the kyoungs, some evil might happen to them if they remained in the doomed buildings. How this matter ended we have not heard, but the kyoungs were still standing when the last steamer left Mandalay.—Rangoon Gazette.

Civil.—At the instance of the Bombay Government, the Supreme Government, we hear, have sanctioned the permanent establishment of the subordinate Civil Courts of Kotree and Meerpore Buttora in Sind, which were opened experimentally under Government orders for the 19th February, 1867.

The Contagious Diseases Act.—Some changes are to be made in the working of the Contagious Diseases Act in Bombay. Dr. Hewlett, the health officer, will, we understand, be appointed to take charge of the registration, and the Lock Hospital will be placed under the care of Dr. Partridge.

Commercial.—We understand that the British and Foreign Insurance Office has paid up the full amount represented by its policies on shipments made by Jetha Vullubjee, per the ship Aurora. The amount insured in this office was not very large. Two other offices whose stake, on the other hand, is large, have not yet manifested any intention of paying.—Times of India.

The Bombay Municipality.—The Bombay Bench of Justices had a somewhat stormy meeting in the Town Hall last week. Mr. John Connon has been appointed Chairman of the Bench, in succession to the Hon. Mr. Scoble, who has resigned owing to ill-health. The business at the meeting concerned chiefly the lease of the new offices on the esplanade. The matter is referred for counsel's opinion as to whether the Municipal Commissioner had legal authority to bind the Municipality to such a lease.—Times of India, Aug. 1.

Mr. W. Sowerby on Ocean Tides.—The Bombay Geographical Society has had a paper read before its members by Mr. W. Sowerby, C.E., on the subject of the action of ocean tides geologically and geographically considered. The writer is, we believe, more conversant with the topics comprised under the title, as they concern the Indian seas and coast than any one else now in India. Such a paper cannot but have an important bearing on harbour questions affecting our commerce. There was a large attendance, and an interesting discussion followed the reading of Mr. Sowerby's paper.

Wreck of the S.S. "Breadalbane."—We learn by private advices from Jeddah that the ship Teazer will bring to Bombay a further quantity of goods, principally wines, spirits, and some iron, saved from the wreck of this steamer. The wreck lies in thirty feet of water, and every package saved has been recovered by Arab divers, several of whom, we regret to hear, have lost their lives in their attempts to save cargo. A great many bales of cotton goods lie on the shore loose in a rotten state, and, beyond the cargo coming forward by the Teazer, we understand the remainder will not pay the expense of forwarding it to Bombay.

The Lunatic Asylum.—The Bombay Government has at last taken into serious consideration the necessity of doing something to put an end to the scandal caused by the disgraceful want of suitable accommodation for insane patients in the Lunatic Asylum at Colaba. The wish of the Government is, we understand, if money can be found for the purpose, to build two new asylums, one in the Concan and the other in the Deccan; and it is also proposed to spend some Rs. 20,000 in altering the present asylum so as at least to give the male and female patients separate quarters. Any large expenditure of money on the Colaba Asylum is greatly to be deprecated. Let it be made a decent habitation, by all means, for the patients until some new house is provided for them; but, says the Bombay Gazette, the determination ought to be formed at once to remove the lunatics as soon as possible from a site which has been proved to be as unfit for a hospital as any that could have been selected in Bombay. If the Government is of opinion that there ought to be an asylum in the island of Bombay, there could certainly be no better position for the new building than a correspondent some days ago drew public attention to as being already available at Worlee. The situation is retired and healthy, and at the same time convenient to the town, and it would be a great boon to the inhabitants of Bombay if the swamp at the foot of Worlee-hill could, as is proposed, be cheaply reclaimed by being filled with the earth from the crest of the hill when the ground is levelled to provide a site for the new asylum.

EXECUTION OF THREE MURDERERS.—Patrick Robinson, a soldier of the 49th regiment, Shaik Moorad Hoosein Ali. and Ibboo Shahbooden, who were each convicted of murder at the last Criminal Sessions, and sentenced to death by the Hon. Sir Charles Sargent, the presiding Judge, was hanged last week, outside the west wall of the County Jail. All three of the murders were most unprovoked. Patrick Robinson on the 11th March, with a soldier of the same regiment named George Picking, accompanied two civilians to the Chandnee Railway station from Asseerghur, and while they were returning, Robinson, under the influence of liquor, apparently, proposed that they should kill the first native they met. The first man they met was allowed to pass, but the next, a poor Bheel, named Tookrao, was knocked down by Robinson with a stick, handed to him by Picking, and Robinson afterwards cut his throat, and the two dragged the body to a nullah, and Picking covered it with stones. Four rings, which the deceased wore, were taken from his fingers, and two of them were afterwards sold by Robinson for four annas, and the other two found in his chest. These were the main facts of the case as detailed in the evidence adduced at the trial and contained in the condemned man's confession, which has been made public. There seems to have been no motive whatever for the crime, and the only defence that Mr. Starling, the counsel appointed by the Court to defend the prisoner could urge, was that it was more likely that Picking committed the murder, and in order to receive pardon, had endeavoured to fix the crime upon another man. The defence was an able one, but it broke down, for the statement of the man Picking was so minutely corroborated by small items of circumstantial evidence, as to leave no doubt in the minds of any one in Court but that Robinson was the man by whose hand the unfortunate native died. From what transpired at the trial, as well as the dying confession of the convict Robinson, it would seem that both were equally guilty, and that Picking had more to do with the matter than he himself stated—that he was merely a helpless looker-on may be gathered from the fact that, while in confinement on the charge of murder, he made a successful attempt to escape, but was afterwards recaptured. The prisoner's confession tallies so well with the evidence adduced for the prosecution that there can be no doubt but that the corroborative evidence on the part of the prosecution was almost entirely accurate.—Times of India Correspondent.

To Liverpool—Cotton and Wool, £2. 15s. Seeds, £2 to £2. 2s. 6d.
To London—Cotton, £2. 15s.; Seeds, £2. 7s. 6d. to £2. 10s.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Aug. 1.—The utter stagnation of the Piece Goods Market, noticed in our last report, has continued, hardly any business whatever having been done, except a sale of 200 bales of 9 lbs. Maddapollams at a somewhat reduced rate. This extraordinary state of the market is accounted for by the fact that no authentic accounts have been received of sufficient rain having fallen in the important districts which are suffering from the want of it, and that buyers are in consequence deterred from entering the market. Yesterday was Cocoanut-day, when the coast trade is supposed to reopen; but the rainfall in the presidency town is 25 inches, against 45 inches in the same period last year. In the Wurdah Valley, however, and in the Berars, the rain, though late, is now favourable, and the young crops look well; and in Rajcote, also, there was last week a good fall. But in Kattywar, generally, in Guzerat, Scinde, and the Deccan, according to the latest accounts, the rain still keeps off, and the worst apprehensions are felt for the crops. Grey and Coloured Yarns continue also in the same dull state, and most descriptions of them show a decline of ¼ anna per lb.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Aug. 1.—Cotton: By telegrams received during the week the Liverpool market has shown a weaker tendency. The market here has been extremely dull, and prices of 32's quoted Rs. 5 to 10 per candy below those of last week. The business done in the week for export has again been very small—even for this season—the purchases aggregating about 1,250 bales only; the principal purchases were about 400 bales of Dhollera and Bhownuggur at Rs. 230 to 231, and about 350 bales of Barsee at Rs. 219 to 220. The market has been nominally closed the last two days on account of the Cocoanut holidays, and is very quiet.

GOVERNMENT PAPER.—A large business has been done this week, and the market closes strong, with an advancing tendency.

EXCHANGE.—A limited business has been done this week, but rates, though a shade firmer towards the close, have throughout been unchanged. On China the rate for 60 days' sight closes at Rs. 225 to 226 per 100 dollars.

"INDIAN" PAY.—The Government of India has ruled that an officer on the expiration of his tour of service, unavoidably detained till the departure of the earliest troopship after the date of expiry of the term of his service, is entitled to his Indian pay and allowances up to the date of embarkation.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general Court-martial held at Secunderabad, July 5, Private William Morley, of the 2nd battalion 24th regiment, was found guilty of acts of insubordination, and sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for two years. The Court having attentively considered the observations of the revising officer, and the whole of the proceedings, desired to adhere to their former sentence. The sentence to be carried out under the orders of the officer commanding Hyderabad subsidiary force.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—Under the title of "Alexandra Palace and Muswell Hill Estate Tontine," certificates representing 850,000 guineas are now being issued, which will entitle the holders of one or more certificates of a guinea each to share in the various objects of the institution, or even in the entire property of the Palace and grounds of 498 acres, should they, fifteen years hence, be among the surviving holders. Under an ingenious plan framed for the purpose, each subscriber will have several options as to the mode in which he may obtain a return for his investment, and be virtually guaranteed against loss. The trustees and Board of Directors consist of experienced persons familiar with the management of London properties and of public establishments, and it may be hoped that the result of their arrangements will be to furnish to the population of the north of the metropolis a place of resort as attractive as that on the other side at Sydenham. In an address lately delivered by Mr. John Horatio Lloyd, one of the trustees of the Alexandra Palace and Muswell Hill Estate Tontine, he explained the principle on which it was proposed to raise the necessary capital, and declared that he was perfectly satisfied that no possible loss could be sustained by any one investing; as, in addition to the value of the property, a system of insurance had been devised which was a practical guarantee against any possible failure.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

Financial Department—Accounts.

Simla, June 29, No. 1,438.—In continuation of the resolution No. 353, recorded in this department on the 17th January, 1871, and with reference to the resolution No. 3,698, recorded in this department on the 29th September, 1870, the Governor-General in Council has resolved to abolish the offices of Examiners of Claims at Calcutta and Bombay, and to provide for the performance of the duties of those offices by sanctioning the appointment of an additional assistant to each of the Accountants-General of Bombay and Calcutta, who shall ordinarily be in the fourth class of the Financial Department.

2. In accordance with this resolution, the schedule showing how the offices in the department should be ordinarily distributed among the first five classes will stand as shown below:—

First Class—Six Offices.

Accountants General and Commissioners of the Department of Issue of the Government Paper Currency in Madras and Bombay; Accountant General, Bengal; Accountant General, North-Western Provinces and Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency, Allahabad Circle; and two of the following three offices, viz., Deputy Comptroller General, Inspector of Local Offices of Account, and Assistant Secretary to the Government of India.

Second Class—Seven Offices.

Deputy Comptroller General; Inspector of Local Offices of Account, or Assistant Secretary to the Government of India; Accountant General, Punjab, and Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency, Lahore Circle; Accountant General, British Burmah; Deputy Accountants General in Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and the North-Western Provinces.

Third Class—Ten Offices.

Assistant Comptroller General; Deputy Accountant General, Central Provinces, and Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency, Nagpore Circle; Deputy Accountants General in Mysore, Hyderabad, and the Punjab; Assistant Accountants General in Madras and Bombay; Assistant Commissioners of Paper Currency in Calcutta and Bombay; one Assistant to the Comptroller General.

Fourth Class—Ten Offices.

Personal Assistant to the Financial Member of the Governor General's Council; Assitant Accountant General, North-Western Provinces; three Assistants to the Comptroller General; one Assistant to the Accountant General, Madras; one Assistant to the Accountant General, Bombay; one Assistant to the Accountant General, Bengal; Assistant to the Head Commissioner of Paper Currency in Calcutta; Assistant to the Commissioner of Paper Currency, Bombay.

Fifth Class—Thirteen Offices.

One Assistant to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department.
Two Assistants to the Comptroller General.
One Assistant to Accountant General, Madras.
„ „ „ „ Bombay.
Two Assistants „ „ Bengal.
„ „ „ „ N. W. Provinces.
„ „ „ „ Punjab.
One Assistant „ „ British Burmah.
„ „ Deputy Accountant General, Central Provinces.

3. To give effect to these orders, Mr. G. W. MacLeod is appointed an assistant to the Accountant General, Bengal, and Mr. T. G. Trevor is appointed an assistant to the Accountant General, Bombay. Mr. Trevor will, however, continue to officiate as Assistant Accountant General, Bombay.

Lawrence Asylum.

The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council notifies that the orphan children of non-commissioned officers and soldiers, when taken to the Lawrence Asylum or other orphanages in India, or when quitting such institutions to return to England, will be entitled, until they reach the port of embarkation, to a subsistence allowance of six annas per diem, or Rs. 12 per mensem. A daily allowance of eight annas will be granted as remuneration to the person who may be in charge of the children while in transit to their destination.

2. The same allowance will be granted to children of non-commissioned officers and soldiers who have left India when they quit such institutions to proceed to England.

3. When practicable, and as a preferable arrangement, a suitable ration in kind is to be issued in lieu of the subsistence allowance authorised above, the grant of which is to be confined to cases where it may not be practicable or convenient to supply the ration in kind.

4. An allowance, as below, will also be granted for the outfit and care during the voyage home of such children when they are sent to England from the Lawrence Asylum or other orphanages in India, under instructions from the Secretary of State or other competent authority.

For a boy's outfit	Rs. 40
For a girl's outfit	50
For the care of a boy	30
For the care of a girl	40

5. The outfit allowance will be drawn by the commanding officer of the station, or the nearest military authority, and expended in the provision of a suitable outfit for the children before they quit the institution to join the embarkation depot for the purpose of returning to England.

6. This order is in substitution of G.G.O. No. 1,080, of Nov. 18, 1870, and is applicable to the three presidencies.

Pay of Inspectors of Hospitals on Furlough.

With reference to G.G.O. Nos. 1,137, dated Dec. 6, 1867, and 345, dated April 18, 1871, the following despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published:—

Military—No. 142.

India-office, London, May 31, 1871.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

My Lord,—Your letter No. 89, dated March 16, 1871, relates to the pay to be drawn while on furlough by an officer of the rank of inspector or deputy inspector general of hospitals who has completed his tour of service.

2. I concur with your Government in the decision that an officer so situated who may take furlough within Indian limits under the rules of 1796 is entitled to receive his unemployed pay for such period as he would have received it if resident in India.

3. With regard, however, to the officer who may take furlough under 1868 rules, you will have observed from my despatch No. 55, of Feb. 23, 1871 (paragraph 13), that I do not consider that the unemployed pay, which can only be received in India for six months, can be taken as a basis for the calculation of furlough pay under these rules, and that officers who have completed their tour taking furlough under the 1868 rules are to receive the British (para. 13 of despatch of Secretary of State, No. 152, May 16, 1864) furlough pay of their rank and standing.

4. This, of course, in no way affects the cases of officers taking sick leave under the rules of 1854, which are governed by the despatch No. 297, of Oct. 24, 1867.

(Signed) K. K. Burne, Colonel, Sec. to Govt. of India.

Furloughs in India.

The following G.O. by the Government of India, dated July 14, is published:—

No. 613.—In modification of the provisions of G.G.O., dated June 9, 1869, the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council has empowered local governments and departments of the Governments of the three presidencies to grant to military officers in civil employ under them leave in India for any period not exceeding three months, as furlough, without reference to the Government or C. in C. of the presidency to which the officer belongs, provided that in each case the authority granting the leave shall first satisfy itself that furlough to that amount is due to the officer concerned.

2. In the event of there being no furlough due to the officer, the leave may be granted as if it were furlough (in India) under the provisions of Rule XI. of the Military Furlough Rules of 1868, provided the urgency of the case, whether on the ground of sickness or from any other cause, is such as, in the opinion of the local government, or department of government, to justify the exceptional indulgence.

3. It is not considered necessary to prescribe any fixed intervals within which a repetition of the indulgence cannot be permitted; but the Governor general in Council looks to the local governments and departments of governments to see that such leave is not granted too frequently, or without sufficient grounds.

4. As all leave so taken in India will reckon as part of the eight years to which an officer's total furlough is restricted by Rule XVI., it will be necessary that a copy of the order granting the leave shall in every case be forwarded to the military department of the Government of the Presidency to which the officer belongs.

5. Officers obtaining leave under paragraph 1 of this order will be entitled during the period of their absence on it to furlough pay, as laid down in Rule V. of the Military Furlough Rules of 1868. Those who obtain leave under paragraph 2 of this order will be restricted to the English furlough pay of their rank, per day, as follows:—

General Officer (Staff Corps)	£1 5 0
Colonel of Royal Engineers or Royal Artillery of the local service (and Lieutenant colonel, Staff Corps, if receiving the colonel's allowance)	1 5 0
Lieutenant colonel (with the exception mentioned above)	1 0 0
Major	0 16 0
Lieutenant	0 6 6

6. If an officer exceeds the period of leave granted to him under the provisions of this order, he will forfeit his appointment, and can only be reappointed, as a special case, with the sanction of the Government of the presidency to which the appointment appertains. Should he desire an extension of it as furlough, he can obtain it in the military department of his own presidency to such an extent as he may be entitled under the rules.

7. No leave as furlough out of India can be granted by any authority excepting the Government (in the military department) of the presidency under which the officer may be serving.

FURLOUGHS—SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

No. 502.—The following General Order by the Government of India, dated July 6, 1871, is published:—

No. 595.—With the sanction of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India in Council, the Right Honourable the Governor-general of India in Council is pleased to notify that the indulgence of furlough is extended to passed hospital apprentices under the following conditions:—

1st. The indulgence of furlough will only be granted to men of certified good character and prudent habits, and under circumstances in which the Government may consider it advisable.

2nd. Each application is to be accompanied by a certificate from a medical committee to the effect that the state of health of the passed hospital apprentice renders a change of climate highly desirable.

3rd. The services of men to whom furlough may be granted are always, when the state of their health allow it, to be made available for duty with invalids or discharged men on the voyage from India.

4th. With every application for the indulgence, a descriptive roll in the form annexed [form omitted] is to be furnished, and applications are not to be forwarded on account of passed hospital apprentices of less than one year's service in that grade, except in cases where the necessity for furlough is caused by wounds received in action.

5th. Furlough will invariably, in the first instance, be limited to the period of one year from date of quitting India. Men whose state of health, when that period has expired, does not admit of their return to duty in India, will be subjected to medical examination in view to the leave being extended for a period not exceeding eight months, or to discharge being effected if reported unfit for further service.

6th. No portion of the furlough will be allowed to reckon as service for pension.

7th. A free passage to and from England will be provided by the State for passed hospital apprentices granted furlough, but not for their wives or families; but to assist them in taking home and bringing out their families, an allowance of £20 will be granted as allowed to non-commissioned officers by G.G.O. No. 961 of 1861. Should the services of a hospital apprentice be dispensed with on being reported unfit for further service while on furlough, he will, if he should desire it, be provided with a free return passage to India.

8th. The furlough pay will be 50 per cent. of the monthly rate of pay laid down in paragraph 19 of G.G.O. No. 550 of 1868.

REMITTANCES BY GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

Simla, July 21.—Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India, the Gov. General in Council is pleased to notify that the rate of exchange fixed in the financial notification, dated Feb. 10, for officers' remittances and effects, viz., 1s. 11d. per rupee for the year 1871-72, shall be adopted in the recovery in India, from civil engineers, mechanics, and others, of the portions of their salaries which have been made payable to their families in England.

2. The privilege of making family allotments in England will, for the future, as a general rule, be strictly confined to the class of mechanics, boilermakers, &c., who would probably find it very difficult to make remittances through ordinary channels. Special cases, however, will be considered by the Secretary of State, and decided on their merits.

3. The remittances to England of any civil officers who enjoy the privilege, and of the Administrator General and Official Trustee in each of the three presidencies, will be adjusted from the current year, 1871-72, at the rate fixed for officers' remittances.

BILLS OF CONTINGENT EXPENSES.

Simla, July 14.—No. 2,019.—Several instances have lately come before Government of advances, in lump sums, having been taken for defrayal of special contingent expenses which were spread over several months. The advances were taken on an outside estimate of the probable charges, so that eventually the actual expenditure fell short of the advances, and the excess had to be refunded. Besides this inconvenience, there is a tendency in advances of lump sums to induce officers to postpone submission of their bills on account of the actual expenditure till completion of the service for which the advance may have been taken.

2. The Governor-General in Council desires that this objectionable system should be discontinued as far as possible. Heads of departments and other authorities are reminded that bills for contingent expenses are payable in the usual course immediately on presentation; that more than one such bill may be presented in a month should necessity arise; and that, accordingly, the instances should be rare in which funds for contingent expenses or special services need be obtained in any other form than that of payment of bills for the expenditure.

3. Accountants-General should use their best endeavours to discourage such advances, reporting to the local Government, and, if necessary, to the supreme Government, any instances to which they object and which they cannot prevent.

4. This order does not interfere with the system of permanent advances for ordinary contingencies.

CASH BALANCES.

Simla, July 6.—No. 1,760.—It is important that the Government of India should know, at the earliest possible moment, the actual cash balances in the public treasuries at the close of each month, and the customs' receipts at the principal ports as specified below:—

Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Kurrachee, Chittagong, Rangoon, Akyab, and Moulmein.

2. Owing to neglect on the part of individual officers, it too often happens that more than a month passes before the figures are all received and can be compiled.

3. There can be no reason whatever why the necessary local reports should not be despatched regularly by the evening post on the last day of each month, and in future any officer failing to make such despatch must fully explain the cause of default.

4. Accountants general will henceforth report to the Government of India, and to the local government, the name of any officer whose negligence causes delay in their report to the Government of India of the provincial cash balances at the end of each month.

And severe notice will be taken of any neglect so brought to notice, and of any delay in the submission to the Government of India of the customs' returns.

STUDENTS OF THE THOMASON COLLEGE.—The Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council has notified that, in future, soldiers of the unattached list who are selected for the Thomason College, Roorkee, will be required to resign their positions on that list, and revert to the regimental pay and allowances of the rank which they held previous to their transfer.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS.—The following officers have obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence, on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified (in July):—The furlough in India granted to Capt. No. 491.—In continuation of G.O. No. 490, of this date, the Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to notify that the effective strength of the several grades of the "Apothecary Class" of the subordinate medical department to be maintained for the different hospitals and dispensaries belonging to the civil department of this Presidency will consist of 18 apothecaries, 19 assistant apothecaries, and 37 apprentices, of which latter 33 are required for the European General Hospital, Bombay.

Regimental Horse Allowance.—The Government of India has ruled that a cavalry officer of the local service does not forfeit his regimental horse allowance while employed as a station staff officer.

Examinations in the Native Languages.—The undermentioned have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the lower standard:—Lance Corporal J. Lyons, 2nd foot, Lance Corporal J. Bartlett, and Private T. Hardman, 49th foot; Mr. H. Holtzebro; Serg. W. G. Harrison, R.E.; Mr. E. Hoelzer; Serg. S. Hockey, R.E.; Serg. J. Orford, R.E.; Serg. W. T. Waddel, R.E.; Mr. L. E. Constans; Serg. G. McLeod, R.E. The following gentlemen have passed the prescribed examination in the languages mentioned:—Mr. J. B. D. Adams, supernumerary assistant revenue survey and assessment, Poona and Nassick, and Mr. W. H. Hamilton, Marathi. Mr. F. J. B. Yates, Hindustani, according to the higher standard. Mr. Farques, Indo-European Telegraph Department, Persian, according to the second standard.

Civil Leave of Absence.—The following obtained furlough and leave to Europe on medical certificate during July, under the Rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Major R. M. Smith, R.E., for two years, from Sept. 24 next. The leave, without pay, granted to Mr. J. W. Orr, M.A., prothonotary, ecclesiastical and admiralty registrar of the High Court, is extended for eight months from Aug. 11. Mr. F. F. Arbuthnot, collector of Bombay, is allowed privilege leave of absence for two months, from Sept. 1. Mr. A. Faulkner, senior assistant commissioner of customs, salt, and opium, is allowed privilege leave for three months, under Chap. VI. of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code of 1871. Mr. E. A. Francis, assistant superintendent, Poona and Nassick Survey, is allowed privilege leave for one month and fifteen days.

Military Furloughs, &c.—The following officers have obtained furlough and leave of absence (in July) to Europe, on medical certificate, under the Rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Capt. W. G. Carr, Madras staff corps, for two years. Lieut. B. N. Anley, 41st foot; Major W. Tedlie, 60th rifles; Lieut. T. J. FitzSimon, 62nd foot; Ensign D. D. C. McDonald, 76th foot; Ensign W. H. Tyndall, staff corps (17th regiment native infantry), to Bombay, from date of departure, for thirty days, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe.

MUSKETRY.—A return has been published at Bombay showing the result of the past annual target practice of native regiments armed with smooth-bore muskets. From it we ascertain :—I. The 12th native infantry stands first in the orders of merit. II. The number of regiments whose percentage exceeds 5 per cent. of non-excercised men ought to be still further reduced during the next year's course. Average individual firing, 38·60; average volley firing, 6·06. The 3rd, 10th, 25th, 27th, 29th, and 30th regiments native infantry, being armed with Enfield rifles, are excluded from this return.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Among the most interesting papers read on the first day in Section E, was one by Mr. Clements Markham on "The Somali Coast," contributed by Capt. Miles. It contained some interesting information in reference to the trade in gum and aromatic spices, as it has been carried on by the natives from ancient times. Mr. D. Hanbury, alluding to a statement in Captain Miles's paper, that in ancient times frankincense was held to have come from Arabia and from the adjacent coast of Africa, said that, while this was the case, they were taught in all the books that had appeared on the subject in the latter part of the last century, and in the whole of the present till within the last few years, to believe that frankincense was a product of India. It was very desirable to have information on this highly interesting subject. With regard to the different species of gum trees, their information was very poor, and as to myrrh it was even more so. Much had been written as to cinnamon, early authors holding that it was a production of Africa and Arabia. It was a very interesting question, and one which required elucidation, whether the cinnamon mentioned in Holy Writ was the production of Africa and Arabia, or whether it was merely carried thither from India, or from the still remoter regions of Siam and China by way of commerce, and whether in that way the idea was promulgated that it was produced in the land and districts from which it was shipped, by way of the Red Sea, to Europe.

Commander A. Dundas Taylor, late of the Indian Navy, contributed a paper on "The Proposed Ship Canal between Ceylon and India." With the Alderney and other British Parliamentary harbour discussions before the eyes of their understanding, permission, he thought, might perhaps be readily accorded to a student of thirty years in Indian hydrography to bring before the Association his views concerning the proposed scheme. After giving a sketch of the various projects that had been put forward for making a navigable passage between Ceylon and the Indian continent he proceeded to say that the project for deepening the Paumben Passage for large ships had been set aside by its own advocates in favour of the Port Lorne scheme, which had such remarkable advantages as to claim the attention of the Governments and mercantile communities of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, and Ceylon. An interesting discussion followed, in which the President and Sir E. Belcher joined.

Captain A. Pullan contributed some notes "On British Gurhwal," where he had been employed for four years on the Trigonometrical Survey; and Mr. Samuel Mossman a paper "On the Inundation and Subsidence of the Yangtze River."

ROYAL UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION.

In the course of a paper which Colonel E. W. Bray read here on Wednesday last (Lieut.-General Eardley Wilmot in the chair), "On the Military Advantages Obtainable from Field Manœuvres in Time of Peace, and on the Duties of an Umpire Staff in Sham Fights" the lecturer referred to field reviews in India, and afterwards to the Indian Commissariat Department, which latter he instanced as a model for the Home Commissariat or anomalous so-called Control "Department."

Colonel Bray said he had served in the English army for thirty-two years, and had played his own small part in a good many sham battles and fights in different parts of the world under many generals; he was sorry to say that some of the real engagements he had seen might be described as "shams" and not "battles." He was present at Ferozepore in December, 1842, after the retreat of our army from Affghanistan. This retreat was called "a retirement from the country," the French would call it "taking up a fresh strategical base;" and so it was, only we were kicked out of Affghanistan by the Affghans as a primary operation. The troops then assembled at Ferozepore were 35,000 men of all arms—a splendid opportunity of practising field manœuvres on a grand scale. What was done? absolutely nothing but a few common brigade drills, a big march past for the edification of the Sikh General who was encamped close by with 8,000 men, and a field-day. The next day the Sikh General gave us a march past, too; but followed by a sham fight, which was acknowledged to be much better than ours. Now what caused this unsatisfactory state of things in our army?—and why has this gone on for a century or more when other European nations have improved these very things, and reduced great manœuvres and sham fights to an art—to high military art? He had served under many first-rate men, and he knew, he thought, the reason of their failures in these matters. With good and accomplished soldiers, these failures resulted from the following causes, viz. :—1. No rules were laid down in the English Army for large operations, manœuvres or sham fights with a real working enemy in time of peace, and no attempt was ever made to use an "Umpire Staff" (on the Prussian principle) to smooth over the unavoidable difficulties which must occur when there is no shot or shell to mark the progress of the fight. 2. Troops were never evenly divided, or sufficiently evenly divided, for the purpose of carrying out an operation. 3. The opposing commanders were never allowed full liberty of action to carry out the "General Idea," or plan of manœuvre. 4. There was an absence of real military criticism. These four instances of shortcoming had been sufficient to paralyse all attempts at successful and brilliant displays of military talent in time of peace.

The success of experimental encampments like that at Aldershot and manœuvring campaigns was to a considerable degree dependent on the commissariat, or, as the modern term is, the Control arrangements. Col. Bray drew a comparison between the home "Control" arrangements and the Control and Commissariat Staff of our Indian system. He should (he said) like to hear of this name "Control" being changed to "Commissariat Staff Corps," as their present name did them great harm, it being absurd to call a man a Controller who controlled nothing. The real Controller is the General or other officer who commands. The so-called Controller is only a Commissariat staff officer acting under his orders. In India there is an admirable Commissariat Department. There is nothing better, or, perhaps, so good, in Europe. In India it is called the "Commissariat Staff," and is commanded and managed by officers of the Indian army who have a specialty for this line, assisted by conductors and sub-conductors who are all selected sergeants, corporals, or privates from regiments serving in India, who receive high pay and rise to the rank of conductor, but not higher. Then there is a large staff of native officials of different ranks, who are very sharp, intelligent men, who keep the accounts, arrange contracts, look after the stores, &c., &c. In the Indian Commissariat, also, the officers hold real executive Commissioned rank, which is acknowledged by the rest of the army and the men they command; for they are merely officers on staff-employ, and they keep their places on the lists of the Staff Corps, and are promoted to the higher ranks of captain, major, and colonel by length of service, viz, captain in twelve, major in twenty, lieut.-colonel in twenty-six, and colonel in thirty-two years.

This was a very different thing from the anomalous Control Department established by Mr. Cardwell and superintended by Sir Henry Storks. "I defy any man," observed Colonel Bray, "to recollect whether an army service officer is a Controller, Assistant, or Deputy, or Deputy Assistant Controller."

The remainder of the lecture was upon the duties of the Umpire Staff, as now carried out experimentally at Aldershot, and the formation of troops in order of battle.

The point to be considered by the commanders and the umpires in a sham fight was whether the end or object justified a certain loss of men in making the attack. Attacks cannot be made without loss—an omelette cannot be made without a breaking of eggs! The troops must be kept under cover until the point of attack has been determined on, and then the troops must advance under fire. The Prussians at their manœuvres are very fond of moving their men in columns, under what would be very damaging fire; but they say that infantry must be brought up under fire in columns to the point at which they propose to deploy; and that it is not possible to advance infantry in long wabbling lines over long distances to avoid fire. The Prussian line of attack is three deep. But we English have more confidence in lines, and are more accustomed to move in line and fight in line. Our cavalry are altogether too cautious, and display little enterprise. The Prussian order of battle is "To fight in a deep order, yet so that when great and rapid results are to be attained, the broader front can be re-established at any moment." This was a very valuable rule; particularly to us who are given to fighting in long weak lines without supports, second lines (columns), or reserves; by such a form of disposition the lines may be pierced or outflanked by the general who fights in deep order. This applied also to our cavalry, where we see constantly working two regiments in two long straight lines; the second three, four, or five hundreds yards in rear of the first; the second line being so far behind that it could scarcely save the first from a complete overthrow. This was entirely different from the German plan, which is never to attack on the front alone, but at the same time on one or both flanks.

In conclusion, Colonel Bray remarked that the "Umpire Staff" system, which had only been on trial at Aldershot for a few weeks, although it was not yet in proper working order, and although as yet imperfectly understood, had already made a vast change in an Aldershot field-day. The white band of the Umpires, like the wand of a magician, had suddenly turned the time-honoured Battles of Cocked-hat-wood and Elmore-hill into practical and instructive realities.

Miscellaneous.

Mr. J. Melvill.—It is reported that the present Assistant Under-Secretary of State at the India-office, Mr. James Cosmo Melvill, eldest son of the late Sir J. C. Melvill, so long Secretary to the East India Company, is about to retire on a liberal pension. The name of his successor has not, as yet, been made public. Mr. Melvill's uniform urbanity will cause his retirement to be much regretted.

Dr. E. J. Waring.—In the list of the recently elected Fellows of the Royal College of Physicians, London, we notice the name of Dr. Edward J. Waring (late of the Indian Medical Service), editor of the "Pharmacopœia of India," and other good medical works.

Indian Funds.—The following notice was issued from the Bank of England on Aug. 21:—"India £5 per Cent. Stock—India £4 per Cent Stock.—Transmission of Dividend Warrants by post.—Notice is hereby given that any holder of the above-mentioned stock, residing within the United Kingdom, may have his dividend warrant sent to his address by post, on filling up and sending to the chief accountant of the Bank of England a form of application which may be obtained at the Bank of England, or at any of its branches."

Military Boots.—Writing on this subject, an infantryman affirms that the boot now in wear amongst the infantry is useless, and that the experimental one issued to the 97th Regiment is next door to it. Laces in a campaign are dangerous, troublesome, and a nuisance; for a man might as well be barefooted as without laces, and in the field laces are not always to be had. What our army wants, in our correspondent's opinion, is a half-Wellington, and until it gets that it will never be properly shod. The Prussians get rid of the wet-sock difficulty by simply getting rid of the sock itself when the long boot is worn. They line the boot with a thin felt, and this is, in a large measure, the reason the German army marches so well.—Army and Navy Gazette.

The Astronomers in the East.—Nature states that the Government have acceded to the request of the British Association with respect to the proposed Eclipse Expedition. We may therefore hope for the most important series of observations along a line extending from the Neilgherry Hills in India to Cape York in Australia. The observation in India will be entrusted to Mr. Pogson, Colonel Tennant, and Captain Herschel. Mr. Lockyer has been requested to observe in Ceylon. The instruments will be sent out to Australia by next mail, and those for India will follow shortly. As before, the Government not only help in money but in transport, camping, and the like. The Government have also agreed to undertake photographic observations of the approaching Transit of Venus.

The New Act on the Judicial Committee.—On Wednesday the Act to make further provision for the despatch of business by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council was issued. Within twelve months four additional members of the Judicial Committee are to be appointed, either judges of the courts at Westminster or judges of courts in India, as described. With pensions, they are to receive £5,000 a-year each. The judges are to hold their office as other judges. The term "Superior Courts at Westminster" means her Majesty's Superior Courts of Law and Equity at Westminster, inclusive of the Court of Probate and Divorce and the High Court of Admiralty. Doubts have arisen as to the pension of the judge of the Probate and Divorce Court, and it is to be the same as the puisne judges of the Superior Courts. The Judicial Committee will not sit till November, and no positive arrangement, it is understood, has as yet been made as to the "new judges."

Robbery from the India-office.—Charles Nobbs, a porter employed in the India-office, was indicted at the Middlesex Session, on the 21st inst., for stealing a hearthrug, knives and forks, dinner napkins, paper, and other articles belonging to her Majesty the Queen. Mr. Poland prosecuted on behalf of the Treasury. The prisoner is the person who was, on February 12, 1870, charged with causing the death of his wife—or, rather, a person with whom he lived—by throwing her over Westminster-bridge into the Thames. He was remanded seven times, and was ultimately tried and acquitted at the Central Criminal Court. The body of the woman was recovered, after being in the water three weeks. The charge against the prisoner was for purloining several valuable documents from the India-office, and selling them as waste paper. The accused, who made no defence, was convicted. Mr. Serjeant Cox said he had a great mind to send him to penal servitude, but the sentence was eighteen months' imprisonment with hard labour.

Launch of the "Scindia."—The screw steamer Scindia was launched from the yard of Messrs. Oswald and Co., Pallion, Sunderland, on Thursday, the 17th inst. She is built for Messrs. C. M. Norwood and Co., of Hull, for their Red Cross Line of steamers between London and Calcutta, and is 2,150 tons register. Her dimensions are—length 300ft. between perpendiculars, 310ft. over all, 35ft. beam, and 25ft. deep. She is built with full poop and topgallant forecastle and hurricane deck-house, and fitted with first-class accommodation for thirty passengers, every care being taken to give a thorough ventilation for the Indian climate. The vessel as she left the stocks was named the Scindia by Mrs. John F. Norwood, of Hull, the wife of the principal owner, in the presence of a large number of visitors. The Scindia is to be commanded by Captain Law, who already has had considerable experience in the Eastern trade via the Suez Canal, and was late in command of the screw steamer Russia, of the Red Cross Line. This is the largest steamer yet launched on the Wear, and the builders have on the stocks, to be launched in about six weeks, a sister vessel, and are in negotiation for the building of two more similar vessels for the same firm and line. Both steamers are to be fitted with compound surface-condensing engines of 200 nominal horse power by the builders.

THE HIMALAYAN TEAS.—A recent number of the Annalen der Chemie und Pharmacie contains the result of an interesting investigation on Himalaya tea by Th. Zoeller. The results lead to the conclusion that Himalaya tea is quite equal to the best Chinese tea, but it must remain undecided whether the presence of theobromine is accidental, or constitutes a distinction; the results also bear out the experience of tea planters, that the youngest leaves of the tea plant give the best quality. In reference to the action of tea upon the human system, the author again points to the richness in potash, the importance of which in nutrition has been demonstrated by Kemmerich's experiments.

THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL WILLOUGHBY.—Major-General Michael Franklin Willoughby, C.B., of the Royal Artillery (Bombay), recently deceased, served in command of the artillery with a field detachment in the Mahee Kanta in 1822 and 1823, and with the field force in 1824, during which period he was present at the storming of Godsa, and forced an entry into the fort of Champaneer by blowing open the gate, and was present at the subsequent reduction of the hill fort of Powaughur in 1824. Commanded the Bombay Foot Artillery at the siege and surrender of Kittoor in 1824; commanded the Bombay Foot Artillery in the operations in Kattiawar in 1825; commanded the artillery, with the force under Brigadier Bayly, in the Red Sea, in 1839, and was present at the bombardment and capture of Aden; commanded a battery at the battle of Hyderabad in 1843, for which service he received a medal, and was nominated Companion of the Bath. He was for many years on the staff of his regiment, and on that of the garrison of Bombay, and subsequently held in succession three important appointments in the Bombay Ordnance—viz., Agent for Gunpowder, Principal Commissary of Ordnance, and Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines, the last-mentioned appointment during the worst period of the Indian Mutiny. In consequence of his extensive knowledge of ordnance and military stores, in the year 1858 he was appointed to the India Office Staff appointment of Deputy Inspector-General of Stores for India, and on the 8th February, 1859, he became Inspector of Stores for India, and finally retired from the public service in March, 1870.

RECIPROCITY.—The following letter appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette:—"SIR,—I have no doubt that the proposal, which seems to be so popular with the military doctrinaires, to fill the junior appointments in the Civil Service with deserving old soldiers, as a means of encouragement helping to facilitate recruiting, is a very excellent device. But I have another device, also excellent of its kind, wherewith to supplement it. I think it would be extremely advantageous to our national interests to give the command of some of our regiments to superannuated Government clerks. Such rewards might draw a better class of men into the Civil Service, and stimulate them to greater industry during the period of their official service. Of course, it might be said that this would be rather hard upon military men, and that they might resent the appearance of interlopers from another service. And this, certainly, is not an unreasonable objection. But I think it just probable that the Civil Service might also consider an importation from the ranks of the army into our Government offices not a little unfair. A civil servant has no special freedom from resentments. If you prick him, does he not bleed? The service is becoming worse and worse every year, the rewards fewer, the inducements less. In these days of competitive examinations a Government servant of thirty years' standing has no more chance of obtaining employment for his son in the permanent service than his butcher or his grocer; indeed, not so much, as the selling of meat or groceries is more lucrative than Government employ, and so the tradesman can spend more on education. A few very humble appointments, however, of a more temporary character, are still left, not requiring high cramming, and those it is now proposed to take away from civilians. But, as I have said, if we can only get the command of a few regiments of horse and foot when we are superannuated, it may go far to reconcile us to the military interlopers. I know half a dozen old boys from Whitehall or Somerset House who would undertake at a fortnight's notice to march a thousand men each to Dartmoor, and feed them well upon the way.—I am, yours obediently, "C. S."

THE LATE SIR JAMES OUTRAM.—The Pall Mall Gazette says, "We are indebted to a friend of Sir James Outram for some interesting extracts from his letters. Even in the midst of the complicated affairs which so fully occupied his time and attention at Oude, the war in the Crimea was always uppermost in Outram's thoughts, and he longed to take a part in it. Writing from Lucknow on March 20, 1855, he said, 'I must confess I am beginning to despond regarding the war in the Crimea. I don't like trusting to any co-operation from the Turks from Eupatoria. They certainly will be defeated by the Russians if they move out of their entrenchments, and I see not how otherwise we can assemble sufficient forces to complete the investment of Sevastopol, and at the same time keep in check the enormous army Russia will now have in the Crimea. Affairs are very gloomy also at Kars, and I regret much I did not go there instead of coming here. All the pomps and luxuries I have enjoyed are grating to my feelings, for I feel that I ought to be sharing the dangers and privations of my comrades in the field.' Four months later the intelligence of our successes in the Crimea induced him to take a more cheerful view of the subject; his only fear was that 'Russia may succumb before we have expelled her from Georgia and Circassia, which ought to be accomplished before we concede peace to her, if we look to our own interests and those of Turkey, which are more seriously jeopardised so long as that door of aggression remains open to Russia than even were she in possession of the Danubian Principalities. The ratifications of peace with Persia promised to give Outram a little rest, but the rebellion broke out in India, and he hastened to place his services at Lord Canning's disposal. His disinterested and generous conduct towards Sir H. Havelock on the occasion of his appointment to the command of the Dinapore and Cawnpore divisions of the Bengal army is well known; nevertheless, his own statement of the circumstances, contained in a private note, will be read with deep interest. In a letter, dated Cawnpore, September 17, 1857, he writes:—"After staying at Government House six days, I was sent up country by steamer to take command of two divisions of the Bengal army, with the chief commissionership of Oude, still retaining the appointment of Governor-General's agent for Rajpootana besides. I wished to be relieved of the latter, that my locum tenens, Sir J. Lawrence, one of my companions in chase of Dost Mahomed over the Hindoo Coosh in 1839, might be confirmed, but the Governor-General insisted on my retaining it. After seeing to the districts under my charge as I came along, I pushed on here with such reinforcements as I could gather to enable Havelock to make another advance upon Lucknow. I joined him the night before last, and the troops were all up yesterday morning, since when we have been preparing a boat-bridge across the Ganges, which, and the fascining of some swamps beyond, will be finished by to-morrow morning, and all the troops, &c., will, I trust, be over by next day. I have given the command of the rescuing force to Havelock; for it would have been very unfair to supersede him after having fought so long and so gallantly, now that we have, under the blessing of God, the means of accomplishing that object. I myself shall accompany as 'commissioner' and as volunteer under him until the object has been accomplished."

H.M.'s 103RD FUSILIERS.—With reference to the late inspection of this old regiment a correspondent writes to the Times pointing out that Prince Arthur omitted to mention Seringapatam and Poonah or Kirkee among the places at which the regiment had distinguished itself. At Seringapatam the whole regiment volunteered to storm the breach (a part only being selected). The forlorn hope was under the gallant Sergt. Graham, who was killed while in the act of planting the British colours. At Kirkee, in 1817, the regiment marched forty miles into action and won the battle under Col. Burr—aided by the Bombay (Sepoy) Grenadiers and a few guns of the Bombay artillery—the odds against them being quite as great as at Plassey under Clive. The 1st regiment of Bombay Fusiliers was raised in 1662. It was a Royal regiment, and the first body of British troops which served in India, as it assisted in the capture of Bombay from the Portuguese in that year. The second colour bears in the centre the East India Company's crest under a crown, and the following inscriptions, "The Royal Tiger," superscribed, "Plassey," "Buxar; "The Elephant," superscribed "Carnatic," "Mysore," "Guzerat," "Seringapatam," "Kirkee," "Beni Boo Aly," "Punjab," "Mooltan," "Goojerat." The lion rampant and crown is the device of the regiment. The old colours, which have been deposited in St. Thomas's Church, were presented in 1846 by Gen. Sir Charles Napier, who addressed the regiment as follows:—"Soldiers, I have this day the honour to present new colours to the oldest regiment in the service of the East India Company, a regiment which cannot tread on any part of our Eastern territory where history has not been illustrated by its glory and its blood, and also both in victory and defeat. To you, Fusiliers, I have only to refer to past exploits to recall to your memories the battle-fields under Clive, Lawrence, Coote, Cornwallis, Smith, and others—from Plassey to Beni Boo Ali, ay, and long before Plassey, including innumerable sieges and assaults unsurpassed in number and in daring by any regiment in the world, but I will speak of only two, which appear to me to be the most celebrated; I mean the capture of Ahmedabad and Seringapatam. At Ahmedabad the two principal men, Ensign Hienne and Sergeant Hugh Fridge (both of your regiment), led the stormers to the wall, and sword in hand they mounted the breach and won, Hienne his lieutenancy, and Fridge the honour of carrying the colours for which he had so bravely fought. A few years after the same courageous soldier, the same Hugh Fridge (now become Captain Fridge), mounted the immortal breach of Seringapatam, close following the more young, more active, and more renowned Sergeant James Graham, and who there fell, distinguished by a glorious death in the service of the British Throne. Soldiers, it must rouse the minds of military men to think of the exultation of your regiment, as, in a dense column, it dashed up the breach, following the gallant Graham, and beheld the hero waving the colours of England on the summit, amidst the flashing of Mysorean scimitars, the fire, the smoke, and the loud cheers of the stormers, as they fiercely won their bloody footing aloft. Take your splendid colours, soldiers, refulgent with the glories of a hundred battles! Ye are as good men and as strong men to do battle as the heroes who went before you, and the day will come when in future combats you shall renovate your fame as you have this day renovated your standards." In 1848 Sergeant John Bennett, of the same regiment, planted the British colours on the breach at Mooltan, for which service he received his commission as ensign.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Oberon, Sowill, which arrived at Liverpool on Aug. 21 from Bombay, reports that on May 3 she experienced a most violent gale, during which the vessel was thrown on her beam ends for twelve hours, and the poop cabin completely gutted on the lee side, which necessitated all the cargo contained therein to be thrown overboard in order to right the vessel. From June 16 to 18, when off the Cape of Good Hope, she experienced a severe gale from the westward.

The Rialto, from Bombay, arrived at Liverpool on Aug. 21, was in collision there on the 22nd. She also, on April 30, in lat. 15 N., lon. 70 E., and on May 1 encountered a most violent gale, and the weather continued very heavy until the 4th; also, that from Cape Clear to Tuscar she experienced hard gales and thick weather.

The cargo in the lower forehold of the Hoogly, from Calcutta, in the Victoria Docks, which arrived at Gravesend on Aug. 21, has taken fire; cargo being discharged on the quay.

IRRIGATION.—After twenty years' delay, the Taptee irrigation scheme, whereby the thirsty but fertile plains of mid-Guzerat are to be perenially watered, was put in hand rather more than a year ago. The plans were considerably modified from those first drawn up by Captains Trevor and Chambers. The dam or anicut which is to arrest the monsoon floods and secure a supply for the irrigating canal is placed, we believe, on the site originally chosen. That is, situate in the moderately elevated country of the Mandavee districts, nearly thirty miles east of the railway line and Surat. In the original plan we observe one canal was intended to be taken along the southern side of the Taptee all the way to Surat, or at least up to the railway, another smaller canal branching off from the other at Currode, tending on towards Bardolee. All this part of the original project was omitted from the modern and accepted plan. Even in its reduced and modest shape, the Taptee scheme is estimated to cost over thirty lakhs, and "the section recommended for immediate execution" only 9½ lakhs.—Times of India.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, VIA SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those VIA BRINDISI every Friday, at 6 P.M.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

PARTIES AT A DISTANCE requiring Artificial Teeth may have them supplied, in partial or complete Sets, by Messrs. GABRIEL's System, on sending particulars of their cases, with a remittance of Ten Shillings (which will be deducted from the charge made for the Artificial Teeth), when the apparatus for taking a model of the mouth will be forwarded with all necessary instructions. Teeth supplied by other Dentists, not having proved satisfactory, can be remodelled on Messrs. GABRIEL's system, at a moderate cost.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH REPAIRED and returned by following post.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is worn like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

LIVER COMPLAINTS AND DISORDERS OF THE BOWELS.—It is impossible to exaggerate the extraordinary virtue of this medicine in the treatment of all affections of the liver, or irregularities of the bowels. In cases of depraved or superabundant bile, these Pills, taken freely, have never been known to fail. In bowel complaints they are equally efficacious, but they should then be taken rather more sparingly, for every medicine in the form of an aperient requires caution when the bowels are disordered, though a more gentle or more genial aperient than these Pills in moderate doses has never yet been discovered. If taken according to the printed instructions, they not only cure the complaint, but improve the whole system.

ALEXANDRA PALACE and MUSWELL HILL ESTATE TONTINE.—Offices: 5 and 6, Great Winchester-street-buildings, E.C.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—Notice to the Public. Intending Subscribers can obtain Tickets to View the Palace and Grounds on application to the Secretary, stating name and address.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—Arrangements will be made for an early Opening of the Palace and Grounds to the Public, for completing the Railway into the Palace, as well as other railway communication.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—The advantages to Subscribers of One Guinea and upwards are fully detailed in the Prospectus, and Subscribers incur no liability, and must benefit.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—Art Union.—£500 for a Guinea.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—The advantages offered to the Public were thus summed up by the Times of July 18th:—"Under the title of 'Alexandra Palace and Muswell Hill Estate Tontine,' certificates representing 850,000 guineas are about to be issued, which will entitle the holders, in proportion as they may possess a single certificate of one guinea or any larger number, to participate in the various objects of the institution, or to take their share of the entire property of the Palace and Grounds of 498 acres, should they, fifteen years hence, be among the surviving holders. Under an elaborate but ingenious plan framed for the purpose, each subscriber will have several options as to the mode in which he may obtain a return for his investment, and be virtually guaranteed against loss. The Trustees and Board of Directors consist of experienced persons familiar with the management of London properties and of public establishments, and it may be hoped that the result of their arrangements will be to furnish to the population of the North of the Metropolis a place of resort as attractive as that on the other side at Sydenham."

ALEXANDRA PALACE.—The object of the Tontine is to provide for all classes of the inhabitants of the Metropolis, and especially of its Northern and Eastern portions and suburbs, and for the many thousands of country excursionists, a Grand Institution of healthful recreation and elevating instruction, which will combine the solid advantages of the South Kensington Museum and Schools of Art, with the lighter pleasures and pastimes of the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, thus giving effect to the large and enlightened views of the late Prince Consort.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 8; Agra and Madras, Aug. 6; Calcutta, Aug. 6.

THE Bombay papers report the arrival at Bombay of the Maharajah of Gwalior, and his subsequent proceedings, which included a visit to the troopship Jumna. His Highness seems to have been duly impressed with the great size of the vessel, and the noble accommodation it provides for a crowd of passengers. The ball he gave at Poonah before his departure for Bombay is described as a very brilliant affair.

MR. R. CARNAC'S latest report on the cotton prospects of Berar and the Wardah valley is more encouraging than its predecessor. In spite of much rain the cotton in the Wardah valley was doing very well, and the subsequent fine weather was favourable for weeding. Both there and in Berar the plants appear to be "very healthy and well forward." It is believed that the acreage now under cotton is quite equal to that of former years. West Berar sends a report not quite so hopeful, more rain being still wanted to make the plants safe.

IN Gujerat, especially about Broach, the cotton crops are reported to be "in splendid condition." That part of India has been swept by heavy floods, which have done much harm to the Bombay and Baroda Railway between Baroda and Ahmedabad. One bridge and several parts of the embankment have been carried away, so that passengers can no longer get beyond Baroda by rail. The interruption however is only for a short time.

THE Bombay Municipality finds itself at issue with the Bombay Government on the question of paying the police. The Justices have been told that their Resolution for discontinuing payment of the police from the Municipal Fund is against the law, which provides that no reduction of police outlay can be made without the sanction of the Governor in Council. If the Bench cannot somehow defray the necessary charges, they will have to fall back on new taxation—a prospect not very agreeable to a heavily-taxed community.

ACCORDING to the latest news received in India from Persia, the sufferings of the Parsees in the south had been relieved by the help they got from India; but among the Mohammedans the prevailing distress was aggravated by the spread of cholera. Even in the middle of July numbers of poor wretches were dying of hunger in Bushair or wandering helplessly about the streets.

LORD NAPIER has issued an order establishing a system of garrison instruction throughout India. A superintendent with a staff of eleven Garrison Instructors forms the new department. The former will have a staff salary of Rs. 500 a month, and the latter Rs. 400. Five Instructors are assigned to Bengal, four to Madras, and two to Bombay. Officers attending the Instructor's course will have to be regular and work hard, on pain of being remanded to their regiments. The same fate will befal those who fail to pass at the end of their course.

WE are glad to learn that the doom so lately pronounced on Colonel Mowbray Thomson is not for the present to be enforced. Thanks to Lord Napier's timely intercession, it is possible that a brave and generally respected officer will not suffer so cruel a penalty as forced retirement on a starving allowance for an act of well-meant irregularity. The penalty at any rate is to be deferred until the Secretary for India has had time to reconsider the subject by the light of a memorial forwarded from Colonel Thomson. The feeling in India seems to set strongly in favour of that officer, and it is said that Lord Napier had been at first unduly biassed against him by an unfair "confidential report." That form of moral assassination never found much countenance in the old Indian Army, and the old dislike of it will hardly be lessened by the use to which it has been turned in the present instance.

THE old hatreds of the Hindu and the Mussulman, founded on differences of race, religion, and historical surroundings, have lately been flaring up in the North-West of India with a fierceness which calls for grave reflection. At Bareilly and Pillibheet it was the Mohammedans who broke the peace by wantonly assailing Hindoos. In the Punjab on the contrary it is the Sikh-Hindoos who fall upon Mohammedan butchers. In both provinces the rival sects and races are more evenly matched and less peaceful by nature than in almost any other part of India. The Mohammedans of the North-West have not yet forgotten the glories of other days when their forefathers held the place now filled by ourselves, and a like feeling still lingers among the Sikhs who little more than twenty years ago were lording it over the Mohammedans of the Punjab. A fair measure of justice has already been dealt out to the Mohammedan rioters in Rohilkund, and it is to be hoped that stern penalties will be enforced on the Hindu murderers of Lahore, Amritsar, and Goordaspore. The rulers of India must show themselves prompt to suppress all forms of civil disorder wherever they appear, and whoever may be the culprits. To win the trust and affection of all the great sections of the subject peoples is a task which may not be accomplished for ages to come, if indeed for ever; but evenhanded justice will at any rate strengthen the foundations of our rule by the respect it never fails to inspire among the governed. There is no harm however in taking timely precautions against the turbulent fanaticism of Sikhs and Mussulmans. We are not sorry therefore to note that the garrison of Amritsar, the headquarters of Sikh Orthodoxy, has been strengthened by a company of Highlanders from Jalundar and of Sepoys from Meeanmeer.

ACCORDING to the Friend of India, the Sanitary Commission have strongly advised the substitution of iron or some kind of metal pails for the immemorial massak used by British regiments in India. It is complained that the Bheesties—those "angels" in name if not in deed—do not keep their massaks clean, and thus the purest water becomes tainted. Lord Napier is said to have stood up for the good old leather water-jugs, which have refreshed so many a thirsty soldier on the line of march. He maintains that pails would prove no cleaner than massaks in the absence of cleanliness among the water-carriers. Lord Mayo however seems to have fancied the pails, which are now to be used experimentally at four military stations. It is possible that they may answer well enough in cantonments; but imagine a Bheestie following a regiment in the field with a hard inflexible water-can at his back, instead of the yielding sheepskin tied up at the neck to keep the water cool and fresh! If the soldiers themselves were asked for their opinion, we have little doubt which way their votes would go.

ACCORDING to a recent telegram, the field force destined to act against the Loshais will consist of two columns—the Cachar column to be formed by the 32nd, 42nd, and 44th N.I., while the Chittagong column will be made up from the 2nd and 4th Ghoorkas and the 27th N.I. Considering the nature of the country they have to march through, and of the enemy they may encounter, it is a pity perhaps that some Ghoorkas could not have been added to the former column. The 32nd Punjábies however are not to be despised, and the other two regiments were recruited from Assam and Sylhet. The 27th are also Punjábies, fit for fighting if hardly suited to the climate. Both columns are to march about the 1st December, and each will be accompanied by half a Punjab mountain battery, two mortars, and a company of Sappers and Miners. It is believed that the Cachar column will be commanded by Major-general Bourchier, and the Chittagong column by Colonel Brownlow. Altogether the force will probably muster about five thousand strong—a number quite large enough for the work they may have to do.

A CALCUTTA telegram of September 2 reports that the Viceroy held a Durbar at Simlah on Thursday last, which was attended by twenty-two hill chiefs of the Protected States between Simlah and the Sutlej. Lord Mayo enlarged on the peace and prosperity enjoyed by his guests under British rule, and exhorted them to show justice and moderation in return for such great blessings.

A CALCUTTA TELEGRAM reports the interruption of traffic on the Eastern Bengal Railway through the floods.

INTENDING candidates for the Indian Civil Service will hardly find a trustworthy guide to the knowledge of their own tongue in Mr. Bigsby's "Catechism of the History of the English Language." We fear that the Examiners will not smile favourably upon the youth who informs them, on Mr. Bigsby's authority, that our word "play" comes not from Old English plegian, but from French plaire, that "ass" has no connection with asinus, but only with some Hebrew source, and that "game"—from Old English gamen—may be traced back to Greek gameô, "to marry." A yet more startling derivation is that of "lord" from Saxon hlaf, "high" and Latin ortus, "born." Those who are still in doubt as to the true components of Hlaford and Hlæfdige, our "lord" and "lady," will be grateful to Mr. Bigsby for the very odd light he has thrown upon these words, and will give up trying to degrade a lord into a "loafward." Some people will be surprised to hear that sport comes from a Greek word speitzô, "to jest," of whose existence they had not been aware; while others will awake from fond dreams of the early prevalence of their mother-tongue, to learn that not till the reign of Elizabeth did English become "the fixed basis of our parlance." The derivation of posthumous from humus, "earth," is another novelty which we commend to the compilers of English dictionaries. Enthusiasm from thuo, "I am ardent," will furnish a new sensation to readers of "Liddell and Scott."

WE are sorry to see that no attempt has yet been made to secure the arrival of our Indian reliefs at their several stations before the middle of the hot weather. It appears that the 68th Foot cannot under present arrangements reach Bombay before the end of April next. That is a bad enough prospect for the men, each of whom will have cost the Indian Government several times the price of a recruit despatched by the East India Company. But if the regiment is doomed to march in May from the seacoast inland to Mhow, that station will in all likelihood become the hospital if not the grave of many a young fellow who left England in good health, and might have rubbed easily through his term of Indian service, had he only reached Bombay a few weeks earlier. If the Army and Navy Gazette however is rightly informed, there is just a hope that one of the regiments now quartered at Poonah may go on to Mhow, thus making room for the 68th in the healthiest of the Bombay stations.

THE Mont Cenis Tunnel, which pierces the Alps some sixteen miles away from the old pass of Mont Cenis, at a height of nearly 4,000 feet above the sea-level, is to be formally opened on the 17th of this month. From the French side of the mountain, above Fourneaux, the tunnel gradually rises to a height of 4,377 feet above the sea. Thence it slopes down about 44 feet to Bardonecchia on the Italian side, where, emerging from the bowels of the mountain, the railway linking France with Italy is carried down the hill side pass Salabertrand and Exilles into the valley of Susa, at Bussolino, a distance of thirty miles from the tunnel's mouth. All the heavy work which Italy on her side had undertaken has thus been successfully accomplished after many years of persevering effort. On the French side however there are still some ten miles of unfinished railway which can hardly be placed in working order before November, if even then. The chief blame for this delay is ascribed by the Times with apparent truth to French jealousy of Italian success, rather than to any hindrance caused by the late war. Self-interest however must still be a powerful lever to French co-operation in an enterprise which must benefit France even if it hurts Marseilles. In fact the mischief to Marseilles is done already; for the stream of Anglo-Indian traffic will never again be diverted into its former channel, and the French will hardly care to increase by further delays the amount of the forfeit they pledged themselves to pay if the tunnel was opened before their part of the work should have been completed. The Italians have fulfilled their share of the bargain within the stipulated time. It only remains for France to make the best of a still unpalatable issue, and so enable the Indian mails to save another day or two on their passage home by Brindisi. To men of business in this country it will be a great boon to get their Indian letters on Friday, in time for sending off an answer on the following day.

WITH regard to the ventilation of the great Tunnel, there seems no good reason for the fears so often expressed beforehand by people distant from the spot. For some weeks past experimental trains have been running almost daily through the eight miles of tunnel ventilated by shafts two and three thousand feet deep. No annoyance from bad air seems to have been felt—a result which speaks strongly in favour of this grandest achievement in railway engineering. Travellers from England will probably be thankful if the air in the Mont Cenis Tunnel prove no worse than that of the Metropolitan Railway, and by all accounts the former at present is a good deal the purer of the two.

THE penultimate number of the Saturday Review contained a well-considered article on "Our Military Position in India." With many of its chief points we cannot but agree. It would no doubt add greatly to the efficiency of our British garrisons in India if they were divided among fewer stations, and a large proportion of them kept for two-thirds of the year among the lower ranges of the Indian Hills. It has long been justly urged too, that the whole Indian army should be remodelled into a number of army-corps, each under its lieutenant general, and the whole governed by one Commander-in-Chief, acting as Minister for War, and leaving all military details to the corps-commanders. There is probably room too for settlements of retired soldiers in the hills and highlands, who would obtain land and other privileges on condition of rendering military service at need, either through themselves or some of their family. Some of the reasons moreover advanced for refusing to reestablish the old local British army have at any rate a plausible look. But we altogether protest against the well-worn assumption that the old company's Europeans proved wanting in discipline and efficiency in spite of the "standards" set before them by the Queen's troops in India. This absurd calumny seems as hard of killing as the proverbial Hydra, or some of the popular fallacies against which the Saturday loves to tilt. We are almost tired of repeating that the "White Mutiny" of 1860-1 was confined to mere recruits and to a regiment raised only two years before, that the partial insubordination was provoked by an act of stupid injustice; and that, under all provocations, the older regiments and batteries remained conspicuously loyal. If we remember right, the soldierly conduct of these latter was openly attested by the general officers under whom they served. At any rate, the fact of their good behaviour is beyond dispute. As for the efficiency of these old local corps, that question is sufficiently answered by the history of the last hundred years, and by the matchless services of the Bengal and Madras Fusiliers, and the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Artillery throughout the Mutiny campaigns. Both in general discipline and real efficiency these troops themselves set the standard of excellence which the Saturday charges them with having failed to emulate. In point of fact, until the days of the Mutiny, there was no kind of standard which the Company's European Artillery could have followed except their own, a standard formed out of the remembrance of their own past achievements, aided by an intelligent study of the latest improvements at home and of the best examples of artillery practice in modern warfare. And yet, by the confession of competent judges, the old Indian Artillery was second to none in the world. With them, and indeed with their comrades in the European Infantry, rivalry of race served every purpose of military efficiency. For the honour of their own country, they were bound to show their native comrades the best that English soldiers could do, and they did show it on every occasion. Recent experience has certainly failed to prove the superior discipline of an army periodically replaced from England; for never in the latter days of the Company's rule was insubordination so rife among English soldiers as it is now.

With regard to the use of India as a training-ground for the home army, military opinion is by no means unanimous. There are many reasons for thinking that service in such a country is not the best preparation for European warfare; but even if it were, the loss of such a school would be more than counterbalanced by the advantages of a separate local army, whose presence would secure India from being stripped of her English garrisons whenever England happened to need more troops for her own protection, or for the carrying on of a war satisfactorily elsewhere.

The next Overland Mail is due here on Saturday.

Female Education in Madras.—The state of female education in this Presidency, described by the Director of Public Instruction in his report for last year, cannot, the Government observe, be regarded as hopeful, though the increase in pupils is about thirteen per cent. "It appears that seven-eighths of the female education is in the hands of missionary and religious organisations; that only seven Mahomedan girls are under instruction; and that Hindoos and Mahomedans together make up only three-eighths of the whole. The remaining five-eighths are probably Christians. In 1868-69 there were 2,694 Hindoo girls under instruction, three Mahomedans, and 5,402 others. The percentage of Hindoo and Mahomedan girls has therefore risen from thirty-three to thirty-nine per cent. of the whole, which is so far satisfactory, and is probably due to the enhanced grants given on the results system for female pupils. The fact noticed, that village schoolmasters are trying to get as many girls as possible into their schools, is very encouraging. A still greater enhancement of the grants for girls would no doubt further stimulate this movement. 960 girls passed for results grants, 532 for the first or lowest standard, 229 for the second, 150 for the third, and 49 for the fourth. 533 passed from schools in the 6th Division, and 223 from schools in the 5th."—Madras Mail.

THE BRAHMO MARRIAGE BILL.

Since our leader on the Brahmo Marriage Bill appeared, we observe that in the actual copy of the petition sent up against it by the Conservative Brahmos, the clause in defence of bigamy was prudently omitted. On another point, however, no scruples seem to have been felt. Although the memorial purports to be from "the members of the Brahmo Somaj," its managers have circulated it largely among the idolatrous Hindus, very many of whom have been induced to sign it under false representations as to its real nature and professed purpose. This fact, first asserted (with particulars of names and places), in letters from several of the Progressive Brahmos, is now placed beyond all doubt by letters from thirty of the orthodox Hindus in question, who have written to the Indian Mirror to express regret at the deception practised upon them, and to withdraw their names from the memorial. Meanwhile our lively contemporary, the Pall Mall Gazette, publishes some curiously obscurantist remarks on the contest, based upon the assumption that the memorialists really represent the chief majority of the Brahmo body. "'Mr. Sen,' it is to be feared, with something of the wisdom of the serpent, tried to steal a march on his co-religionists." Whether "the wisdom of the serpent" is more traceable in the public and widely-spread agitation carried on for three years by the Brahmo Somaj of India for a much-needed relief to conscience, or in the equivocal statements and false signatures of the counter-memorial of the Adi Brahmo Somaj, may be open to question. The contest "will end, we suspect (says the Pall Mall Gazette), in the Bill being shelved as unnecessary." It is very curious to see this dictum of traditional Hinduism reproduced so naïvely in one of the most intellectual of London journals. But the hopelessness of this reactionary movement is not without witness even here, for the writer adds a faint protest against child-marriage. "The stars in their courses fight against Sisera," and the divisions of Reuben are powerless to avert the result.

INDIA IN 1869.

An official review of India's internal progress during 1869-70 seems, at first sight, rather out of date in the latter half of 1871. But the time for issuing the yearly statement from the India Office must depend in great measure on the time taken up by the local Governments in preparing and forwarding the materials out of which these statements have to be constructed; and the work of preparing and collecting those materials from all parts of our Indian Empire necessarily involves a good deal of laborious delay. If we were minded to grumble at the apparent lateness of the final result, we might still console ourselves with the greater freshness and precision thereby imparted to a review of events already old enough to be half forgotten in this age of high-pressure journalism. It is good now and then to cast our eyes back over what happened two years ago, and to have our memories sharpened up by well-digested summaries of events which have since been getting crowded out of sight by others of more immediate interest. Does it not seem strange for instance to note from the present Report that the spring of 1869 marks the date of Shere Ali's visit to Lord Mayo at Umballa, that Rajpootana suffered heavily during the year from the ravages of locusts and the natural fruits of the previous famine, and that in the first days of 1870 Prince Alfred was exchanging visits with native Indian princes, and varying the usual round of formal sightseeing with intervals of exciting sport?

One useful novelty in the present report may be found in the comparative statements of Receipts and Expenditure, which remind us how hardly the retrenchments and the new taxation of 1869-70 saved India from a deficit little less than that of 1868-9. We are glad too to see that the series of maps introduced into last year's report reappear in the present one. The districts and divisions in each province are clearly marked, and the lines of railway, the rivers, hill-ranges, chief towns, and stations are carefully pointed out. A few sentences are devoted to the net military outlay for the year, which amounted to £15,247,000 on an army of 190,662 officers, under-officers, and men, of whom 6,545 were British officers, and 60,425 non-commissioned officers and privates of the British army, the remainder consisting of native troops, and the whole defended by 484 field guns. This force has since been somewhat reduced, to a point beyond which General Norman deems further reduction impracticable. That may be true enough as regards the native garrisons; but perhaps a fair trial of Sir H. Havelock's scheme for holding India with mounted riflemen might safely lead to the reduction of the English troops by ten thousand men, especially if it were aided by the concentration of the remainder in large stations and in the hills. There is room, too, as General Norman hopes, for economy in the departments, most of all in the Overland Transport Service, which seems to grow costlier every year, and will cost a good deal more if the short service system is extended to India. The health of the troops during the year is noted as good, the average death-rate of Bengal having fallen to 21½ per thousand.

Among the 29 Acts passed by the Supreme Council during the year, Act XXI., or the European Vagrancy Act, and Act VIII. of 1870 against Female Infanticide claim prominent notice. Act XI., which introduced the French standard of weights and measures into India, may be deemed an improvement by believers in the eternal superiority of a standard borrowed from astronomy over one based upon human requirements. Act XVI., which raised the income-tax to 3⅓ per cent., has fortunately been since repealed, to the general satisfaction of an impatient and angry public.

Passing on to the Native Feudatory States immediately controlled from Calcutta, we come upon a well-deserved compliment to Mr. Saunders for his able report on Hyderabad and the Berars. The ceded provinces of East and West Berar contain about 3,000,000 souls within their 18,000 square miles of rich black loam overlying trap and basalt. Blest with an abundant rainfall, numerous streams, and widespreading cotton grounds, the Berars are traversed by a railway which connects them with all the great centres of trade. In Kangaum, the largest cotton-mart of India, a million sterling of money changes hands during five months of the year. The revenue of the Berars has increased in seven years from £420,905 to £794,500. So peaceful are the people that not a single regular soldier is needed for their governance. Cheap and prompt justice has been brought within reach of all; the land-revenue is being settled on a right basis; new jails have superseded the old ones; a sound system of forestry is being established, and popular education is spreading fast over the land. In spite of some heavy charges on the revenue, nearly a quarter of a million sterling in all has been paid over to the Nizam as surplus income, in accordance, we presume, with the treaty arrangements under which the Berars were assigned to the Indian Government. One large item of outlay is for the police, whose duties are made heavier by the lawless propensities of various tribes, "with whom robbery is a profession, a faith, and a mission." Mr. Saunders thinks that the police on the whole do their duty, but fail, like Indian policemen everywhere, in detective skill under a system which forbids the use of torture and all strong measures for the discovery of guilt. The land revenue for 1869 amounted to £448,090, an increase of £13,214 on the previous year. In spite of a reduction in the salt-tax, its yield increased by several thousand pounds. After three years' working, the new system of State education has already issued in 339 schools which educate 11,264 scholars, or about one in 150 of the population. Of this number 762 are girls. A Normal School for masters was opened at Akola in this same year.

In 1868 Berar contributed 233,000 bales of cotton to the 1,334,000 bales sent to England during the year. But owing to bad weather the cotton exports for 1869-70 amounted only to 175,988 bales. On the model farms, where the seeds are carefully selected, and deep ploughing is the rule, 176 lbs. of cleaned cotton were obtained from ordinary fields, and 255 lbs. from fields of the higher class, or three and four times the quantity yielded by an ordinary native field. Of the whole area of the province, 46 per cent. was under tillage, while 29 per cent. more was cultivable. A good deal of new land was brought under tillage during the year. Of the cultivated area about two-thirds were laid out with corn, the rest with cotton. Prices have risen three and fourfold in the last fifteen years; cotton for instance, which fetched 16s. a maund in 1853, is now worth £2. 10s. in East and nearly £3. 6s. in West Berar, while buffaloes have risen from four to eight pounds each. Out of a net profit in 1869 of about ten shillings an acre the ryot paid only half-a-crown to the State, and as cotton alone covered the whole demand for land revenue, two-thirds of the cultivated acreage yielded its occupants a clear profit. The Berar ryot may be deemed fortunate among his kind. To crown the wealth of Berar, coal fields extending over more than 1,000 square miles lie along both sides of the Wardah river, and near them some very valuable beds of iron ore.

The Nizam of the Dakhan still remains sole master of 80,000 square miles of country in the heart of Southern India. Since the death of Afzul-ud-dowlah in 1869, Hyderabad has been virtually governed for his child-heir by Sir Salar Jung, our trusty ally during the Mutiny. To him indeed is mainly owing the great improvement which has come over the country and its affairs in the present century. "The public treasury is full; the Hyderabad Contingent has not fired a hostile shot since the suppression of the Mutiny; the police have been placed on a satisfactory footing; the once dangerous mob of the capital is thoroughly under restraint." The Rohillas and Arabs, those old plagues of the Nizam's Government, of whom there are reckoned to be some eleven thousand in Hyderabad, have lately been kept in pretty good order by a minister thoroughly imbued with the statesman's natural hatred for all forms of lawless turbulence. The state revenue of Hyderabad in 1869-70 amounted to a little over a million and a quarter, and its trade was valued at 3¼ millions a-year. Good first-class roads are still to make there, and the measures taken for keeping the tanks in good repair have not been taken too soon. Education is for the most part limited to private or indigenous schools, but the desire for an improved system of teaching appears to be gaining ground, especially among the higher classes.

The section devoted to Rajpootana begins with a brief abstract of Colonel Brooke's Report on the famine of 1868-9. In spite of a soil largely dependent on the yearly rainfall for its crops, a moderate rainfall produces a very fair harvest, and the vast tracts of sandy plain yield sufficient pasturage for immense herds of camels, horned cattle, and flocks of sheep. Before the famine, which ravaged five-sixths of a province much larger than the British Islands, Marwar alone had at least 2¼ millions of horned cattle, hundreds of which belonged to single households. Of these, of camels, and sheep, large numbers were yearly bred for sale in the neighbouring provinces. The bankers of Marwar appear to be an enterprising and wealthy race, and the ryots themselves are usually well to do. The famine year however witnessed a sad change; one million of people with two million head of cattle having emigrated from Marwar alone; while throughout Rajpootana a million and a quarter of human beings are reckoned to have died of hunger or disease. In Ajmere the Indian Government spent £152,000 in the relief of districts containing only 400,000 souls. Large sums were also spent within their own territory by several of the great native chiefs, and Bombay contributed handsomely to the same object. In May, 1870, Marwar had become a solitude. The grass on its vast plains was "untrodden and uncut;" scarcely a bird or a beast was to be seen; the very jackals were dead, the field-rats starved out, and insect life had sensibly diminished. To crown all, the country is sadly misgoverned by an extravagant minister and a grasping sovereign at the head of a corrupt Court. Troops, establishments, and workpeople call in vain for their arrears of pay, nor can all Colonel Brooke's remonstrances bring about any real amendment in a state of things which cannot last much longer.

Oodipore and Jeypore offer a much more cheering picture. In the former its young Maharana has set up regular criminal and civil courts, in defiance of the petty Sirdars who prefer keeping the law in their own hands; and he purposes introducing a proper revenue-settlement into his dominions. Oodipore or Meywar suffered less from famine than its neighbours, owing to the forethought shown in stocking the granaries at the capital. In 1869-70 the great trade of Jeypore in gold, silver, and precious stones was diminished by the famine, but in other respects that province maintained its lead among native States. Good things were reported by Captain Bradford of the Maharaja's college and his school for the sons of his Thakoors, and much is expected from the School of Arts at Jeypore under the able management of Dr. De Fabeck. The new Council had not fulfilled all the hopes of its princely founder, but with time and patience it may yet prove an administrative success. It is satisfactory also to learn that the turbulent Thakoors of Shekhawatti have been won over to a better frame of mind by the Maharajah's enlightened policy.

INDIAN FINANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—You would confer a great benefit on the Indian Government, and on its creditors, if you would publish the terms of the Indian Government Loans effected during the past five years.

When a Government negotiates loans, either for general purposes or for railways, it should be most careful to make the terms public. It is a duty which it owes equally to its old creditors and to its new.

The credit of the Indian Government with the natives of India was irreparably ruined by its financial proceedings in 1853. In that year the Indian Government offered to pay off certain 5 per Cent. Promissory Notes, but offered in exchange 4 per Cent. Paper. The native bankers and others understood by this proceeding that Government had a surplus in its Treasury; they could not conceive that Government was at that very time contemplating another loan on the ground of promoting Public Works. In 1856 and in the beginning of 1857 some of them did not hesitate to assert that Government had not behaved honourably in changing its debts bearing interest from 5 per Cents. into 4 per Cents.; and they openly declared that their 5 per Cent. Paper ought in justice to be returned to them.

What has been the consequence of the financial manipulation in 1853? Out of 51,000 shareholders and 6,700 bondholders in Indian railways guaranteed by Government, only 368 are natives of India!

Now, whether the Indian Government issues its loan certificates in India to banks, to be negotiated in London, or whether it negotiates them direct in London, its proceedings ought to be widely published. It is well known that ladies in England wield considerable influence, and it is believed that they are the proprietors of large sums in Indian Securities. Let Government be careful that they may not have reason to accuse it of stockjobbing, and of playing into the hands of either bulls or bears.

There is another point to be kept in view. It should be distinctly understood that the Five per Cent. Paper and Three per Cent. Consols have not the same security. If we should lose India, the Five per Cents. will become worthless. Whatever Government may succeed us in India, whether it be Asiatic, European, or American, it will repudiate our liabilities, whether in the shape of Promissory Notes or of Railway Bonds; and the Republican party in England will never permit Parliament to pay any interest on Five per Cents. out of English revenues. Those, they will say, who aspire to 5 per cent. must remember that high interest means bad security.—Your obedient servant,

T.

P.S.—If the English proprietors of Indian paper would take the trouble of bringing public opinion to bear on the Government of India, the security of their property would be greatly increased.

COMPETITION-WALLAHS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In your remarks on my note in the Pall Mall Gazette, on the subject of the exclusion of Indian history and geography, from the initial examination of "competition-wallahs" for the Indian Civil Service, you appear to have done me such scant justice that I cannot but think that you did no more than glance at the article. You say that I have made the "amusing error" of confounding the initial and the final examination of embryo Indian civilians. If you will re-peruse the note you will see that after condemning the system whereby Indian history was entirely excluded from the initial examination, I observed that there "seems to have been a sort of feeble sentiment of misgiving in the minds of the educational authorities, for they have provided that those who have obtained their nominations shall in the final examination take up Indian history, &c."

Now, Sir, my position was that this subsequent admission of Indian history into the final examination did not condone the offence of omitting it from the examination papers of what is really the competitive examination. The second examination is simply a competition for rank—that is, relative place on the list—and seldom or never has the effect of excluding anyone from the Indian Civil Service after he has succeeded in the primal competition. I suppose that the idea of the Civil Service Commissioners is that, if a youth takes up Indian history, and fails to obtain entrance into the Indian Service, it will only be a burden to him—"of no sort of use to a gentleman." Now it is this notion which I desire to repudiate, and I thought that Allen's Indian Mail would be the first to support my views. The error, whether "amusing" or not, seems to be on your side, not mine.—I am, yours obediently,

[We gladly give our correspondent the full benefit of his own reading of what he wrote; but the sentence he himself quotes in part, ends thus—"Indian History and Geography at the rate of 350 marks, the Histories of Greece and Rome being estimated at 750." Surely this seemed to infer that both sets of subjects were prescribed for the same examination.—Ed. A.I.M.]

THE SALT DUTIES.

The Indian Daily News observes that the proposition to equalise the salt duty throughout India has been received with considerable disfavour in British Burmah, where much contempt is felt and expressed for the marvellous "ignorance of the wants of their neighbours" which is believed to have been exhibited by the Calcutta press. "They hold," writes one journal, "to the stupid old belief that what is sauce for the goose must of a necessity also be sauce for the gander." Unhappily for British Burmah, this stupid old belief has lost none of its truth in consequence of its age and stupidity; although it was not on this ground that the equalisation of the salt duty was recommended. At present Bengal pays a heavier salt duty than any other province in India; and not only is there no reason why the Bengali labourer should pay more for his salt than any other labourer in India, but, moreover, differences in rates of duty necessitate the maintenance of expensive inland preventive establishments with the object of suppressing smuggling from lightly taxed into heavily taxed provinces. Abuses of this kind seem to call for some remedy; but when we turn for enlightenment to British Burmah, we find that the abuses themselves are but imperfectly appreciated in that quarter. In fact, imperial views of taxation are not in vogue in the province, which seems only to desire that its trade may be interfered with as little as possible—no matter what happens elsewhere. The desire is not an unnatural one for the people of the province to entertain; but it is open to the objection that it is virtually based on the principle that other portions of the empire should pay for the benefit of the people of Burmah.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

The Indian Daily News holds that the present policy of the Government, both at home and in this country, must inevitably lead to two disastrous results, viz., a large and dangerous increase of the native clement in the Covenanted Civil Service, and a still larger but less trustworthy addition to the Subordinate Service. It is simply a question of time, and a very short time. We shall have the superior branch of the service crowded with natives, and only a few stray Englishmen and East Indians in the lower branch. A number of the principal covenanted officers (it may be a commissioner here and there) at the head-quarters stations will be natives, and the deputies in the outlying sub-divisions will also be natives. The Secretariats and other Departments of the State will have their quota. Are Englishmen in India prepared for this change? Is India prepared for it? Are the natives of the country willing to acquiesce in it? We think that the answer to these questions must be in the negative. We do not believe that even the natives of India are willing to abandon, so entirely, the government of the country to their own countrymen. It would be a state of things fraught with serious danger, which, in a time of trouble, would be sure to lead to the total collapse of the administration. What would have been the end if the country had been officered after this fashion in the dark days of the Mutiny? Mr. Tayler very justly remarks, "It cannot be denied, and will not, I fancy, be questioned, even by the natives themselves; for many years to come the chief power must be lodged in the hands of the English. All will, I apprehended, admit that there are other qualities besides intellectual ability which are essential for the safe administration of India; and however confident we may feel of the loyalty of those who have acquired the advantage of English education, we cannot have the same absolute assurance of these high moral qualifications as would render them competent to face successfully disaffection or revolt." And, again—"Have the authorities themselves considered how many admissions they will sanction, and what would be the political effect if, after some years, the majority of the services were natives? This question cannot be too soon, or too carefully, grappled with. We owe it to the natives as well as to ourselves that there should be no misapprehension on a subject which is important alike to both." Its early consideration is of importance, "so that we may never find ourselves in the predicament of having to retrace our steps, and withdraw a privilege which we have once conceded." Mr. Tayler has not raised the warning note too soon, and we feel it our duty to re-echo it. The question is one of vital importance to England and India, and the consideration of it cannot much longer be delayed.

THE CAMP OF EXERCISE.

Indian Public Opinion observes that the enterprising merchants of Delhi are preparing to supply the wants of the camp of exercise. While we wish all success in their business to those merchants, we trust they will not take it ill of us when we remark that such preparations somehow jar on our ear in connection with the camp. Our idea of the proposed camp is one in which the soldiers and officers shall be equally under the strict discipline, routine, and hardships of a real campaign. We desire to see the banishment of luxuries during the few weeks the army will practise its mimic war. It must be fed entirely by the Commissariat Department. There must be nothing on any table even of the highest officers which has not been obtained through the regular channel. This must include liquors as well. This idea will doubtless be laughed at by officers who have little faith in the Commissariat, and who are only accustomed to barrack campaigning. The Commander-in-Chief is going to test the capability of our army for going upon a real campaign. The country which depends for its security on these troops is going to look narrowly on. But the whole object will be frustrated if there become mixed up with the routine of real camp life articles of luxury and usages of peace which are inconsistent with the probable course of a campaign in the field. One step, has, it is true, been taken against this in the limitation of the officers' baggage, but we feel a thrill of alarm when we perceive the camp looked upon as a sort of mine of wealth for those who deal in articles of luxury. The greatest precautions must be taken to keep down the inevitable camp followers. The press will watch with jealous eyes every arrangement and every movement. There will, since the late European war, be a new element in the newspaper criticism. It will no longer be the mere delight of expatiating on the beauties of a review as of a raree-show, but it will mercilessly expose the defects of the organisation, the blunders of the commanders, and the failure of dispositions whenever they occur. "John Baumwoll" will be there to write home to his Imperial master how the Englischer war in India, and how easily they could be rolled up. The "Old Volunteer" will be there to get materials for an Indian "Battle of Dorking." But there will be few "Dr. Russells" to flatter the chiefs, and still fewer Telegraph men to write about "Shells by Moonlight." We are determined to have the truth as to whether our armies can take the field, or whether our military system is a costly luxurious sham.

IS INDIA A GOOD SCHOOL OF WARFARE?

The Delhi Gazette admits that the officers of a portion of the native army, notably those on the Punjab frontier, enjoy great advantages not possessed by their brethren serving with British troops. They are constantly in a state of preparation for active service, and being less hampered by vexatious and minute rules and regulations, are more capable of acting on their own responsibility in emergencies. We look to this body to furnish capable generals for future campaigns in India. With the exception referred to, we think we have shown the fallacy of the idea that India is a good school for soldiers, and the sooner it is got rid of the better for the army in particular and the country in general. That India might be such we do not deny. It possesses in a remarkable degree most of the requisites for the practical illustration of the great operations of war; at easy distance from most stations are vast barren plains admirably suited for the manœuvres of all arms of the service; majestic rivers intersect the country, affording splendid opportunities for the solution of the difficult problem of how to pass a great army expeditiously over a large river; a great system of railways, roads, telegraphs, and canals, not overburdened by traffic and under the control of Government, would be at the service of the commanders in the mimic warfare, and the value of these means of communication and their influence on strategy could be put to a practical test. The climate too in the cold season—at least the climate of Bengal, the North-West, and the Punjab—is simply perfect, and eminently favourable for bivouacing and military exercises. We hope that the Camp of Exercise, which is to be formed near Dehli during the ensuing cold weather, will be the first of a series of annual cold weather manœuvres. The advantages of these to all concerned would be incalculable. Officers and men would be instructed in the practical details of their profession, and their health would be improved. The force should be divided into two bodies, one to operate against the other acting on the defensive. Only the general plan or idea of the campaign should be communicated beforehand to the leaders; their action as to details should be quite unfettered. The objections which have been recently put forward against camps of exercise are utterly groundless. Why should they degenerate into pic-nics? Of course soldiers' wives would not be permitted to accompany the regiments; and no ladies should be allowed within ten miles of the camp. If real work is to be done officers will have neither time nor inclination for balls and entertainments. The objection on the score of expense to the country though plausible at first sight should not be entertained for a moment. It is strange how blind most Governments are to the fact that it is a dangerous policy to maintain a military force in a state of semi-efficiency. Better to have no army than one unprepared for a campaign which gives only a false security to a state.

PUBLIC WORKS FAILURES.

The Times of India holds that Colonel Tyrrell took an effectual method of challenging public attention by citing one special instance, which had come under his own knowledge, of a particular work in connection with which the State had suffered to the extent of five or six lakhs of rupees. This was the great eastern road of the Central Provinces, stretching about 150 miles from Nagpoor to Raepoor. The reply to this allegation, which reply we stated in substance, was most unequivocal. It was pointed out, that Colonel Tyrrell must be utterly and wantonly wrong, seeing that the amount of the "swindle" which he averred had been practised on the Central Provinces Administration exceeded by over 80 per cent. the whole amount spent on the said road. We know that some of those who put forward this denial did so in good faith, and in dependence on official accounts which they were warranted in accepting as correct. We so far accepted these flat contradictions as to remark, that without further explanation we could not understand Colonel Tyrrell putting forward such allegations unless he knew something more to support them than appeared in his pamphlet. This explanation he now offers in the shape of official letters written by him when in charge of the said work and whilst striving to get at the bottom or the beginning of the terrible mess in which, he declares, he found all the records relating to that Nagpore road. His rejoinder to the statement that the amount of the alleged swindle far exceeded the total amount sum expended, comes to this—no one can tell what amount of money was spent or swindled away on that work; and he gives definite data which serve to account for much if not the whole of the defalcations he alleged. We leave those skilled in these matters to say whether or not Colonel Tyrrell has exonerated himself from the reproach of having made a reckless or ill-founded statement. The controversy concerns us chiefly, as to whether the special instance of defalcations on the Raepoor road is so far substantiated that it serves to back up Colonel Tyrrell's general argument for revision and reconstruction of the Public Works Department itself. We do think the statements in the present letter must prove difficult of refutation, and that the small volume in which this controversy originated is worthy of close attention in the interests of the public. Doubtless there are many exaggerated statements made in India both as to failures in public works, and misappropriation of the funds which ought to have been spent on them. But when we recall the downfall of the Allahabad arsenal; the failures in the monster barracks up and down India; the "mismeasurements" at Gunness Khind; the extraordinary costliness of some of the Bombay Harbour Defence works; and these "inefficient balances" on the Nagpore road, it is plain to every one that there is something so far wrong in the methods pursued, that to set it right would be worth some well considered effort that should be supported by the whole authority of the Government of India. We commend Colonel Tyrrell's letter to the best attention of the Finance Minister. Something must be essentially at fault in the system when wholesale peculations could be going on within a day's gallop of one of the acutest and most vigilant administrators in India.

PRIZE MONEY.

The Madras Times, commenting on the Parliamentary Debate of June 30, remarks that angry words afford little pain, and the troops composing the Abyssinian expedition will not forget that this capture of Theodore's crown at the time was considered one of the great results of the campaign in England. Mr. Henly now calls the transaction sacrilege—the "robbery of a church"—but if the campaign was to occur over again this year, we dare say Mr. Henly would be among the first to offer his Parliamentary congratulations to the force which "in the face of innumerable difficulties," etc., etc., "snatched the symbol of despotic power from the hoary head of the barbarous tyrant," and so on. The Abyssinian heroes will take these bitter words of the Government party at their true value, and pouching their money, can afford to smile at them, but in order to prevent these wretched scandals for the future, we would inquire, is it not worth the consideration of the Government to lay down some law by which troops should be protected from the delays and extortions of prize agents, and harpies of that class, whether in the treasury or outside it, in days to come? The national morality, and our system of strict discipline for the British army, denounces looting and requisitioning by individuals as military crimes of the first magnitude, and rightly too, but if we offer compensation to the soldier in prize money, it is surely only fair that he should receive it? The existent laws regarding prize money, and its distribution, are faulty to a degree, and seem framed rather to take advantage of the soldier in every possible manner, and to swindle him out of his gains, than to afford him any facility for obtaining them during his lifetime. It is true we are at peace with the world just now, but who can say what the morrow will bring forth! With another war, we will most certainly observe the same trouble about prize money that all our recent wars have discovered, unless, indeed, while the occasion offers, we take advantage of it to revise all our rules and regulations regarding its amassment and its distribution.

THE OUTTURN OF OPIUM.—Instead of 55,724 chests originally estimated, it seems probable that the opium outturn of the Behar and Benares agencies for the current season will not exceed about 41,000 chests; and the deficiency is attributed to a blight which is said to have fastened upon the poppy plants, and to have defied all the precautions taken by the local authorities. Amongst the other expedients that have been resorted to for the purpose of counteracting any effect which this deficiency may have on the financial estimates, is the experiment of introducing foreign seeds. Turkey seeds have not hitherto proved very successful, and we learn that arrangements are in progress for the supply of other descriptions of seed. Few of these, we should imagine, would have much chance of success where the indigenous seed has failed, and, at any rate, it ought to be borne in mind that, as the opium produced during the present season will not enter the market before the following year, the deficiency referred to above can have no unfavourable effect upon the financial arrangements of this year. It is, indeed, within the limits of possibility that the probable scarcity of the drug in the earlier sales of next year may tend to raise the value of the quantity that is now in stock and already available for sale. This, at least, would be the certain result of the deficiency now reported but for the uncertainty that hangs around the progress of poppy cultivation in China.—Indian Daily News.

Bengal.

THE ORISSA CANALS.

The facts about Orissa are briefly these: Five great rivers collect the drainage of sixty-three thousand square miles of the hill country towards Central India and dash down their concentrated floods upon the three thousand square miles of the Cuttack delta. Besides its own rainfall of about sixty-five inches a year, the level strip between the mountains and the sea has to find an exit for the drainage of a territory twenty-one times its own area. In the rainy season the rivers devastate the delta, while, like other Indian streams rising among hills, they fail to yield a trustworthy supply in summer. An enormous mass of water, aggregating 2,760,000 cubic feet per second, is thrown down in time of flood; while in the hot weather the total supply dwindles to 1,690 cubic feet per second.

This water supply is regulated and utilised by four canals, which form in fact four great artificial rivers running along high ground, and intended both for navigation and irrigation. The High Level Canal starts from Cuttack, and, as above stated, is designed to provide a cheap trade route between Cuttack and Calcutta, as well as to supply water to the country through which it passes. It has been completed as far as the Brahmani River, and when opened to Balasore will irrigate 572,000 acres in Orissa alone. The Kendrapara Canal also starts from Cuttack, and runs towards the sea, dropping into tidal waters at Marsaghai, after a course of 42½ miles. This canal was opened throughout in May, 1869, and is designed to supply water to 385 square miles. The Taldanda Canal also runs to the coast, and will, when finished, connect the city of Cuttack with the main branch of the Mahanuddy within tidal range. The first two sections as far as Sonpore have been opened, and the canal will irrigate in its first section alone 18,000 acres. The Machhgaon Canal branches off from the Taldanda Canal at Birbati, and proceeds to the mouth of the river. It has already been completed as far as Singapore.

The commercial future of these artificial rivers, as trade routes, will be dealt with hereafter. We propose this morning to deal with the accomplished facts as regards their irrigating powers. The Orissa husbandman has been accustomed to use irrigation only for the more costly sort of crops, such as pan-leaf, sugar-cane, tobacco, and cotton. For such crops a field is generally selected which has the command of a natural water-course; and the highest form of irrigation known in Orissa has hitherto consisted in throwing water on to the fields by means of hollow palm-trees or basket scoops from a tank or dammed-up stream. The East India Irrigation Company at first fixed the rates for supplying canal water at five rupees an acre. This rate proved too high, and a graduated scale was afterwards introduced, by which leases for large areas were offered at reduced rates. Even this failed to induce the cultivators to buy the water, and a further concession was made, by which the separate husbandmen in a village might combine to take a general lease for their aggregate lands at the reduced rates.

Much confusion and many abuses followed, and practically the company's rates were reduced to Rs. 2-8 an acre. The first year in which the cultivators availed themselves of canal irrigation was 1866-67, when leases were executed for 667 acres at a total charge of Rs. 2,520. Of this, however, only Rs. 620 could be collected, and the rest had to be written off as a bad debt. Next year, 1867-68 leases were executed for 1,842 acres, at an aggregate charge of Rs. 3,660; but only Rs. 1,750 could be collected, and the balance had again to be written off. The remissions of these two years were rendered necessary, partly by the unfinished state of the works, which disabled the company from performing its share of the contract, partly by the inexperience of the Government officers, and partly by disputes on the part of the cultivators touching the validity of the leases. A large area was irrigated by stealth, and the smallness of the returns was chiefly owing to the difficulties incident to introducing anything new in Orissa.

These returns cannot, therefore, be taken as a test of the revenue capabilities of the canals. In 1868-69, a drought at the end of the rains awoke the fears of the husbandmen, and water was taken for 9,378 acres, at an aggregate charge of Rs. 22,880. The popular apprehensions culminated in a panic; and the demand for water became so urgent that it was found impossible to comply with the usual forms, and irrigation was granted in many cases without leases. In others, the husbandmen appropriated wholesale on their own account. However, after some opposition, the land which had actually received water was measured, and the people paid on the whole very fairly for what they took.

Last year, a long protracted drought thoroughly aroused the cultivators to the folly of neglecting irrigation. Until far on in October, it seemed that another famine in Orissa was inevitable. Still the people thought Rs. 2-8 an acre too high a rate; and it was not till the Commissioner, Mr. Ravenshaw, by insisting upon the terrible risks that the province ran, induced Government temporarily to bring down the rate to a rupee an acre, that water was taken on a great scale. Between 98,000 and 100,000 acres were immediately put under irrigation, and even this amount of land, although insignificant compared with the future capabilities of the canal, would have sufficed to take the extreme edge off a famine. It represents at the very lowest estimate a total outturn of about a million and a-half hundredweights of paddy, or 750,000 hundredweights of rice. As we stated the other day, the total rice supply which the Government managed to throw into the province amounted to only 298,535 hundredweights, at the enormous cost of £189,919, merely to land at the sea coast. This year we observe that the irrigation has increased by 50 per cent., even as compared with last year, when a panic occurred. The truth is, that when once a village takes water, it finds the profits of irrigation so immense, that it never leaves it off.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

Nynee Tal, July 24.—The Court of Inquiry at Ranecklet, composed of Colonel Pennycuick, C.B., R.A., as President and Lieutenant-Colonels Wallace and Wilkinson as members, has concluded its proceedings. The inquiry, I understand, was ordered by the Commander-in-Chief, in connection with two deaths that occurred suddenly with the detachment of the Royals, which marched from Shahjehanpore via Bareilly to Ranecklet in April last. The detachment, it appears, started with two bad cases in hospital, and on its march from Bareilly unfortunately took the road leading to Moradabad instead of that towards Ramnugger, and did not discover the mistake until it had reached the first encamping ground, from which I believe after a brief halt it was made to retrace its steps to Bareilly, and continue the march thence to the right encampment, a distance in all of over thirty miles. After completing the first march on the wrong road, it is said the medical officer advised a halt, especially as the day was rainy; nevertheless, the march was continued, and occupied eleven hours in the hottest month experienced this year. The two deaths occurred after the arrival of the detachment in camp, and the object of the inquiry has been to ascertain if the deaths were in any degree due to the severity of the march. The Quartermaster-General's Department would appear not altogether blameless in not having arranged the march of the detachment earlier in the season, as these are not the only deaths which occurred during the march.—The men of the 1-19th Regiment attached to the Convalescent Depot have been given the option of volunteering to regiments remaining in India, those adhering to the old "crack shots" rejoining the corps early in October next.—Notwithstanding the precautions taken by the Municipality in the early part of the season to counteract the foibles of dak choudries, matters in connection with dooly dak travelling appear to have drifted into the old groove. Those ill-used are reluctant to hand up their grievances to the municipality, and hence these brigands enjoy a perfect immunity from fines and punishments, and are enabled to continue their little games with the greatest impunity.—The mails continue to arrive very late in the day, which, I suppose, cannot be helped under present circumstances, although the roads to Nynee Tal, the cart road included, appear to be singularly free from slips. We have Colonel Dansey to thank for the good condition of the cart road, and it has proved an immense boon in enabling us to continue the use of country carts to the exclusion of the indolent and unreasonable coolies of these regions.

Lahore, July 21.—I hope you will get the judgment in the case of the Mahunt or High Priest of Battala, who has been sentenced to suffer the extreme penalty of the law for what appears to be a very deliberate and cold-blooded murder. But for the Mahunt's connection with the crime, there would be nothing very extraordinary in the case as compared with the general range of murders. But the consignment of a man of his sacred position to the manipulation and tender care of a low caste sweeper has roused the indignation of his disciples and a certain class of people, and disturbances, either overt or concealed, have been anticipated; in truth, a rumour yesterday got afloat at Lahore that the troops were under arms and ready for action at Meean Meer, the fort, and at Umritsur. On inquiry, however, I find that precautions have been taken, and that these relate to the execution of the Mahunt. There is not the least occasion for any alarm. Why should there be? The disaffected, those of them that were left, have not quite recovered the effects of the thrashing they received in 1858-59, and the terrific punishment they then received will be the talk yet of a couple more decades. When that time comes round an age will have passed away, and the doings of the Mutiny will leave behind but a faint impression. The ill-disposed may then begin to talk of another mutiny.—On the matter of the late butcher murders near Loodiana, my opinion is that the men who perpetrated them were the same batch connected with the murders at Umritsur. I feel disposed to think that there is something more than mere caste prejudices in this matter. We will see. Where these murderous Akalis are taken I hope they may, if convicted, be all hanged in uniform, with their conical head-dress and as many of the steel amulets as they may choose to wear whilst undergoing the pains of a glorious martyrdom. In all such cases our tedious law processes are at fault. Be not surprised if you hear that our efficient and energetic police have made a muddle of these Akali cases.

Allahabad, July 24.—The past has been a very wet week. To-day we have a little dry weather, and really we are at this moment enjoying a very pleasant evening. A clear sky, bright moon, a cool westerly wind, and the absence of that oppressive heat which invariably precedes and follows a shower of rain in this season are making the weather really enjoyable. A telegram was received here on the 20th inst., intimating an unprecedented rise in the Jumna at Delhi. Here it began to rise three days ago, last night it rose considerably, but I believe the flood has not reached here yet. It is said that it will reach us to-morrow. One of the piers of the Jumna-bridge is under repairs. A cook-house attached to the new barracks has come down, and if report speaks true the barracks themselves are not very strong; not that they show any signs at present of following the example of the cook-house, but the material used in building them is admitted to be of such inferior quality that it would not be surprising if a few days' more rain will make their stability questionable. The Gun Carriage Agency buildings are to be patched up and strengthened for occupation in November next. All Saints' Church is not making much progress. I am told the works have been stopped, owing to some dispute between the contractor and the committee. The Alfred Park and the Thornhill Memorial are making fair progress under the energetic supervision of Mr. Mayne. The Pioneer announced the other day that Sir Dinkur Rao had undertaken the administration of the Rewah State. I believe your contemporary is misinformed, for I understand that at a conference which was held at Sutna the other day, it was decided that Sir Dinkur was to have nothing to do with it. From official returns I learn that during June there was one death in the city caused by cholera, fourteen by small-pox, forty-four by fever, and fifty-three from other causes. How far these returns are to be depended on it is not necessary to say.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Rohilkund.—The Rohilkund Akhbar declares that the early and unusual rainfall of this year has been most destructive to crops in the Rohilkund district; grain to the extent of hundreds of thousands of maunds has been destroyed, and cultivators have been unable from the incessant rain to find time to husk their corn.

Opium Gambling.—We are glad to learn from a Calcutta telegram that the Government of India has acted on the suggestion we made a month ago, and, with a view to check gambling at the opium sales, has published a notification stating what number of chests of Behar and Benares opium it will put up for sale during the year.—Bombay Gazette.

Floods in the N. W. P.—We (Pioneer) hear of floods all over the country, particularly in the Delhi, Cawnpore, and Mirzapore districts. It is said that the Judge of the High Court deputed to try the Bareilly rioters was nearly washed back again to Allahabad, having been thirty-four hours in making his way through the waters from Futtehgurh to Bareilly.

Military.—The Sirhind Division is likely soon to be vacant. General Turner and General Donald Stewart are both mentioned for the command, the former, we read, being the first favourite among military circles in Calcutta, where his urbanity and soldierly qualities have made him generally esteemed. General Turner is on leave in England; General Stewart is on the spot, having been detained at Simla by ill-health, from which, however, he is now convalescent.

Cinchona Cultivation.—The Darjeeling News contains in its last issue a vigorously-worded plea for private enterprise in the matter of cinchona cultivation. From it we learn that the private plantations receive from the Government gardens hardly any gratuitous assistance. It says that "seeds are given away most sparingly, and not a single plant has been parted with except at a very high price."

Coolie Flogging.—We lately noticed the case of an Assistant Commissioner in Assam, who allowed a tea-planter to go scot-free for cruelly flogging a cooly. We how learn from the Indian Observer that Captain Rutherford, the Assistant Commissioner in question and ex-officio Protector of Labourers, has been removed from his appointment in consequence of his proceedings in connection with that case. The planter's name is Menzies Smith. Is he to be now brought to trial?

A Native School of Music.—We understand that through the exertions of Rajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore, an experimental "Musical Institution" is about to be opened at the Normal School from the month of August next. Instruction will be given in both vocal and instrumental music; and we believe the system of notation invented by Baboo Khetter Mohun Gosami will be adopted. Such an institution ought to give a great stimulus to musical science and art among the natives.—Englishman.

A Narrow Escape.—Captain Irvine, of the ship Bechardass Ambaidass, from Boston, reports that on the 17th of April last, when in lat. 40·8 N., long. 61·42 W., the ship got into a dreadful hurricane, lost sails, spars, bulwarks, and everything movable about the deck, also had all running gear destroyed. On the same date he saw another ship with the mainmast and foretop-gallant mast gone, but his own ship being disabled and partly on her beam-ends, he was unable to go to her assistance.—Englishman, Aug. 4.

Legislative.—A Bill to provide for the care of men coming on Australia in charge of horses on engagements which terminate on the conclusion of the voyage is now before a select committee of the Legislative Council. This measure enlarges section 31 of the Vagrancy Act in such a manner as to render the importer, or consignee, of any animal liable to all charges incurred by the State in consequence of the person who has come to India in charge of such animal becoming a vagrant within a year after his arrival in India.

Shake your Boots.—A gentleman in the station had a narrow escape from being bitten by a snake. Whilst putting on his boots, the bearer, after cleaning them, which were of patent leather, handed the right boot to his master, who on putting it on found that his foot would not go in further, and that there was something very soft towards the toes. On drawing his foot out to ascertain the cause, out tumbled a snake of a leaden colour eleven inches in length! The reptile was killed with the same boot in which it had taken up its temporary abode.—Mofussilite.

Telegraphs.—We (Englishman) learn that the Secretary of State has telegraphed that the Florence International Telegraphic Congress is postponed, and countermanded the orders for Colonel Robinson's attending it. Colonel Robinson had left Simla before the telegram arrived, and has continued his homeward journey, taking furlough instead of proceeding on special duty. The Congress is only postponed till next year. Major Champain, of Persian celebrity, is to represent the Indo-European line, and one of the superior authorities of the English Post-office will attend on behalf of the British telegraphs.

Legislative.—At the meeting of the Council of the Governor-General for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, held on July 25, the following business was transacted:—The Hon. Sir Richard Temple moved for leave to introduce a Bill to regulate the transport by railways of dutiable goods to places beyond the customs line; the Hon. Mr. Stephen introduced a Bill to amend Act No. V. of 1840 (concerning the oaths and declarations of Hindoos and Mahometans); the Hon. Mr. Strachey presented the report of the select committee on the Bill to authorise the extension of the Chowkidary Act to places where there is no jemadar of police; and the Hon. Mr. Cockerell moved for leave to introduce a Bill for declaring the local extent of the Acts of the Legislative Council of the Governor-General.

English Midwifery.—The Englishman says:—"The attempt of Dr. Wise, of Dacca, to insinuate English midwifery into native households seems to have utterly failed, even where it had the best chance of succeeding, among the poor. Native midwifery is not so simple an affair that science can readily supply its place. In the first place, the office of midwife in a village is the monopoly of a particular individual, who generally inherits it; in the second, her business is made up for the most part of mysteries, which science discards, but which the native women look upon as the most essential part of the entire performance. To make use of the services of Dr. Wise's dais would certainly be considered irreligious and inauspicious, and we are not surprised to learn that they are driven away with curses when they appear where not wanted."

Relative Rank.—It appears that the authorities at the India House have made rather a mess of the new "Warrant of Precedence." Some great men are left out altogether, and some little men are put, by mistake, above their betters. Of course, as might be expected, the ladies are in a state of dangerous excitement. This is not to be wondered at. The very soul of India society is precedence. Anything out of gear in the "Warrant" could not fail to stir to the lowest depths the feelings of those primarily concerned. We have not yet heard of any actual breaches of the peace, and we advocate mild measures. The aggrieved fair ones can appeal to Duke, who, as a Scotch Highlander, cannot be supposed to be deficient in gallantry. Patience is difficult but sometimes necessary. In due time, we presume, all wrongs will be righted.—Delhi Gazette.

Cheating the Devil.—One of the Honorary Secretaries of the Asiatic Society has pointed out a most curious agreement between the popular traditions of Dehra Ismail Khan and of Saxony. In the former district, it is said that the Babars entered (many years ago) into an agricultural partnership with the devil, and gave him his choice of the roots or stalks of their harvest. The devil chose the stalks, so the Babars sowed nothing but onions, carrots, and turnips. The devil, very naturally annoyed, insisted next harvest on getting the roots, so the Babars grew only wheat and sugar. In Saxony, it is related that the peasants made the same compact with Rubezahl, the spirit of the Sudetic Range; in fact, he got his name from this transaction, for Rubezahl means "turnip counter." He chose the roots, came to count them, and found that the peasants had sown only rye!—Pioneer, August 1.

The Beef Riots.—The Lahore paper says, "The public, which has taken such an interest in the present attitude of the Hindoos and Sikhs, will scarcely believe it possible that Government has been weak enough, foolish enough, mad enough, to send orders to Goordaspore to suspend—not the condemned Mohunt, but—his execution! On Sunday an order arrived at Goordaspore to that effect, but the order—if we are rightly informed—arrived in vain. There is a report current that before the fears of Government had in this manner made themselves apparent, before the Sikh priest knew that the force of character of his people had conquered and overborne the force of character of the Indian Government, the condemned man died by his own act. It is said that unable to bear the indignity of being hanged by a sweeper, he poisoned himself with opium."

Indianised English.—The following is quoted by the Lahore paper from a local hotel prospectus:—"Gentlemen who come in hotel not say anything about their meals they will be charged for, and if they should say before hand that they are going out to breakfast or dinner, &c., are if they say that they not have anything to eat they will not be charged, and if not so, they will be charged, or unless they bring it to the notice of the manager of the place and should they want to say, anything they must order the manager for and not any one else, and unless they not bring it to the notice of the manager they will be charge for the least things according to hotel rate—and no fuss will be allowed afterward about it. Should any gentleman take wall lamp or candle light from the public rooms they must pay for it without any dispute—its charges. Monthly gentlemens will have to pay my fixed rate made with them at the time and should they absent day in the month they will not be allow to deduct any thing out of it—because I take from them less rate than my usual rates of monthly charges."

Lord Mayo's Expected Visitors.—It is gradually becoming the proper and fashionable course for wealthy tourists to shun the inclement wintry skies of our Western isles, by taking a run through India towards the end of the year. The present Viceroy and Lady Mayo seem inclined to encourage this very sensible method of spending money and time. We hear that they are likely to have, amongst other guests, next cold weather, the Marquis and Marchioness of Drogheda, also Lord and Lady Ashburton. It is not much knowledge of our political and social affairs that can be picked up in travelling over great part of India between November and March, but many incidental advantages must accrue from India becoming familiarised to persons of position and influence in English society. They will, at any rate, be able to form a more definite idea than before of the heavy labour and constant responsibility which devolves on the European rulers of India. We do not hear that the Prince of Wales has yet thought of turning his steps eastward, either in his proper character or under the shield of an incognito; but after the season is over he is bound to some German watering place.—Times of India.

Civil.—The Englishman mentions that Mr. J. Westland, the talented young civilian whose work on Jessore has attracted so much attention, vacates the Under-Secretaryship, and goes home on furlough in September. Government is said to be searching the civil list for a good mathematician to take his place, irrespective of the various claims of the different provinces to supply the man. It is also understood that Mr. Chapman, the Chief Secretary, will take three months' privilege leave to England after the next Budget, and as Mr. Chapman is pretty sure to be detained for examination by the Parliamentary Committee, the three months will probably be extended to four or five. But after the severe handling which Sir Henry Anderson and Mr. Harrison have received, it may perhaps, says our contemporary, not be deemed prudent for the Financial Secretary to trust himself within reach of Professor Fawcett. It is said that Mr. Rivers Thomson, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Revenue Department, intends shortly to proceed on three months' leave, and that Mr. C. Bernard is likely to officiate for him during his temporary absence. By the time the above-mentioned leave expires, Mr. H. L. Dampier, the permanent incumbent, will probably have returned to India.

The Calcutta Census.—According to the last census returns, the total number of British-born subjects resident within the town and port of Calcutta, inclusive of the garrison is 81,320, the proportion of males to that of females being as 198·85 to 100. Excluding the garrison population, the number of this class is 6,703, consisting of 4,269 males and 2,434 females. Of the total population, 2,693 are returned as born in England, 579 in Scotland, 862 in Ireland, 79 in Wales, 24 in the British Isles, 119 in the Colonies, 3,851 in the East Indies, 40 in foreign countries, 35 at sea, and 38 not stated. Although the number of males in the entire population is as nearly as possible double that of the females, in the Indian born population there are only 92 males for every 100 females, indicating probably a large excess of females among the Eurasian population. The preponderance of Irish over Scotch arises entirely from the larger proportion of the former race among the troops in garrison. The returns, it should be remembered, do not include the suburbs, and consequently give a totally inadequate idea of the number of British born subjects fairly entitled to be included among the inhabitants of the capital. So far from there being any reluctance to make the return, Mr. Chick, who conducted the census, states that such was the eagerness to be included in it that upwards of four hundred non British persons had to be rejected. It appears from the returns that there are no less than 2,113 unmarried British-born men in Calcutta, a fact, as Mr. Chick observes, of some interest in a local point of view. The Calcutta census of 1866 gave a total European population in Calcutta of 11,224, but included all foreigners, and a larger marine population, and was taken at a time of the year when town is unusually full.—Englishman.

THE NUSSEERABAD BARRACKS.—We are at length in a position to answer the query of "Tax payer" in our issue of the 8th July, regarding the Nusseerabad barracks. We learn that a resolution of Government has been issued, declaring these buildings a "disgraceful failure" on the part of the P. W. D., but omitting any statement or imputation of blame to any of the officers concerned. For all that Government say on the matter of responsibility it might be "the cat!" Whoever the delinquent or the delinquents may be, they have escaped public punishment, have escaped even public censure. This procedure on the part of Government will not be satisfactory to those chiefly concerned, viz., the tax-payers. We have a right to demand first, the publication of the Government resolution on the Nusseerabad barracks, in extenso, and secondly, if not satisfactory, as it really is not, a reinvestigation of the whole affair. So far as we can learn, Colonel Crommelin's report has not seen the light. But the public have a right to ask for the publication of it. What influence has been brought to bear on Lord Mayo to make him shirk the question of fixing the responsibility of the Nusseerabad failure? A very different procedure to that adopted in the Allahabad case, and therefore very unjust! It is very evident there has been some "hole and corner work," which should be fearlessly and entirely exposed. Barracks cannot have been built as the Nusseerabad barracks have been without gross negligence and fraud on the part of more than one party concerned. Yet Government pass the matter over by simply directing that the upper stories be pulled down! A mode of procedure extremely well calculated to perpetuate similar P. W. D. work. It appears to us that all the officials concerned are equally to blame; those who commenced the buildings, for the bad material and workmanship; those who completed the buildings, for placing good work and material on the top of bad.—Delhi Gazette.

TRIAL OF THE BAREILLY AND PILLIBHEET RIOTERS.—The Bareilly Sessions for the trial of the Bareilly and Pillibheet rioters commenced on the 16th inst. The first trial lasted two days, and resulted in the conviction of all the prisoners, nineteen in number, on a charge of rioting and assaulting and obstructing public servants when suppressing a riot. There were at least a hundred witnesses. The prisoners were sentenced, some to eighteen months, some to fifteen months' rigorous imprisonment. The Government prosecutor did not press for a severe sentence, and was, we believe, instructed not to do so. On Wednesday a prisoner was convicted of voluntarily causing grievous hurt to deter a public servant from discharging his duty, and of using criminal force to deter a public servant (Mr. White, assistant magistrate) from the discharge of his duty; he was sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. Those were Pillibheet cases. The trial of five Mahomedans for a very cold-blooded and atrocious murder of a Mohunt in Bareilly was the next on the list; this was a very heavy case, and terminated in the conviction of three of the prisoners, who were sentenced to death. On Thursday a Mahomedan was tried for the murder of an old and apparently inoffensive Hindoo; but the prisoner was acquitted; Mr. Warner defended him. On the same day the same prisoner and his father and another Mahomedan were tried for rioting and causing grievous hurt; they were ably defended by Mr. Warner, and acquitted. In this case both the assessors, one Hindoo and one Mahomedan, agreed in finding the prisoners "not guilty;" in the former case the Hindoo assessor alone pronounced the prisoner "guilty," and the Mahomedan, with equal promptitude, found him "not guilty." We are assured that the amount of reckless swearing which has taken place since the trials commenced, if collected carefully, would fill the largest cart in the province of Bareilly. There are still eleven cases to dispose of, three of them being on charges of murder.—Pioneer, July 24.

AFGHANISTAN.—From advices from Cabul, dated 6th July, we learn that the arrival of Sirdar Mahomed Yacoob Khan in Cabul was first fixed for the evening of the 6th instant; but as he arrived on the 5th in Killa Kazee, four kos from Cabul, it was determined that he should come to Cabul the same evening. In deference to the wishes of the Ameer, no person went to meet him, and he (the Sirdar) having arrived himself yesterday with fifty sowars at 8 P.M. in the Bala Hissar, waited on the Ameer (to acknowledge his faults) under the protection of the Koran. The Ameer took tea with him, and after an hour dismissed the durbar. At the time of his Highness's arrival near the gateway of the chief harem he told the Sirdar to go to his own house. The Sirdar was with the Ameer on the 6th also till 10 A.M. in durbar, but no conversation took place between them.— The Bombay Gazette has received the following news from Cabul: On Friday, 7th July, Sirdar Mahomed Yakoob Khan presented three Turkoman horses to the Ameer. His Highness was pleased to accept one, and returned the other two to him. He also sent a horse as a present to Sirdar Mahomed Ibrahim Khan, Sirdar Abdullah Khan, and Sirdah Ahmed Ali Khan. The Ameer has assigned fifteen trays of prepared food a day for the followers of Mahomed Yacoob Khan. On July 7 the Ameer sent Syed Noor Mahomed Shah, Shah Murd Khan, and Meer Akbar Ahmed Khan, to Sirdar Mahomed Yacoob Khan, casting on Yacoob Khan the blame of "the misfortune or ruin of the family, the murder of Sirdah Futteh Mahomed Khan, his son, and other valuable officers of the army; the ruination of the kingdom, treasury and the army;" but offering to abdicate in his favour. Sirdar Yacoob Khan replied with fresh expressions of penitence, and said he had no desire for power, but would be content if he were forgiven and allowed to remain with the Ameer. No durbar official, Sirdar, or any other person has gone to see Sirdar Mahomed Yacoob Khan since he has arrived in Cabul. It has been reported that before his departure from Herat, Mahomed Yacoob Khan caused several men who might have been a cause of disturbance to be killed, and also, that he has left Sirdar Mahomed Surwur Khan, son of the late Sirdar Mahomed Azum Khan, at Herat.

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Aug. 5.—Our market has been very quiet during the past week, and transactions have been reduced to a minimum, while holders exhibit no anxiety to realise at the low rates obtainable; dealers, on the other hand, are averse to operate, having no present requirements for goods, and not having sufficient faith in the future of prices to speculate on the renewal of the demand from the interior.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Aug. 5.—Jute: During the early part of the week a considerable fall took place of about 8 annas per maund; but at the close prices rallied, and we now quote new fine Serajgunge from Rs. 5 to 5-8, and old Jute Rs. 4 to 4-8. Saltpetre: Prices are almost daily rising, and the stock of refined is almost, if not quite, exhausted, the wet weather having continued uninterruptedly, and stopped all work; we quote refined, 5 per cent. refraction, Rs. 7-10 to 7-12. Rice: There has been a good demand during the week for second quality and broken white for shipment to England, but the best white has been entirely neglected; the demand for Ballam for Mauritius and the West Indies has also continued. Linseed: The transactions in good bold have been very trifling, sellers standing out still for high rates. In other sorts there has been a decided decline, large supplies having arrived, especially from Eastern Bengal. Rapeseed: The best yellow has been in good demand, but is scarce in the market. Silk: The supply in hand is almost exhausted, and accounts of the new rainy bund crop are beginning to be unfavourable; but there has been no change in prices.

STATION TALK.

OOTACAMUND, Aug. 1.—The official season has commenced, but as yet there are no indications of vitality having been imparted to the dead inactivity of the station. It is perhaps too soon to judge. Time must be given for the various public departments to settle themselves in their respective offices, make everything snug, keep documents within reach, and light the fires, and then we shall perhaps have a furore of business, such as has never disturbed the peaceful equanimity of the Blue Mountains. At present the Adjutant-General's office has pitched its tents at Kilburn, the Quartermaster-General's holds out at Lower Norwood, the Commander in-Chief's at a bungalow in Kandel; the office par excellence being of course located at Stonehouse—I mean the Government office, with Council Chamber combined. The heads of all departments appear to have arrived, as well as their staffs of clerks; the latter, probably, not so comfortably housed as they could wish, and consequently longing for a return to heat and mosquitoes, not to say anything of thoughts after sweethearts and wives, bairns and chums. Where the Government does not provide quarters, it cannot but prove a serious inconvenience to clerks, who have to depend on Samaritans for lodging, and some kind-hearted materfamilias for board. There is no hotel that would open its doors to them for what they could afford to pay, and hence cheap lodging and boarding establishments during the official season would, I should think, be highly remunerative to the owners. As far as I can learn, the first Council will be held on Friday next, the 4th instant. The seat of consultation has been under repair, and it is to be hoped will be finished and garnished before the eventful day arrives. No one can say what Stonehouse has cost for repairs since it became Government property. The Commissioner has most considerately provided a new flagstaff, and on this the ensign that has "braved the battle and the breeze for a thousand years" will indicate to the people of Ootacamund that their destinies, and the destinies of others in the presidency, are being solemnly disposed of. There has been unfortunately a rather unhappy occurrence at Wellington. Two of the principal officers have been removed, due it is said to one of them having appointed a butcher sergeant, of whose nomination to the post the other disapproved. Other rumours are afloat as to the casus belli between the two officials, and the tongue of report proceeds to assert that an enquiry into the circumstances will be made shortly at a large military station not far distant. The officer who has succeeded Colonel Collingwood in command of the depot is spoken of in flattering terms. The gentleman who made the recent rapid journey from Pothanore to Ootacamund is Mr. Wellesley of the Secretariat. Captain Jago, Neilgherry Forest Department, has, I am told, been appointed to "count the trees" in the Government cinchona plantations. The station is healthy, and I trust will continue to be so, to enable me to send you a more readable letter next time.—Correspondent of Madras Times.

Miscellaneous.

THE BANGALORE AFFRAY.—The young officers concerned in the VanIngen affray are both convalescent, and will be able this week to attend the Court for the purpose of being cross-examined. A Calcutta contemporary thinks it hard that Mr. Edwin VanIngen, junior, should not be let out on bail, and it may seem to many equally hard that Mr. VanIngen, senior, should have been suspended by the Commissioner from his appointment pending the issue of the trial.—Madras Times, Aug. 6.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Rev. J. Wynch, of Mercara, who has been appointed by Government to officiate for the Rev. D. G. Clarke, has arrived in Madras and took part in the morning and evening services on Sunday last at St. Matthias' Church, Vepery. Mr. Wynch will assume charge of the acting Chaplaincy of Vepery after the laying of the foundation-stone of St. Matthias' School in Paleamootoo on Thursday evening next, by the Rev. Mr. Clarke. Mr. Wynch intends shortly giving a series of sermons on the truths of religion.—Madras Athenæum, Aug. 1.

"TREMENDOUS WIGGING" TO THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.—We hear that what is described to us as a "tremendous wigging" has been administered by the Supreme Government to the Madras Government and military authorities for their conduct in respect of the affair of the 19th regt. N.I. We are told that the Government of India has disapproved of everything that has been done either by Government or by the late Commander-in-Chief, except the removal of the European officers of the regiment by the former. As Government was so ready to publish its condemnation of the 19th Regiment, perhaps it may think it only just to publish this commentary on its own conduct. But we fear not.—Madras Times.

MADRAS NEWS.—The Government is now fairly established on the Hills, and the first Council was held at Stonehouse on Friday, the 4th inst. The induction of the Rev. J. Gorton as Archdeacon of Madras took place in the cathedral at evening service on the same date. On the evening previous the Archdeacon elect presided at the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of a new school house in Pereamoottoo for the children connected with the parish under the ministerial superintendence of the Rev. D. G. Clarke, Chaplain of Vepery.—Madras Times, Aug. 6.

ARMY ESTIMATES.—The Madras Military Budget Estimate for the year 1871-72, we read, has just been received by the local Government from Calcutta, precisely four months after the commencement of the official year. The total amount sanctioned for expenditure is Rs. 2,94,87,210, which is a decrease over the amount sanctioned for 1870-71 by Rs. 5,13,690. In forwarding this estimate the Government of India have requested that heads of departments be enjoined careful observance of the limits of the provision under the various items of expenditure.

A JUST AWARD.—One instance of the arrogance with which some Europeans treat educated Hindoos is found in the want of discretion lately displayed by the Civil and Sessions Judge of Madura. Mr. F. Muthukistna, a barrister, who had been practising in the district, proceeded about a year ago to Europe without permission of the Judge. On his return he went to practice as usual, when the sensitive Judge charging him with contempt of Court fined him fifty rupees and also barred his practice. The Government have very properly administered a "wigging" to the Judge, and ordered the refund of the fine. At this rate, we shall have at no distant period a regular brood of (Sir B.) Peacocks!—Bangalore Spectator.

JAIL RIOT IN BRITISH BURMAH.—We learn of a serious emeute among the prisoners at the jail at Bassein, on the banks of the Irrawaddy. This occurred about fifteen days after the present superintendent, Dr. Nisbet, had taken over charge on his return from England, and it appears to have been solely owing to the gallant conduct of the jailor that Dr. Nisbet escaped with his life. Some thirty Burmans were concerned in the outbreak. No attempt at escape was made, it seems simply to have been an attempt on Dr. Nisbet's life. The prisoners were dissatisfied with the provisions supplied to them, and thought they would show their dissatisfaction by attacking the superintendent, who managed to escape over a palisade about seven feet high. The prisoners then tried to make a rush after him through an opening, where, however, the jailor stopped them, and was himself wounded with stones. A body of police then fired on the rioters, dispersing them without loss of life, though one man was shot through the thigh. The whole matter is being inquired into by Dr. Kelly, the Inspector-General of Jails in Burmah.

THE MADRAS 19TH N.I.—From accounts appearing in the local papers, departmental bungling with the native regiment whose state has been before the public for some months has not ended even yet, says the Delhi Gazette. The volunteers from other regiments to replace the disbanded No. 1 Company have parted from their wives and families in anticipation of being sent off to the Straits Settlements at once. They marched to Palaveram, and have been ordered to remain there till September next, losing their batta in the meantime. The inducement for sending away their kith and kin was, we find it stated, undoubtedly the expectancy of batta and some increment, sufficient to enable them to maintain two separate establishments, but they find that they have trudged all the way to Palaveram to be deceived and mortified by disappointment; for how can men feel otherwise when shifts and changes are made which run them close for funds, and their expenses are increased in their domestic circles, owing to the blunders of Government officials who are expected to see that every precaution has been taken to stave off complication, long prior to the arrangements for transfer take place? The collecting of the volunteers has been going on ever since No. 1 company of the 19th was disbanded. The passages for these men and officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, were actually secured, and just as they were on the eve of embarkation it is discovered that the season of the year to undertake a voyage to the Straits Settlements is unpropitious. To delay embarkation until September next will be to prolong the misery and discomfort of the men who have so cheerfully volunteered, and of their wives and children who have been forced to part from them. It will have the effect of rekindling bad feelings in the bosoms of every man who has been deceived; and disseminate more widely than ever a feeling of distrust and estrangement from Government. Can any one wonder at their men running rusty, becoming discontented and ultimately evincing all the elements of mutiny under such circumstances?

COTTON PROSPECTS IN THE BERARS AND THE WURDAH VALLEY.

The following letter from Mr. Harry Rivett-Carnac, dated Deputy Commissioner's Camp, Oomraotee, 5th August, 1871, has been received by the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay:—

"Sir,—As I am aware that the members of your Chamber will be anxious to receive before the departure of the mail further information regarding the prospects of the cotton crop in this part of India I have this day addressed to you a telegram as below:—

"'Cotton prospects in Wurdah Valley and East Berar favourable. In West Berar about one inch of rain has fallen during the week, and prospects are brighter.'

2. "The following more detailed information may be of interest, and will, I hope, reach you before the departure of the mail of Tuesday next.

3. "During the past week I have been at Nagpore and at Wurdah, and have had opportunities of ascertaining the views of many native landholders regarding the state of the cotton crop in the Wurdah Valley. They all agreed in stating that, notwithstanding the unusually heavy rain that has fallen, the cotton plants are doing very well, but that a break of fine weather, to admit of the crops being weeded and the sowing of jowarree (Holcus sorghum) being completed, is much wanted. During the last two days the weather has been fine, and yesterday, as I passed by railway through the Wurdah district, the cultivators were to be seen taking advantage of the fine morning, and busily employed in cleaning their cotton fields with the "dowrah," or light grubber in use in this part of India. The cotton plants, both in Wurdah and that portion of East Berar through which I passed, appeared to be very healthy and well forward.

4. "At Oomraotee itself all are agreed in regarding the prospects of the crop in this part of Berar as favourable. It is, as yet, too early to frame an accurate estimate of the area sown with cotton this season, but the general impression is that the acreage is certainly net less than that of former years.

5. "Beyond passing through it on my way to Nagpore, I have not yet visited West Berar. The following, however, is the latest information taken from the report of Mr. Dunlop, the Assistant Commissioner, dated Akola, 3rd inst.:—

"The weather of late has been less unfavourable, but we have still to complain of a want of rain. Within the last few days rain has fallen in the district generally in a sufficient quantity to place the crops beyond immediate danger, but not to ensure them against the effect of subsequent dry weather, and we require fully two or three inches more to make them safe.

"The rainfall at Allusna has been as follows:—

30th July	Nil.
1st August	0·30
2nd „	0·57

Total up to date 7·56 inches, and in Ballapore during these four days 0·36 inch fell. Sheagaum of late has had rather more rain than our other registering stations. The total fall in Julgaum is 6·70, and in Ballapore 5·73 inches.

"As a brief description of the present state of the crops, I would say that at present they are in quite a healthy condition, but so backward that we are more than usually dependent on favourable weather, and the monsoon has hitherto been so irregular, that we cannot look upon the success of the crop with much confidence.

"The cotton farm has fully benefited by the late rain, and the crops on it are now making good progress. The principal sowing operations are completed, and the greater portion of the seed has already germinated.

6. "At the close of my tour, that is to say in the course of another fortnight or three weeks, I shall hope to be able to supply you with further information regarding crop prospects and the area sown with cotton in these provinces.—I have, &c.,

"Harry Rivett-Carnac, Cotton Commissioner."

Death of Major J. G. Ryves.—We regret to record the death at Chepauk, on the morning of Saturday, 29th July, from liver complaint, of Major Joseph Gore Ryves, R.E., Superintending Engineer, 2nd grade, acting Chief Engineer for Irrigation Works, and Joint Secretary to the Madras Government in the P. W. Department.

Miscellaneous.

Death of Captain Turner.—It is with very deep regret that we announce the death of Captain A. W. Turner, Acting Brigade Major at Poona. He died on Tuesday afternoon of diarrhœa, after only a few days' illness. The deceased officer was a universal favourite, not only with the officers of his own regiment, but with all who knew him here.

Death of Captain Wright.—We learn with regret of the death of Captain J. Wright, of H.M.'s 106th Bombay Light Infantry. Ailing for some time, he died in a travelling carriage, on the banks of the Chumbul, en route from Gwalior to Agra. His remains were interred in the Agra cemetery, with military honours, on the evening of Tuesday, August 1.

Caste Rules.—A woman of the Kapole Bania caste has been excommunicated by her caste people under the following circumstances:—It is said that the husband had a Maratha woman in his keeping, and for this offence his wife and little daughter were excommunicated. He has since died, and they suffer the penalty inflicted by her caste. They are now destitute, and have prayed for readmittance, but are not heeded.—Arya Mitra.

Offering a Bribe to a European Officer.—A case was tried before Dr. Fraser, railway magistrate, on Monday last, in which two natives were charged—the one with offering a bribe of Rs. 50 to Captain Candy, R.A., station staff officer at Kirkee, and the other with abetting him in committing the offence. The Magistrate found both prisoners guilty, and sentenced the principal offender to pay a fine of Rs. 150, and the second prisoner a fine of Rs 100. It is not often that such an accusation can be established, as there is seldom more than one offender in such a case.—Deccan Herald.

The Ruler of Gwalior.—His Highness Maharajah Sindhia and retinue proceeded to Bombay yesterday morning at 11.30 A.M., local time. On the station were Major General J. T. Grant, C.B., and his staff, and W. Wedderburn, Esq., C.S., Under-Secretary to Government in the Political and Judicial Departments, Venayek Wassodew, Esq., Oriental translator to Government, and Capt. Van Straubenzie, A.D.C. to his Excellency the Governor, and Captain Babington, Railway Police Superintendent, with a number of civilians. A company of H.M.'s 56th Regiment, under the command of Captain Fleming, with full band and regimental colours, formed the guard of honour, while outside the station a battery of Royal Artillery from Kirkee was placed to fire a salute of 19 guns. H.H. the Maharajah was conveyed to the station in H.E. the Governor's carriage, accompanied by W. Wedderburn, Esq., C.S., and Captain Van Straubenzie, A.D.C, escorted by the bodyguard of H.E. the Governor, and a party of H.M.'s 1st Regt. L.C.—Poona Observer, Aug. 5.

Agriculture in Sind.—The following is from Sir William Merewether's Report on affairs in Sind, from 22nd to 28th July:—"Agriculture.—Cotton sowing has now been completed. The young plants springing up have been weeded and are looking well. Very little rain fell. The early sowings of American cotton are excellent. The Egyptian and Bourbon appear to be indifferent. The Peruvian, though much infested with white ants, looks healthy. Broach has a fair appearance. Water entered the Thurr Canal from the Eastern Narra on the evening of the 6th inst., and passed over the weir on the 12th idem. In the Rohree division the floods entered the Ooboura talooka from Rawulpoor territory on the 26th June; these floods, passing through several districts, fell into the Narra earlier than last year. From their extent and velocity a full rubbee crop may be expected. No damage of any importance has as yet been caused by these floods, but the new village of Tanda Nijabul, although surrounded by a bund, is suffering injury through percolation of water, its site being on sandy soil, and now found to be low ground; some houses have already fallen, and the people are thinking of abandoning the village. The old village of the same name was completely taken away by the river last year. The new site was entirely their own selection."

Horse Breeding.—The question of horse breeding is of considerable importance in this country. The subject has received much attention in our columns at different times. The result of the horse show at Ahmedabad shows some good results, and is worthy of note. The exhibition of young stock, the produce of Government stallions, at the Ahmedabad Horse Show on March 17, 1871, and following days, was most satisfactory and encouraging, showing, as it conclusively does, the great superiority of this produce over the indigenous breed of the country. This superiority is manifest in size and symmetry, in bone and power, and in a comparative freedom from unsoundness. Crossing the country mares with good English or Arab stallions is hereby shown to be attended with the most promising results, and the generally good condition of the young animals, as well as of the brood mares, proves that the owners have learned to appreciate the necessity and advantage of feeding their breeding stock liberally. This, combined with their improving judgment in selecting a stallion suitable for each particular mare, and the healthy feeling of competition incited amongst them by the prize shows, and the encouragement they receive from Mr. Borradaile, affords great room to hope that in time a really good breed of horses may be established in the country,—one producing horses suitable as remounts for the army, though for many years such colts will probably sell for more than remount prices. The Government stallions present were a show in themselves, being nine superb horses in the highest health and condition.—W. LAMB, Veterinary Surgeon.—Star of India.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Aug. 8.—The Piece Goods market still continues in an utter state of stagnation. The latest telegrams report the Manchester market dull and drooping, 7 lbs Grey Shirtings being quoted at 7s. 10½d., and 8½ lbs. at 9s. 3d. Grey, Coloured, and Turkey Red Yarns also have been dull, and a very small business has been effected in them. Grey Goods have been extremely dull, and a further decline of 1 to 2 annas per piece has taken place. In Grey Yarns there has been a further decline of about ¼ anna per lb. Metals have been steady, with little or no change in prices. In Copper no sales have taken place. In English Spelter about 300 cwts. were taken off at Rs. 9-9.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Aug. 8.—Cotton: Telegrams report the Liverpool Cotton market quieter and weaker. The market here has consequently been very dull, and prices may be quoted about Rs. 5 to 8 per candy lower than those of last week. The business done during the week for export has been small, the purchases aggregating about 3,000 bales; the principal purchases were about 900 bales Dholleras and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 215 to 218, and about 1,200 bales Meeruj at Rs. 190 to 195 per bale.

EXCHANGE.—Bombay, Aug. 8.—The business in sterling exchange for the present mail has been very small, and, owing to the state of our import market, there has been scarcely any demand for Bank Bills on the part of remitters. Rates opened with a rather weak appearance, but owing to the advance reported by wire in Calcutta, buyers were enabled to command an advance in all descriptions of about ¼ per cent. A fair amount of business has taken place in Calcutta exchange, but without any alteration in rates. On China, 60 days' sight bills are quoted at Rs. 225½ per 100 dollars.

THE INDIAN COURT AT THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—Mr. Buckmaster lectured in the Albert Hall on Friday to a very fair audience upon the objects in the Indian Court, especially the metal work and embroidery, which he described as unequalled by anything hitherto exhibited in this country. The principal pictures in the Foreign Fine Art Gallery were referred to, not in any critical spirit, but in language easily understood, and likely to be of service to the visitors. These brief expositions are a very useful addition to the Exhibition, and cannot fail to be of interest to those who are fortunate enough to hear them.

MEDICAL EDUCATION OF WOMEN.—It may be interesting to some of our readers, and probably to those connected with the medical service also, to be made acquainted with the progress of the movement for the medical education of women; we therefore insert the subjoined from a lady correspondent:—"Several ladies and gentlemen interested in the above object are about to establish a College as a direct means of giving a medical education to ladies in every respect as good as is received from the hospitals. It is to be carried out as a public institution; thereby hoping to gain general support. It having been felt that a large sum would be wanted if a building were taken purposely, the committee have been kindly granted the use of necessary departments for the College at the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart, 85, Newman-street, Oxford-street. Any ladies requiring professional assistance can obtain full particulars of Miss Brook Smith as above."

BILLS OF LADING.—The question of a uniform bill of lading, which is now being discussed by a committee of merchants and shipowners, leads to one of equal importance—viz., that of a uniform letter of hypothecation of produce or merchandise represented by bills of lading; and whether such a document, to be legal and binding, should not bear a bill of lading stamp, or an ad valorem stamp, according to the value of the property so hypothecated. On the subject of letters of hypothecation we believe the law to be singularly defective, and to admit of such a form as may suit the legal taste or acumen of any one to adopt, according to the best of his judgment. It would be difficult also to find a treatise on this important question that could be depended upon or referred to as an authority. In all transactions connected with goods or merchandise transported by sea from one place to another, and on which money is advanced by a third party, there is no part of commercial law that more requires revision, and adaptation to the laws of other countries, as well as to our own recognised customs. A great want of information as to the laws of foreign countries, it may be added, in such respects, is generally admitted, which makes the business of advancing on produce shipped thither, from India, China, or other parts of the world where our commercial relations extend, doubly hazardous.—Financier.

PAY OF INDIAN OFFICERS ON FURLOUGH.—The following letter appears in the Daily News:—"Sir,—I beg the favour of your giving publicity to the following complaint of a serious pecuniary injury that has just been inflicted by a recent order of the Secretary of State for India upon officers of the Indian service when on furlough in England. By the furlough rules of 1868, officers on leave to Europe receive half the pay of their rank on appointment, and it was then expressly laid down that this was to be calculated at the rate of exchange of 2s. for the rupee, so that an officer drawing Rs. 500 a month pay received £25 a month when on furlough. The Secretary of State has just issued an order that in future the rate of exchange is to be calculated at 1s. 11d. the rupee, which reduces the £25 to £23. 19s. 4d. The same rule has been laid down for family remittances. This reduction is a great injustice, and a direct breach of faith with regard to the furlough regulations, as is very apparent when one considers that a few years ago the rate of exchange was 2s. 1d., and even more, for the rupee, but Government never then dreamt of paying more than 2s., though now that the exchange has fallen, they turn round and say we will only give 1s. 11d. It has often been said that good old John Company treated its servants with more consideration and fairness than they meet with under the present regime, when Government seem to be ever trying to find an excuse for reducing an officer's scanty allowance. It is hardly a policy that will pay in the long run, if they desire to get good work out of their servants.—AN OFFICER ON FURLOUGH."

TELEGRAPHY.—A shareholder in the British-Indian Submarine Telegraph Company thus writes to the editor of the Financier:—"Sir,—The traffic receipts of this company for the month of July have not been published. I shall be glad to have an explanation of this sudden departure from a practice which has obtained during each of the nine months ending June last during which the cable has been at work. It is idle to say that this policy of secrecy is for the interests of the company. What it does is this—it adds one more element of uncertainty to a property in its nature uncertain and hazardous. The China and British-Indian Extension receipts for July were duly published in the first week of this month. The Great Northern (China and Japan) is a successful company of long standing, and the direction have not yet discovered that the publication of the traffic receipts works prejudicially. The practice of the railway companies of this country, with their aggregate capital of many millions, is another example in point. The shareholders of our company have on several occasions distinctly expressed their wish not to be 'kept in the dark' as to the condition of their property. At the last half-yearly meeting on June 21st, at the instance of an energetic and vigilant proprietor (Mr. William Ford), we obtained from the directors an undertaking to hold half-yearly meetings in future, and it was the general understanding of those present that the direction would continue, as heretofore, the practice of acquainting us with the condition of our business by publishing the traffic receipts of each month. I would advise the shareholders to make a united representation to the directors upon this matter at once, and in a form which shall be incapable of misunderstanding."

WELLINGTON IN INDIA.—One great characteristic of the Duke of Wellington—a characteristic not often found in those who excelled in the art of official correspondence—was a great dislike to letter-writing whenever a verbal communication could be substituted. In India the practice of writing chits, i.e. notes, on the smallest provocation has always been carried to excess, and when only a colonel the Duke exerted himself to check the foolish and objectionable habit. In 1802 we find him directing the Deputy-Adjutant-General to write as follows to Lieut.-Col. Cuppage:—"Col. Wellesley has observed that much inconvenience arises from commanding officers communicating in writing with officers under their orders, when living in the same garrison with them; and he recommends that when you have anything to say to officers under these circumstances you will order them to attend you, and deliver your sentiments to them; and also that you hear their representations in the same manner, verbally." Again, a few weeks later, in commenting upon a court-martial arising out of some disputes between certain officers, Col. Wellesley thus expresses himself:—"The whole dispute originated in the practice, so common and so prejudicial to the despatch of business, of writing upon all occasions. Captain ——, Captain ——, and Lieutenant ——, residing in the same cantonment, there was no occasion for writing a word upon the subject; the whole might have passed in verbal communications, and if that more expeditious mode of transacting the public business had been adopted, it is probable that Lieutenant —— would have given the explanation required from him; that Captain —— would not have thought it necessary to make a reference in an irregular form to the commanding officer in Malabar; and he would not have supposed he had a provocation to write an intemperate letter to his commanding officer."—Athenæum.

TRIAL OF A NEW PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM-SHIP.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's new steam-ship Mirzapore, 3,400 tons burthen and 600-horse power, built by Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock, has been tried at the measured mile in Stoke's Bay, when a speed of 13 knots was realised. A numerous party assembled on board on the occasion, comprising, besides the directors, Sir Benjamin Phillips, Mr. Scudamore, Mr. Fraser Grove, M.P., and other persons of distinction. After the trial a collation was served, and several toasts proposed, M. De Salis, one of the directors of the company, presiding. The Chairman, in proposing success to the Mirzapore, adverted to the fact that the opening of the Suez Canal had transferred the carrying trade of the East from sailing vessels to steamers, and it was to meet the requirements of the new trade thus created that the Mirzapore and several other large ships of her class had been ordered. The object of the directors in building these ships had been to obtain vessels possessing high postal speed, and at the same time endowed with large cargo carrying capacity. The Mirzapore was a ship of this description, she had great speed, she berthed also 200 passengers, and would carry 3,000 tons of cargo. The deep interest felt by the directors in the success of this ship extended beyond the immediate circle of the company. She was intended to convey cargo direct from India and China to England, via the Canal; and when they reflected on the great stimulus to the trade and prosperity of any port which the arrival and departure once a week of such large vessels involved, they would see it was matter of the highest importance, not only to the commercial interests of Southampton, but also to those of the important counties which adjoined it, that a line such as he alluded to should be established and maintained. There were other persons also besides the residents of Southampton interested in this matter—he meant the railway companies in whose hands lay the solution of the whole question. Their present rates on cargo between Manchester and Southampton were simply prohibitory, but he trusted they would see it was for their interest to adopt more moderate charges, and thus permit a commerce of a new and important character to be attracted to the chief port of the south of England, instead of allowing it to be driven to Liverpool or London, where, it was to be observed, it would be wholly exempt from railway charges of all description. The toast having been acknowledged by the builder of the vessel, Mr. Caird, and the Postal Service by Mr. Scudamore, the party returned to Southampton at six P.M. after an agreeable excursion.

OUR ARMY IN INDIA.—When a journal like the Saturday Review takes up an Indian topic we may reckon upon seeing that topic handled with a certain amount of special knowledge as well as good reasoning and literary skill. An article of three columns in last week's Review, on "Our Military Position in India," does not altogether belie such expectations. The writer takes due note of the difficulties which the new terms of short service have imported into the question of maintaining an efficient English army in India on the footing ruled in 1858. He is fully alive to the advantages of a uniform system of enlistment for home and foreign service in an army designed for either purpose, and he deprecates with some show of reason any change which would deprive our home troops of a valuable training-ground, and shut off both India and England from readily helping each other in time of danger. If India were given over to a local army, having by its side no Imperial troops as standards of discipline, the local forces would be apt, he argues, to fall off in soldierlike efficiency, as they did even in 1859 and 1860, when such standards were still before them. Here the reviewer wanders away from hard facts in obedience to the blind guides who have so cruelly misexpounded the history of only twelve years ago. We assume that his reference to the so-called "White mutiny" has been made in good faith, owing to that ignorance of the real facts which some of our leading statesmen have seemingly done their worst to encourage. An excuse was wanted for doing away with the old company's army, and so the misconduct of a few hundred mere recruits in the company's British regiment raised during the Sepoy mutiny became a convenient handle for blasting the fair fame of a local European army, second to none in the world for fighting purposes, and equal, at the very least, if not decidedly superior, in general discipline to the imported troops whose lead they were supposed to follow. Any old officer whose opinion could be given fairly and frankly would own the immense difference between the facts of this matter and the popular delusion which nothing hitherto has been strong enough to dispel. If Sir J. Kaye lives to complete his story of the Sepoy war, the eyes of his readers will no doubt be enabled to pierce through the clouds of error and exaggeration which official partisanship has raised around the character of his old comrades. He will be able, at any rate, to show that some of the older European regiments—the heroes of Sobraon, Goojrat, Delhi, and Lucknow—were specially praised by the authorities of that time for their loyal attitude under the grossest provocations; and he might point with truth to the unrivalled achievements and thorough soldiership of his old comrades in the Company's artillery, as a proof that English soldiers in India can get on very well without the help of "standards" borrowed for their benefit from the army at home.—Home News.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE HARBOUR ENGINEER.—The following letter from Mr. Robertson has been despatched to Lord Napier, Governor of Madras:—47, Albany-street, Edinburgh, June 29, 1871. My dear Lord Napier,—I observe in this week's Homeward Mail that the Madras Chamber of Commerce had addressed a memorial to the Government, expressing their dissatisfaction at what I had done in India, objecting to my not having examined the harbours during the monsoon but only in the fine weather, and stating that I had not been furnished with plans, &c., of the Madras break-water. You are aware that the Madras Chamber of Commerce only expressed a wish to meet me the day before my steamer sailed, and that I was quite unaware of their desire to meet me in a body. When I heard they wished to do so at once, I gladly attended a meeting in their hall, and was only sorry they had not asked me before, as both my visits to Madras were for a fortnight each. With regard to the time of my visiting the harbours, this took place, it is true, during the time of the fine weather, for this is the only time when much boating and coast work can be done with any safety at all. Moreover, I saw then all the bars at the river mouths at their worst state, which is the time an engineer prefers to inspect a harbour. Before leaving Calcutta the Government of India furnished me with all the various plans for break-waters at Madras, and the reports of the committee, &c., quite enough for me to form an opinion on the subject, taken along with inquiries made on the spot from individuals, though not from the Chamber collectively. At the meeting, however, I was shown a plan (and I think it was the only one on the table) in a bound-up book, by Mr. DeClosets, for docks on the island, which I did not remember having seen before, nor have I yet come cross it amongst the Government papers. The Chamber kindly gave me a copy, and I am, therefore, most likely in possession now of all that has been written about the question. However, I have not come to it yet; for it is better to take up my various reports, some eighteen in number, in the order in which the places were inspected. In visiting the whole of the seaboard of the Madras Presidency in one fine season, I thought I had worked hard, though it is quite true that the pleasure of Lieutenant-Colonel Farenell's society made it to a great extent a work of pleasure. At all events, it has given me as much work as it is possible to do before my return to India. Would you kindly send the chairman a copy of this, as the post is on the point of going?—Madras Times.

Messrs. Jay Cooke, M'Culloch, and Co.'s New York "Weekly Circular," with Mail dates to August 15, and Cable despatches to August 30, says:—

"The present unprecedentedly high prices of United States Bonds warrant the conclusion that the time has arrived when our Government can issue Five per Cent. Obligations at par; and this opinion receives the strongest possible confirmation from the fact that those most intimately connected with the market for our securities at home and abroad have within one week very largely subscribed for the New Five per Cent. Bonds. At the moment, foreign exchange is weak and dull. As usual at this season, the commercial demand for bills is light, and time exchange is made freely in anticipation of the exports of the new cotton crop. The supply of bills against local exports is still liberal, and a moderate amount of good bankers' paper, made against corporate loans negotiated in Europe, or securities sent there, is coming on the market. The gold premium declined about ⅜, upon the announcement of the new loan arrangements, but subsequently recovered to the extent of the fall upon the opinion that the negotiations will not so far affect the supply of gold upon the market as to interfere with the ability of the cliques to control the premium, and to compel the large number of 'short' sellers to pay high rates of interest for their borrowed gold. Reports from the South are still favourable to the prospects of the cotton crop. Within the last few days there has been a moderate fall of rain in the cotton States, which has much benefited the growing crop. So completely has the prospects changed within the last two months that some of the Southern reports admit the possibility of the crop being equal to that of last year. However this may be, there can be no doubt the supply will exceed the expectations very generally entertained in the trade a few days ago."

COTTON.—The total quantity of cotton shipped from Kurrachee in June comprised 900 candies of 240 lbs., of which 539,000 lbs. were exported to London direct, and 37,240 to Havre. The total number of bales was 1,527.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

C H L O R O D Y N E

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, being the Inventor was deliberately untrue, which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, July 13, 1864.

The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE, from which frequent fatal results have followed.

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug. 1, 1869, which states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the Inventor of Chlorodyne; that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered.

CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. Wholesale Agents for Sydney—Messrs. Elliott, Brothers. THE HISTORY
OF THE
BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.
FROM THE
APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE
TO THE
POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.
BY
LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,
Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Literator.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; its points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

A PRACTICAL GUIDE TO SQUAD AND SETTING-UP DRILL,
In accordance with the Principles laid down in PART I. FIELD EXERCISE OF THE ARMY,
Adapted for the Use of Recruits, Rifle Volunteers, Militia, Police Force, Schools, and Families.
ILLUSTRATED WITH SIXTY-EIGHT FIGURES,
Representing Back Stick and Club Exercise, Extension Motions, and Sword Exercise Positions.
BY S. BERTRAM BROWNE,
Sergeant-major London Rifle Brigade, late First-class Sergeant-Instructor School of Musketry, Hythe.
Author of "A Companion to New Rifle Musket," &c.
Second Edition, with Additions.
To be had of all Booksellers.

PROFESSIONAL OPINIONS
SUPPORTING AND RECOMMENDING THIS SYSTEM.

March, 1871.

I have much pleasure in bearing my unqualified testimony to the admirable system of military exercises as given in Sergeant-major B. Browne's book. I can speak confidently of it, having had personal experience of its value. I am in the habit of recommending it to all those under my care, who require this additional mode of treatment for developing their frame.

C. M. MILLER, M.D.,
Assistant-surgeon, London Rifle Brigade.

MR. BROWNE,—Nothing can be more true, in my opinion, than all you say in favour of training all our boys to military exercises. Its usefulness cannot be overrated, either to the boys themselves or to the nation, which would thus find, in a short time, and without any inconvenience or effort, the best part of its educated population prepared to take part in the defence of the country, almost without training, and should their services in this way happily never be required, the country would still have the satisfaction of seeing its young male population immensely benefited in health, strength, appearance, and general manliness. If carried out at all schools, it would become the favourite pastime of the boys.

H. EYRE, Lieutenant-general.

Birkbeck Schools, Kingsland, N., March 7, 1871.

For some years past all the boys and girls of these schools have been put through a course of systematic drill, such as that laid down in Sergeant-major Browne's book. The results have been in the highest degree satisfactory. Not only is the physical condition of the children greatly improved, but the discipline of the drill-ground produces habits of obedience and attention, which, carried into the school-room, conduces greatly to the mental progress of the children, as well as to their moral welfare.

Under the time shall come when the Government shall wisely insist upon every child being efficiently drilled, schoolmasters who have not yet tried the experiment will do well to do so without delay.

Of course it is of the utmost importance that the drill-instructor should not be a mere martinet. He must be able to convey his instructions clearly and pleasantly; have an unlimited supply of patience, and show that he really takes an interest in his work.

It has been our good fortune for some years to have secured the services of Sergeant-major Browne, the author of this little book ("Setting-up Drill," &c.), who is not only assiduous in performing his duties, but who is fond of his work, and shows it, and therefore succeeds admirably.

JAMES RUNEZ, Head Master.

Kingsland Middle Class Schools, Sandringham-road, March 7, 1871.

Physical exercise is undoubtedly one of the requisites of youth, and if such exercise be conducted with a purpose, it is not only productive of health to the body, but also induces habits of order and energy. In our schools the system of drill instruction has been of Sergeant-major best results, and I am quite convinced that any school would be the better for its introduction. Of course a great deal depends upon the drill-instructor; but if such an one as ours (Sergeant-major Browne, who is thoroughly fond of the work, and at the same time a strict disciplinarian and a perfect gentleman), be obtained, the result will be all that can be desired.

ROBERT LANE, Head Master.

Southgate-road Middle Class School, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

It is fortunate in the present day there is but little need for insisting upon this physical training of youth, as its importance is so generally recognised. To insure success, however, it is indispensable that it should be conducted by well-qualified instructors, such as are apt to teach, of gentlemanly manners and good disciplinarians. From my experience of Sergeant-major Browne, I am able to testify to his possession of these qualifications, and have very great pleasure in recommending his system of drill to those who may be desirous of introducing physical exercises into their schools.

THOMAS WILSON, F.R.G.S., Head Master.

Finishing Establishment for Young Ladies,
Benyon-house, 32, Culford-road, De Beauvoir-town, N.,
March 6, 1871.

Mrs. Aldam has great pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficiency of Sergeant-major Browne's method of drilling, and as possessing not only great patience, but also consideration for the strength of the pupils, that no undue fatigue is occasioned, no too sudden a strain upon the muscles of growing children, eager, perhaps, to outdo their schoolfellows, a point too frequently overlooked, when a large number are being drilled.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Aug. 15; Agra and Madras, Aug. 13; Calcutta, Aug. 12.

THE Bombay papers still complain of the scanty rainfall on their side of India. In one week only an inch and a-half had fallen, and the whole amount down to latest dates did not exceed thirty inches. Around Dharwar there had lately been some wet weather, but not enough to allay the fears entertained for the safety of the grain crops. The plants that had come up were far below the average height, and much of the land remained unsown. From the Berars and Central Provinces the reports of the cotton crops are at last good, and no fears are expressed as to the future yield. The plants are said to be thriving over at least three-fourths of the cotton area, and the remainder, it is hoped, will turn out well in spite of the insufficient rainfall. It is feared however that, unless the average fall is made up before the middle of September, Bombay must look forward to a hot and unhealthy autumn season. The damage done to the Bombay and Baroda Railway has already been repaired as far as the twenty-eighth mile from Ahmedabad.

IN spite of the damage done by floods to parts of the Bombay and Baroda line, we are glad to hear that the railway bridge over the Nerbudda, which had hitherto suffered more or less every year since its construction, has this time withstood the fury of a very high flood without hurt. The happy result appears due to the measures lately taken at the suggestion of Mr. Matthew, the Chief Engineer, for strengthening the bridge by screwing the piles down to a much greater depth, and digging deep trenches to carry off some of the water. This rather expensive process, which the Government long shrank from trying, is supposed to have made the bridge safe against the highest floods that are likely to assail it.

A HEAVY disaster appears to have befallen the Punjab Railway Bridge over the Beas. A hundred and eighty yards of embankment on the Jalundar side have been carried away, leaving a watery gap of the same width, which passengers have to cross by boat. Great damage has been done to the protecting wall. One of the piers gave way altogether, and tumbled into the water, carrying with it the girders across the last two spans. It was feared that another pier would soon fall in. A train which happened to be on the bridge was swept into the watery gulf, and the carriages were soon tossing down the swollen stream. The stoppage of traffic will probably be serious, for there seems no chance of repairing the bridge before the river has subsided, and that will take some time. It is fortunate that no lives were lost, but some of the passengers must have been terribly shaken and a good deal bruised.

MAHARAJAH SINDHIA left Bombay on the morning of August 13 for Nassik on his way home to Gwalior, after spending ten days in the Western Capital. He seems to have lived very quietly during that time, keeping for the most part among his own people, the Mahrattas, to the disappointment of those who looked for a little more pomp and splendour from the foremost representative of the princely Peshwahs. Some people also find fault with him for [illegible] mendicants in preference to objects that better please themselves. But that is surely a matter about which his Highness may be allowed to please himself.

THE Duke of Argyll's despatch of 29th June, 1871, to the Indian Government on the Duke of Edinburgh's visit to India, appears somewhat after time; but his Grace excuses the delay in sending it by reason of his desire for full information touching the details of the visit and its immediate results. As a formal acknowledgment of the readiness shown by the Princes and Chiefs of India to "demonstrate their sense of the honour done to them by the visit," and their "devotion to her Majesty the Queen," the letter will no doubt be received with becoming thankfulness; and those for whom it was written will be glad to hear how pleased her Majesty's Government were "to know that many of the Native Princes and Chiefs sought to commemorate the sojourn of his Royal Highness in India, not by costly pageants, as in days gone by, but by enlightened acts of philanthropy, especially by endowing institutions for education, which will confer lasting benefits upon the people." His Royal Highness will feel duly flattered by the compliment paid to "the judgment, tact, and courtesy" by which he "won the respect and regard of all classes in India." He will also be relieved to learn that his visit laid "no perceptible burden" upon the people of India, at a time when it was necessary to "put some pressure upon the Indian taxpayer." His Grace devotes one sentence to the famine, which put a stop to "all idea of a vast assemblage at some central points," and another to "the excellent judgment and discretion evinced in all their arrangements by Sir Neville Chamberlain, Sir Seymour Blane, and Captain John Clerk." A well-meant if hardly pertinent reference to Sir N. Chamberlain's "high character as a soldier," closes the despatch.

MR. GEORGE CAMPBELL, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, is actively discharging the proverbial duties of a new broom. His pen has of late been very busy. One day he makes a raid against the Revenue Board; on another he lectures some of his subordinates for failing to ride about the country; and now he has spoken his mind about the management of the local jails. The unjudicial element has had too much of its own way. Since medical officers have taken charge of the jails, their whole attention has been fixed on manufactures and sanitary considerations. Prisoners are neither separated nor classified. "Long term men and short, hardened criminals and young men convicted of most petty offences, are all herded together in the same yards and workshops." This occurs even in the great jail of Alipore, while in the female jail at Russa "murderesses and misdemeanantes, and women under trial" are all "kept promiscuously together." This indeed cannot well be remedied until the central jails are completed and the district jails improved; but Mr. Campbell insists on an immediate change in the treatment of short-term prisoners. Instead of being simply locked up without any kind of employment, their imprisonment should be "vigorous and stinging," and measures to that end must be taken at once. Even the long-term prisoners have too many indulgencies. Tobacco was "at one time all but permitted," and criminals of the deepest dye have at once been "put into high office as gaol writers." In short, the system followed "seems to be too much that of a manufactory and too little that of a jail." With regard however to the employment of prisoners as warders, overseers, and so forth, Mr. Campbell prefers it for various reasons to the old plan of hiring warders, provided that what he calls "judicial considerations" are not neglected. The reforms he calls for may involve some increase of outlay, but due care will be taken to sanction no needless or unprofitable increase of cost. For all these purposes he has given the chief control of the Presidency jails to a judicial officer, who will look into the subject from the judicial point of view, with an eye to the due punishment and prevention of crime, rather than the making of large profits from prison labour.

WHAT are the right precautions to take against cholera, is still one of the most puzzling questions of the day. Whether the cholera poison is conveyed in the air or the water, or through both, and how far the disease can be kept off by a process of strict quarantine, are among the points on which doctors seem to differ the most widely. In England there is a tendency to believe in quarantine, while in India medical opinion rather sets the other way. Dr. Smith at any rate, the Sanitary Commissioner for Bengal, has small faith in the efficacy of quarantine. In his report for 1869 he declares that "there is much evidence to show that the disease appeared simultaneously and independently in many places; because, in a large number of such instances, although special enquiries were instituted to the subject, importation could not by any means be traced; because in certain localities free communication with infected places went on without any manifestation of the disease occurring; and lastly, because its often sudden and simultaneous disappearance over broad tracts of country tends to prove its dependence on influences far other than those of mere human agency." In some few instances the disease appears to have been spread by human intercourse; but for all that Dr. Smith believes that "quarantine operations of the most complete and perfect description" would have failed to stop the spread of cholera in 1869. It is possible that his inference may have been drawn from incomplete or misleading data, but as Dr. Cunningham, in his review of all the Indian Sanitary Reports for that year, cautiously remarks, the facts cited by Dr. Smith "are of great importance in the enquiry, and are well worthy of being recorded in detail."

WITH regard to the baneful influence of venereal disease among English soldiers in India, Dr. Cunningham makes some just remarks. Admitting with Dr. De Renzy that the disease in question has never been among the chief causes of mortality in India, he quotes against that officer the figures which show how largely its presence impairs the general health and efficiency of our Indian garrisons. Out of a daily average of 1,590 sick in 1868, the venereal cases were 365; in 1869 the proportions rose to 1,985 and 436 respectively; and in the following year there were 430 venereal cases each day out of 2,017 men in hospital. Statistics alone will never perhaps show the part actually played by diseases of this class in swelling the yearly list of invalids, or impairing the vitality of soldiers' children; but "anyone acquainted with the British soldier knows how frequently that deterioration of health which leads to death or discharge from the service is traceable to the syphilitic poison." People may differ as to the moral bearings or the remedial fitness of the measures taken to arrest disease; but it does certainly seem "incredible that anyone acquainted with the facts should argue that this class of diseases is comparatively of so small importance that no means need be taken for its prevention at all." That the results of the methods lately employed for checking those diseases in cantonments have fallen short of men's expectations, Dr. Cunningham freely admits; but these shortcomings are entirely due to "the very imperfect manner in which the system has been worked. Wherever the civil and military authorities have combined to give it a fair trial, the results have been very different." Even from the figures above quoted, it is easy to see the marked improvement that has taken place in India since the introduction of a Contagious Diseases Act into Indian cantonments. That yet greater results will follow in good time, if the outcry raised by sentiment-mongers in England fails to hamper the movements of Indian statesmen, we cannot but believe. In all such campaigns against a long-prevalent disease, time and calm persistence are necessary conditions of success.

A CLEVER writer in the Pioneer has given us an Anglo-Indian version of the "Battle of Dorking"—itself ascribed by common rumour to an Anglo-Indian pen. "How we Lost India" supplements the dismal picture of Britain's downfal, as presented in the other well-conceived but very alarmist essay. It describes the conquest of India by the Russians, and their mode of governing the conquered country. Having swallowed Persia first, and entered into a league with Turkey, Spain, Prussia, and Italy, the great Northern Power seals up Egypt, and then sends forth the invading hosts through the Khaibar Pass. They make short work of the small British force left at Peshawar, and proceed to attack our main army posted on the Sutlej. Of course our brave countrymen perform miracles of valour, but in vain. The Sepoys with their Enfields are no match for the foe, and we have no mitrailleurs in the field. Our left gets finally crushed for want of the right ammunition, the centre broken and driven back in confusion, the reserve itself is forced to surrender, and only the shattered right wing makes good its retreat to Delhi, thence to Fort William, and finally to England. The Russians establish a purely military government, the native princes are all deposed, the knout and the spy system flourish everywhere, crime is sternly repressed, justice promptly if rudely rendered, trade and industry encouraged, and the native nobles crushed and humbled. A large revenue is obtained by farming the taxes to leading natives, under heavy penalties alike for extortion and default of payment. Some twenty millions of surplus are yearly remitted to St. Petersburg. The Russian language is taught in all the schools, fakeers and other mendicants are suppressed, violence offered to a Russian is punished with death, and everyone has to salute the Russian uniform. The great Brahmo apostle himself, K. C. S., gets knouted for daring to "comment unfavourably on the despotic nature of the Russian rule," and flies to London, where he is received as a martyr. Sanitation is carried on everywhere with a high hand, and cholera almost ceases to appear in an epidemic form. The press of course is placed under stern censorship; and the moral of the story is that "it is not by preaching liberty, equality, and fraternity, and by pandering to the vices of a degraded nobility, that an alien race can best rule an Asiatic nation, and that were no love can ever be, fear must reign in its stead."

HAD the writer been less careful to imitate the painter who wrote beneath his picture, "This is a lion," we should have given him credit for several morals, each more to the purpose than this retrograde worship of brute force. We had hoped, for instance, that his picture of Russian rule was meant as a warning to those restless spirits who would exchange the King Log of to-day for a King Stork from the banks of the Neva. We had detected, among other things, a telling hit at the policy which declines to arm our sepoys with the same weapons as their British comrades, and supplies them with officers liable to be continually shifted from one duty to another. For the present we can only add that if the Russian conquest of India depends on the rout of a British army along the Sutlej, it will be a long time before we shall have any cause to dread the issue of a Russian invasion through the Khaibar.

SEVERAL letters from Indian officers have lately appeared in the Times, all dealing with the long-deferred settlement of the Indian Bonus Question, as compared with the liberal terms so readily accorded to officers of the British Army. One of them draws a contrast between the justice meted out to "the rich officers of the Royal Army, who alone could pay over-regulation prices," and the scant consideration hitherto shown for the equal claims of poor officers in the Armies of India. Another points with still greater force to the difference between a purchase system carried on to some extent in direct violation of the law, and one which was "formally sanctioned by letters from our late masters, the Hon. Court of Directors . . . and the British Government through the Board of Control." In face of the Parliamentary award of compensation for illegal claims, we may well ask on what plea of simple justice or expediency a similar concession should be any longer delayed to claims which nothing but a lawyer's taste for quibbling could dream of calling illegal. The bonus system of the late Indian Army was, in plain truth, deliberately sanctioned in 1837 by the Court of Directors writing under the direct authority of her Majesty's Government acting through the Board of Control. That system was wholly upset by the Acts of 1858 and 1860, which abolished the Company's rule and established a Staff Corps on a new principle of promotion. The Company's officers were formally guaranteed against any consequent loss of rights, privileges, and expectations. Lord Cranborne's Despatch of August, 1866, founded on a special vote of Parliament, endorsed at any rate the principle of indemnifying public servants for losses caused by their masters' own acts. But the due application of the principle was so ingeniously shirked in the instructions sent out to India, that not one officer in twenty has ever been repaid the money actually laid out by him in buying steps; far less the money he would have received from his juniors on his own retirement. In view however of this year's vote, the old argument against giving compensation for anything but the sums actually paid by each officer becomes obsolete and unjust. According to the new Act a purchase officer in the Queen's Army is to receive "a sum equal to the estimated price at which the commission held by him on the said appointed day would have been saleable if this act had not passed." This surely is plain enough. It lays down the principle of compensating an officer, not for the sum of his past payments, but for the money he expected to receive on his own retirement. The same principle is extended to the officers in the new Line Regiments, who are to receive a sum equal to what they would have received from their juniors, according to the custom of their regiments, had they retired by a certain date. Practically speaking, a Purchase Officer may sometimes get back no more than the value of his past outlay, but the principle of the new concession is based on his expectations alone, not on the sums already paid by him. In the case of the non-purchase regiments, which have a bonus system practically the same with that of the old Indian Army, except in the matter of legal sanctions, that principle has been yet more clearly affirmed by the amended Clause IV. What wonder then that Indian claimants whose case is much the stronger both in law and equity, and whose prayer for justice remains unanswered after nine years' waiting, feel sore at the very unequal measure they have hitherto received? Let them however have a little more patience, and their cause must soon prevail. In reconsidering the question by the light of the new Act, the India Office must have time, we suppose, for a further reference to India. What the minor Governments will counsel we can easily guess from their recorded minutes; and as for the Supreme Government, we cannot believe in the likelihood of their offering further resistance to a demand which Parliament, if the case were once more fairly put before them, would never stultify itself by refusing.

The next Overland Mail from India will not be due in London before Sunday next.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, September 12, 1871.

INDIA IN 1869-70.—II.

If the table-lands of Mysore were free from the famine that wasted Rajpootana in 1869-70, they did not escape wholly from disasters of another kind. Owing to a failure of silkworms and to the ravages of the "borer" insect among the coffee plantations, a part of the revenue derived from mulberry gardens and coffee culture had to be remitted. The coffee exports raised from 21,845 estates, covering more than 100,000 acres, amounted only to 3,349 tons, against 5,220 tons in the previous year. One difficulty with which the Mysore planters, mostly Europeans, have to contend, may have had something to do, we fancy, with this great falling off. Besides paying a small excise duty on the spot of sixpence a maund, coffee is charged in England a much heavier duty in proportion to its prime cost, than tea. The tea-duty has been continually lowered, but no corresponding reduction has been made on coffee, although so much of it is now grown in English dependencies by English planters. Mr. Lowe should look to this matter during the recess. Of the million sterling raised as Revenue from Mysore, more than £75,000 was obtained from the sayer or excise duty on tobacco, betel-leaves, cocoa-nuts, opium, and wrought piece-goods. From 24 State Forests covering an arrear of about 370 miles the year's net profits were £20,000. The revenue obtained from more than 40,000 looms amounted to £7,400, while opium yielded only £50. Out of £170,000 spent on public works, £30,000 was devoted to irrigation, chiefly to the repair of the many tanks with which Mysore has been endowed. It is proposed in future to entrust these repairs to the revenue officers, and to let the tanks, when complete, be managed and maintained by the ryots on certain conditions.

There are 24,950 police, employed at a cost of nearly £68,000 in a province containing over four million people within an area of 27,000 square miles, about the size of Bavaria. Mysore possesses 120 criminal courts of all kinds and eight jails, in which 1,795 prisoners were daily confined in 1869-70 at an average cost of £8. 1s. 7d. a man. The police are said to be badly organised. They seem moreover prone to take up persons on the slightest possible grounds, for two-thirds of their prisoners were acquitted upon trial. The progress of education in Mysore was satisfactory. The new hobli or smaller district schools, of which there are 645 in all, appear to have answered well. There is still room for better things in a province where only 17,137 scholars can be mustered out of 200,000 boys who need schooling, especially as more than 2,000 of these scholars are girls. The desire for more education however is evidently spreading, and a good many candidates now go up for admission into the uncovenanted service. Native teachers are learning their work in the normal schools, and many of the Mysore nobles attend the school in which Colonel Malleson is charged with the teaching of the young Maharajah. In the extent of land laid down with rice and food grains there was an increase of about one and a-half million acres. The trade of the province was generally good, £1,211,660 being the value of the exports, and £2,368,353 that of the imports.

Coorg, like Mysore, suffered from the ravages of the "borer," which destroyed some of its finest coffee-gardens. The staple products of this little highland State, which contains about 180,000 souls in an area of 2,400 square miles, and yields a revenue of less than £59,000, are coffee and rice, nearly 80,000 acres being planted with the former and 77,000 with the latter in the year under review. In its jails about seventy-one prisoners are daily kept at a total cost of £850 in the year. In point of education Coorg beats the rest of India, one in ninety of its population going regularly to school.

From the native States directly controlled by the Viceroy, we turn now to the various provincial Governments. Bengal Proper, with an area equal to that of France, a population of forty millions, and a revenue of some sixteen millions sterling, claims first place. In the year under review the revenue was less by three quarters of a million than the year before, owing to a decline of more than a million upon opium alone. The customs revenue also fell off by nearly £150,000, or about one-sixth. There was a heavy increase of outlay on opium, the marine, law and justice, and one or two more items; but, after all deductions, Bengal was able to spare nearly nine millions for Imperial purposes. The sea-borne trade of Bengal for the year was worth about forty-seven and a-half millions, or three and a-half millions less than in the previous year; but the net customs revenue, thanks to the increased salt tax, amounted to £3,560,055, or a few thousands better than in 1868-9. Calcutta is still the great port for the foreign trade of Bengal; Chittagong, which bids fair to rise into importance, still ranking second, "longo intervallo." The police of Bengal cost a million sterling, more than half of which was defrayed from Imperial funds, and more than a third by the zemindars. Of prisoners there were 64,729 admitted during the year into forty-three regular jails, and a daily average of 19,984 were maintained at a net cost of £3. 12s. 8d. each, after deducting the value of what they earned. This is a low average compared with the £5. 13s. 3d. each prisoner costs in the North-West Provinces, with the £6. 14s. each costs in the Punjab, and the £5. 18s. 4d. each costs in Bombay.

Tea-culture has made steady progress in Bengal. The 315 gardens in Assam cover an area of 246,584 acres, of which only 28,954 acres have as yet been planted. These however in 1869 produced nearly 5,000,000 lbs. of tea. The 10,769 acres already planted in Kooch Behar yielded 1,319,743 lbs. in 1869, or a third more than in 1868. In Sylhet the outturn was 362,962 lbs. From 24,151 acres of tea-garden in Cachar there was a total outturn of 4,234,794 lbs. It was a bad year for tea in Chota Nagpore, but a fair one in Chittagong. Altogether 12,690,000 lbs. of tea were shipped from Calcutta in 1869, or 1½ million pounds more than the previous year.

On the last day of March, 1870, there were 170,713 pupils distributed among 4,189 public schools; figures which show an increase of about five per cent. on the year before. It is pleasing to learn that the Bengal colleges are almost entirely frequented by the lower sections of the middle classes, and that "nearly one half of the total number of students in schools of all descriptions" are contributed by the lower orders, who likewise furnish a fourth of all the students learning English. Here at any rate is strong if indirect testimony to the advantage of teaching English in State-aided schools.

Owing to the Viceroy's disinclination to make reprisals for raids into the British frontier, the projected march of a British column into the Loshai country never came off in 1869. In compliance however with the requests of several Loshai chiefs, Mr. Edgar, Deputy Commissioner of Cachar, set off to meet a party of them, headed by Sookpilall, who had taken a leading part in the raid of 1868. That meeting led, as we know, to the visit of last year, in which Mr. Edgar hoped to settle with his Loshai friends the British boundary line from Munnipore to Hill Tipperah. During that visit occurred the last raid into Cachar, an incident which, by tending to implicate Sookpilall himself, threw an air of failure round Mr. Edgar's mission. It remains to see whether Ghoorkas, Sikhs, and mountain batteries will prove more successful negotiators. In the Chittagong Hill Tracts, which also suffered that year from frontier raids, an attempt not very successful was made to teach the hill-children their letters, and to set up workshops for their parents. Sixty-seven boys in all were taught in three schools, but only eight pupils attended the two workshops, so strong is the dislike of these people to any labour that can be avoided. The same tendency hinders all attempts at teaching them to exchange their wasteful process of "joom" cultivation—firing the jungle and sowing seed among the ashes—for civilised farming with the plough. Among a similar people in the Garo Hills the attempts to break them of certain bad habits in respect of blood feuds between families was more successful, the Deputy Commissioner of those tracts having been specially thanked by the Government for the number of such feuds which he had managed to settle, either peaceably or by sterner means.

In the North-Western Provinces the rains of 1869 came late, but not too late to save the country from a second year of scarcity. Only in the outlying Rajpoot district of Ajmere was there much distress from the successive ravages of drought, locusts, and blight; all which entailed large remissions of land-revenue, and no small addition to the year's expenditure. In this year however the central college was established at Allahabad for the students of the North-Western Provinces, amidst general applause and large subscriptions from the natives. By the end of March 1870 no fewer than 63 towns had formed Municipalities under the Act of 1868, and the new committees were working well, with the least possible supervision on the part of the Government. In this year also a Government Advocate was first appointed for the province. There was little increase in crimes of violence. The conduct of the police was generally good, 73 per cent. of their prisoners being convicted. The total of prisoners rose from 84,327 to 105,300, distributed between six central, three divisional, and 32 district jails. With returning plenty the rate of admissions sensibly decreased. Of the convicts 24 per cent. were engaged in manufactures, 18 per cent. in menial services, 41 per cent. in building, repairs, &c. About 7,000 of them received instruction.

Of the 200,831 pupils attending school, more than 52,000 were brought up at indigenous schools over which the Government claims no supervision. Of the rest, 102,358 attended the Hulkabundee or village-circle schools, 10,000 were taught in mission and other schools founded by private charity, and 10,000 more were girls. About 30,000 only receive instruction of a higher sort in the Government and State-aided schools and colleges. Two hundred thousand scholars out of two and a-half million boys, to say nothing of girls, is not much to boast of, but as compared with former years the results were "not unfavourable" on the whole. It is satisfactory to learn that the old popular objection to girls' schools is fast losing ground, and that the normal schools for both sexes are making steady progress. The number of native newspapers in the province increased from nineteen to twenty-six, with an aggregate circulation of 7,064 copies. Articles on the vagrancy question, on the substitution of Hindi for Persian as the Court language, and a set of papers in which Sayad Ahmad described his travels in Europe, were most noticeable specimens of native journalism. Sir W. Muir's prize of £100 was won by Moolvie Nazeer Ahmad, author of "The Bride's Mirror," a simple and pleasing tale of Mohammedan domestic life.

Owing to the heavy rainfall in September and October, the cotton crop yielded only 37 million lbs. instead of 80 millions. For the same reason the amount of land irrigated during the year was 24 per cent. less than in 1868; but the canal revenue fell off only 16 per cent., the Ganges Canal paying a net profit of 7 per cent., while the profit on the Eastern Jumna Canal amounted to 27 per cent. on the capital expended. About 626,000 patients were treated in 132 dispensaries. The revenues of the province amounted to £6,056,137, of which more than four millions sterling accrued from the land, and £324,198 from irrigation works. It is worth noting that bicycles were first introduced into the postal service of the North-West Provinces in 1869.

COLLEGE FOR BLIND SONS OF GENTLEMEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—Those who have glanced over your advertising columns may frequently have been reminded of the existence of one college in the whole of Europe, the specialty of which is the high-class education of blind sons of gentlemen. We desire now to make widely known a movement that is designed to extend the privileges of such an institution. It will easily be understood that the education of blind youths to a high standard is a work requiring a very complete organisation, and involving a somewhat expensive staff. On these accounts the wealthy alone can hope to secure the advantages we offer, unless facilities be provided for a diminution of the regular charges. And that such should be provided is evident from the fact that to the majority of our clergy, officers, and members of other professions the payment of a hundred guineas for the education of one child is an utter impossibility. It is strengthened by another fact, and that is, that the number of blind of the higher classes are hardly great enough to support more than one institution.

We are endeavouring to meet the difficulty by the opening of a fund for the foundation of scholarships which shall be applied in the reduction of the charges for all the advantages of the college, in suitable cases. The Bishop of Worcester, Lord Lyttelton, and the Principal of the College are the trustees, and founders will have nominations to scholarships.

I could give some touching instances of the dismal condition of a blind youth, untaught and unoccupied, and also of cases of destitution where blindness and good social status went hand in hand. But I am convinced that harrowing details are not needful to lead our philanthropists to remember, amongst all our educational projects, the one college for blind youths. I feel certain that we have but to indicate the want and the work to meet with a large number of founders.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, Robert Hugh Blair, M.A., F.R.A.S. &c.,

Worcester Blind College. Principal.

THE SALT TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In your paper of the 5th inst. I find two notices regarding the working of the salt tax in India, which deserve consideration.

1st. In page 850 Mr. Saunders in his report on the Berar Ceded Provinces shows that, in spite of a reduction in the salt tax, its yield has increased by several thousand pounds.

2nd. In page 851 it appears that the residents in British Burmah have protested against being taxed as heavily for salt as the residents in Bengal.

The principle adopted hitherto in imposing the salt tax has been to get as large a revenue as possible without serious thought for the health of man or beast. If the English people knew how much disease has been, and is now being, caused by the high price of salt in India, they would quickly force the Government to consider the wants of the poor. It is an admitted fact that the excessive mortality among cattle has been owing to the want of salt. I have been surprised to see during the past month how much salt cattle in England will eagerly consume; but here we are near the ocean, and the climate is temperate. How are cattle to live in the burning plains of India 800 miles distant from the sea, if deprived of salt? The poor brutes try to find it in the soil, but in some parts the soil is not saliferous, and they consequently die in numbers; if their owners venture to go a few miles, and dig up a little salt earth for them, the possessors of such earth are liable to be pounced upon by the exciseman. Sheep and pigs devour ordure in order to obtain the salt therein.

What I wish to urge is, that the equalising process of salt duties in India should be to reduce the high duties to the lower level, and not to raise the lower to the higher. The tax imposed upon salt should never exceed per maund the wages of an agricultural labourer for fifteen days. A peasant with a family and two plough bullocks requires at least one maund of salt in a year, but he cannot afford to pay six rupees for it. He therefore gives to cattle very little or none, and buys nasty salt for himself and his children. I have caused to be analysed at various times, and in various places, specimens of this nasty salt, in which large quantities of sulphate of soda, or Glauber's salts, have sometimes been found. Glauber's salts may be very useful in the dispensaries, but it is abominable in the cook pot.

In estimating the cruel severity of the salt-tax in India we must remember the difference in the wages of unskilled labour in India and England. In England such wages are usually ten times higher than in India. In parts of Oudh a few years ago an agricultural labourer received daily two seers of khurreef grain (bajra or small jowar), in value about 1½d.

What would the English poor say if each family were to be taxed £3. 6s. for the privilege of eating salt? The English Parliament does not require more for the privilege of driving a carriage and pair.

No man, woman, child or beast has ever been known willingly to eat too much salt. The great increase in consumption of late years in Central India conclusively proves not only that wages have risen, but that the amount formerly consumed was inadequate to preserve health.—Your obedient servant, T.

THE MIDDLEMAN IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

The Indian Economist declares that its indignation at the late Settlement proceedings in the Central Provinces cannot cool, because the infamous fact is ever before it that 500,000 cultivators in those provinces have been handed over as tenants-at-will to a class of middlemen who have been created for the purpose of rack-renting them and appropriating the property of the Commonwealth. Ten years ago the State took the rental; now the malgoozar is to take it for all time. Six annas per acre is all that the Commonwealth is to get for the next thirty years, while the malgoozar is positively urged to raise the rates upon his tenants by the machinery of our law courts. Such conduct is an outrage upon the times. At the very moment when we are doing this Mr. Mill is writing in the Fortnightly Review:—"If there is a truth emphatically taught by political economy, and from which no one who has the smallest tincture of the knowledge of it withholds his assent, it is that the status of an agricultural tenant-at-will is intrinsically vicious, and in a really civilised community, ought not to exist." Who then is the ryot's friend; we, who would give him tenant-right, and leave a substantial part of the rental in his hands; or they who hand him over to the malgoozar to be rack-rented for all time? It was bad enough that we had to tolerate the middleman where we found him; it is an infamy to have created him as has been done in the Central Provinces. Where we have not purposely created him, we are nevertheless bringing him into being, by the unduly low rates of assessment we have imposed upon the land of late years. For wherever the cultivator is in the hand of the bunia, it is the bunia and not the cultivator who reaps the harvest of our folly. What we compassionately leave to the ryot, the soucar considerately takes to himself, and when he sees fit, sells him up altogether, and makes the right of occupancy his own, as in Mr. Wassoodew's case. The result, therefore, of these unduly low assessments is two-fold:—It (1) brings a class of middlemen extortioners into existence all over the country; while (2) it forces upon the State the necessity of resorting to export duties, and excise duties, and income-taxes, and other devices of supplemental taxation of which the name ought not even to be known in India.

EUROPEANS AND NATIVES.

The Bombay Gazette observes that the equality which in our sentimental moments we used to talk about on paper, without having any sincere belief in it, has become a reality. In the Government service, in every profession, and in every branch of trade, natives elbow us from our places; and it is evident that, even if no additional facilities be granted them for gaining high office in the State, they must before many more years have elapsed destroy all vestiges of that English ascendency—alike political and social—which within our own recollection seemed to be so complete and indestructible.

This revolution—for it is nothing less—has possibly made greater progress in Bombay than elsewhere, because the events of 1864-65-66 gave a deadly blow to English prestige in this Presidency. The way in which the names of Government servants were mixed up with share speculations of no very creditable kind fatally weakened the moral authority of the ruling class. The old mercantile society of the place, too, has been broken up, and the course of business almost entirely changed. A few merchants retired with fortunes, many others lost both money and credit. In the general wreck, more and more of the trade of Bombay fell into the hands of the native merchants, who being suddenly deprived of the support on which they had been accustomed to lean, found out, at first to their surprise, but afterwards to their great satisfaction, that they were quite competent to walk alone. The custom, too, which has grown up among merchants, since travelling to England became so cheap and easy, of going home for a few months every year, cannot but diminish their regard for and influence in Bombay; and, without meaning to say a word in disparagement of the new men, we think it is undeniable that we may look around in vain for successors to such men as the Flemings, Michael Scott, Andrew Grant, Walter Cassels, and others who might be named, in the legitimate authority they exercised by virtue of their position as not only leading merchants but public spirited citizens of Bombay. We have no wish to exaggerate the importance of the change that has taken place, or to act the part of a mere laudator temporis acti. Such a transfer of power as seems to us to have been nearly accomplished was natural and inevitable—from some points of view it was even desirable. But it is at least not out of place to note that the old state of society in Bombay has now almost passed away, and that, partly owing to local circumstances of an exceptional kind, but in great measure to the gathered force of the education we have for years been giving to the people, the long-wished-for state of equality between Europeans and natives of this Presidency may now be said to have been achieved.

COAL RATES ON INDIAN RAILWAYS.

The Indian Daily News holds that the East Indian Railway has not the excuse of some other Indian lines, that it is compelled to burn English fuel, for it draws its supplies of coals from its own collieries at Kurhurbarree or from the Raneegunge pits. This being the case, it seems to us the railway stands in its own light in forcing up the cost of coal. Its interest is to draw capital to the vast mineral fields at the threshold of which stands the Raneegunge coal field; its practice is to drive capital away. The charges for coal act in practice as a check upon the industry of Calcutta, and prevent it from developing many branches of manufacture, which with cheaper coal would be sure to find a place in our midst. It seems to us that a single company should not be allowed to exercise such a power as this, and that as the Board of Agency cannot make up their minds to charge a reasonable rate for the transport of the produce of the Raneegunge lines, the Government might with justice institute an enquiry, and refer the matter to the Secretary of State. The guarantee system is not worth much if it operate to prevent the Government from redressing a manifest grievance, or if it permit Railway Companies, without interference, to cripple a great industry, and unduly raise the price of an article which but for railway charges would speedily drive imported fuel out of the market. We have said that the proprietors of collieries have begun to move in the matter; but as it concerns the general public even more than those who have coal for sale, the Board of Agency may be sure that a persistence in their present charges will provoke prolonged agitation. Lower rates will not subject the Company to a loss, for more coal will be burnt. Just now it is a question, with all who have to do with engines, how fuel can be economised, and the consumption of coal reduced. In fact, the dearness of fuel, and the heavy sum which this item presents in all accounts relating to the working of engines, are driving engineers to invent all manner of devices for reducing the consumption of fuel. There is another view of the matter. If Calcutta complain and with justice, of the dearness of fuel, in consequence of the prices of transport, it is quite clear that up-country stations must suffer in even a larger degree, and that in point of fact we have yet to wait for the day when coal shall begin to be an article of general consumption in the great cities of the Ganges Valley. As far as we have been able to discover, the railway has not a leg to stand upon in maintaining its present charges for carrying coal. If it be said that a reduction would not pay, we can only say that we should like to see the calculation on which the statement is founded. One thing is very clear to our thinking, and that is, if it will not pay the East Indian Railway Company to reduce its rates on coal from Raneegunge to Calcutta, it is hopeless to expect any good from the fields discovered in Central India. India will be in this position—that, possessing abundant supplies of coal, it will not pay her to work them.

SAUGOR BARRACKS.—There is to be yet another committee on the Saugor barracks, and this time the members composing it are—Mr. Armstrong, Chief Engineer, Central Provinces; Colonel Sir E. Leeds, Bart., and Messrs Johnstone and Hooper, the former from Jubbulpore and the latter from Nagpore.

VICEREGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Council met at Simla on Tuesday, the 25th July, under the presidency of Lord Mayo.

The Hon. Sir Richard Temple moved for leave to introduce a Bill to regulate the transport by railways of dutiable goods to places beyond the customs line. One result of the rapid extension of railways in India had been that large quantities of goods were carried across our frontiers and serious frauds practised in the evasion of the customs duties, not through any fault of the customs officials, but through the fault of consignors or consignees. When goods had to cross a customs line, they could be dealt with in two ways—there must either be a vexatious system of examination at the line itself, or there must be a system by which all despatchers of dutiable goods might be obliged to take out passes on despatching the goods and by which despatchers of non-dutiable goods might be compelled to declare that they were so. There were of course cases, notably that of salt, in which the carriages conveying it might be easily examined on crossing the customs line; but it appeared, on the whole, that the best plan was to strike at the root of the evil, and provide that all goods should be protected with a pass. In order to give the Council an idea of the intention of the Act, he would ask leave to read the third and fourth sections.

3. Any person wishing to forward dutiable goods or any package containing a dutiable article by any public conveyance to any place situate across a customs line, may apply to the head of such customs line or to some officer duly authorised by him in that behalf for a pass. The said pass shall be in duplicate, in such form as the local Government shall from time to time direct, and shall be granted by the head of the said customs line or the officer so authorised as aforesaid, on payment of the duty which according to law would be payable at the customs line in respect of the goods or article for or in respect of which the pass is granted.

4. Whenever any person not having the customs pass mentioned in section two tenders a package for transport by a public conveyance to a place across a customs line, the booking-officer shall, before booking such package for transport, require such person to sign a declaration that the package contains no dutiable article.

These two sections were the leading provisions of the Bill; all the rest had to deal with penalties and other subsidiary details. He hoped that, after hearing this explanation as to the scope of the Bill, the Council would grant him leave to introduce it.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Stephen introduced the Bill to amend Act No. V. of 1840 (concerning the Oaths and Declarations of Hindoos and Mahometans), and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report in six weeks. The necessity for this Bill arose from the fact that the provisions which at present allowed of the substitution of declarations for oaths, extended only to witnesses, and did not embrace the case of jurors in criminal trials or coroners' inquests, for whom it was desirable to provide. Mr. Stephen had originally proposed to deal generally with this subject in the Evidence Bill, and several sections had been inserted in that Bill for this purpose. One of those provisions was that if the Court considered that a witness felt any particular form of oath especially binding, that particular form might be employed. The one object of oaths was to increase the likelihood of people telling the truth, and if one form of ceremony was more likely than another to secure this end, it was, Mr. Stephen thought, only reasonable that this form should be adopted. The essential part of the present Bill was, however, the provision that, in all cases, a solemn declaration might be substituted for an oath. Moreover, the Act which it was proposed to amend extended only to Hindoos and Moohomedans. There was no possible reason for this restriction.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Strachey presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to authorise the extension of the Chaukidari Act to places where there is no jemadar of police.

The Hon. Mr. Cockerell moved for leave to introduce a Bill for declaring the local extent of certain Acts of the Imperial Legislative Council. He said that the Bill related to (1st) Acts of a general character passed by the chief Legislature since 1834, which were capable of being applied to the whole of British India, but contained in themselves no express definition of their local extent; and (2nd), Acts which, though for the most part in general operation in the non-regulation, in common with the regulation, provinces, had never been legally extended to the former.

As the sole object of the Bill was to remove any doubt as to the intended local extent of Acts applicable to all the British territories in India, it would not include any Acts of more limited application, or whose local extent was already otherwise sufficiently defined.

The Bill was designed on the same principle as a Bill for declaring and consolidating the law relating to the local extent of certain Regulations and Acts which had for some time past been before the Council, and was intended to form a connecting link between that measure and the Bills for declaring the law in force in the Punjab and elsewhere, for the introduction of which leave was recently obtained.

The general nett result of these and other projected measures of a similar kind for declaring the law in force in the different non-regulation provinces would be to simplify and render easy of accomplishment what had hitherto been an intricate, he might say almost impracticable task, namely, the ascertainment of the entire operative law on any given subject within any particular portion of this vast Empire.

The Hon. Mr. Stephen observed that the intention of the Bill was merely to supply an omission which occurred in many of the older Acts, namely, a distinct declaration of their local extent. The result of this omission was, that there was some doubt in the case of such Acts as to whether they were intended to apply to the whole of British India or not. This doubt it was now proposed to clear up, and the Bill was calculated to facilitate the administration of the law.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon. Mr. Cockerell also presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to pensions.

The following Select Committee was named :—

On the Bill to amend Act No. V. of 1840 (concerning the oaths and declarations of Hindoos and Mahometans :—His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, the Hon. Messrs. Strachey, Cockerell, and Egerton, and the mover.

The Council adjourned to Tuesday, August 1, 1871.

At the meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council on August 8, Mr. Cockerell's Bill, for consolidating and amending the law relating to pensions, was passed; and Mr. Stephen presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Hindoos' and Mahomedans' Oaths Bill.

Miscellaneous.

AJMERE COLLEGE.—The Marwar Gazette announces that H. H. of Jodpur has presented a lakh of rupees to the Ajmere College; also, that he has set apart eight lakhs for the construction of roads.

PECULATION.—The Subordinate Judge, as also the Deputy Collector of Burdwan, have been suspended on suspicion (so the Indian Mirror states) of having been "parties to the unfair sale of certain lands."

A FALSE REPORT.—The report that the head-quarters of the Central Provinces Administration were to be removed to Jubbulpore has been emphatically contradicted. "The question," we read, "has never arisen."

MILITARY.—It is considered likely that Colonel J. Watson, C.B., V.C., aide-de-camp to the Queen, Commanding the 13th Bengal Lancers, will succeed Colonel Probyn in command of the Central India Horse.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN BASEVI.—We regret to learn of the death of Captain J. P. Basevi, R.E., in the Chang-chen-mo Valley, north of Ladak, on the great Yarkand route. No particulars have has yet been received.

CUSTOMS.—It is rumoured that Mr. John Dalrymple Maclean, now on leave, and shortly expected in Calcutta, will officiate for Mr. A. J. Crawford as Collector of Customs and that Mr. J. G. Charles will officiate as Deputy.

BENGAL COAL COMPANY.—The Directors of the Bengal Coal Company have, it is reported, forwarded a memorial to the Governor-General in Council, setting forth their claims to the exemption of coal-mines from the operation of the District Road Cess Act.

UNDER SECRETARIES.—The Government of India, the Indian Daily News has learned, contemplates revising, or rather reducing, the salary of the Under Secretaries attached to the several Secretariat Offices in India, and also the pay of the Deputy-Commissioner of Inland Customs. The sanction of the Secretary of State to the measure proposed has been solicited by the Indian Government.

KOOLIN POLYGAMY.—We read in the Indian Mirror that "the great social reformer, Pundit Ishur Chunder Vidyasagur, has taken up the question of Koolin polygamy." The Pundit has published a pamphlet against the evils of this monstrous vice; this is not however his first attack, for we are told that, five years ago, Vidyasagur was to the front as a spirited opponent of Koolinism.

A NEW PAPER.—We feel bound to pay the tribute of our admiration to the new Calcutta weekly, the Indian Observer, nor do we think it extravagant to say that it is the ablest paper which India has produced in our time. To literary power of a very high order, and clear insight into the troubles of our times, there is joined a deep true sympathy for the people, filling the paper with heat as well as light, and making it a most welcome addition to the Indian press. The exact knowledge which the writers show of the condition of things in Bengal, and the power and earnestness with which they handle its difficulties, must strike the most casual reader we think, and we can but hope, whoever the writers are, that they may long continue in the field they have so opportunely entered. To ourselves, the Observer is a most grateful surprise, dealing as it does with the philosophic side of a line of policy of which the Indian Economist feebly expounds its economic aspects.—Indian Economist.

LOODIANAH.—The Deputy Commissioner of Loodianah has succeeded in tracking the butcher murderers of Raikote to the village of Cheenewal in the territory of H.H. the Maharajah of Puttialla. Suspicion pointed to one Khajan Singh, a Kooka Sikh, as ringleader, so he was arrested; and after some time a clue was obtained, which, by the cordial co-operation of the Puttialla authorities, led to the arrest of the whole band, with the exception of one. Four of them, natives of Puttialla, have been convicted and sentenced to death by the Deputy Commissioner of Loodianah.

AMEER KHAN.—The Englishman has it on good authority that Amir Khan was found guilty only on the first and third counts of the charge against him, and was acquitted on the remaining ten counts. An application was made to the additional Judge for an order under Section 421 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, for suspension of the sentence pending an appeal to the High Court, but the Judge refused to grant this. "From a different, but, we believe, an equally reliable source, we also hear," continues our contemporary, "that three out of the four Assessors acquitted Amir Khan on all the counts of the indictment. The first and third counts on which the prisoner was found guilty charge him with having abetted the waging of war against the Queen at Calcutta in September, 1861, and May, 1862. If he had been tried in Calcutta, both these charges would, we understand, have been barred by virtue of the law which fixes a period of three years' limitation in cases of treason."

OUR CIVIL COURTS IN THE PUNJAB.—A Sikh gentleman, whose age and experience entitle him to speak with some authority on questions relating to the late and present administration of the Province, was asked whether our Civil Courts were popular or not. His reply was that they were not. At first, said he, they were. The European officers then introduced into the province were specially selected. They had a clear field before them, and worked well, mixing much with the natives and taking pains to acquire a knowledge of the country and the people. Now, however, things have changed. The blush of novelty has worn off. Your officers rarely know the law, and they don't take the trouble to acquire a proper knowledge of the people or their customs. Much abuse is heaped on the Kardars of the Sikh time, who, single-handed, managed larger districts. They are compared unfavourably with judges of the present day. But consider the two for a moment. The Kardar certainly was generally uneducated; he was of necessity summary in his procedure and arbitrary in his judgments. But yet he was thoroughly acquainted with the character and usages of the people, and had, in some measure, to respect the opinion of his equals. Your European judge, on the other hand, though educated, is not only ignorant of the character and customs of the people, but in most cases even the language. He is supposed to be guided by a law, with the first principles of which he is imperfectly acquainted, while his procedure, purporting to be fixed by rule, is really as capricious as that of the Kardar. Indeed, many of your judges openly profess their contempt of the law which they have sworn to administer, and substitute for that certain law their own uncertain judgment and caprice. Then, again, continued the Sikh, the old system had this advantage. A suitor could at least buy justice by bribing a capricious judge. Now, however, you may be cruelly wronged, yet justice is not to be had at any price.—Indian Public Opinion.

ACCIDENT ON THE PUNJAB RAILWAY.—It appears that on the night of the 27th the through train from Lahore to Delhi left at the usual hour in the evening, and arrived at the western or Lahore side of the Beas Bridge between one and two o'clock on the morning of the 28th. The river was tremendously flooded, and it was considered unsafe to send the train over the bridge. The passengers were sent over on trollies, and a special train previously arranged for conveyed them onwards; at that time there was no gap. The eastern defence wall was known to be shaky, but had not given way. However, immediately after, the water made its way in behind the eastern wing wall in question, and sweeping away the embankment, left rails suspended in air and a fearful chasm below. The train from Delhi to Lahore soon after arrived at Kurtarpore, nine miles from the scene, and the passengers were told to come out of the train and wait at that station. The tender, engine, and fuel truck, a composite carriage, a saloon carriage, and the break van were sent forward with a few officials and the mails. A red lamp was at the gap, and several other lamps were further up the line on the Kurtarpore side. A red lamp was said to have been placed about 600 yards from the gap, and the driver was instructed to shut off steam when he saw the first red lamp. The driver had never been on that line before, and he was told to be specially cautious. Mr. Ross, the traffic manager, was standing at the gap. The night was very dark, but when he heard the train coming he sent a guard up the line to meet it with an additional danger lamp. As this man was walking forward the bank gave way under his feet, and he fell and broke the lamp. The other red light was not seen. It is to be noted that the signal-man in charge of it is reported as missing. The train moved on, and before it could be stopped had run on to the rails, which were simply suspended in air. These instantly gave way. The tender being foremost went down first, the engine next falling sideways and turning wheels up, and the saloon carriage and postal carriage on the top of the engine a little to the left side. The break van hung for some time on the edge of the chasm, and at last went in too. One by one the scared individuals who had been inside escaped from their extraordinary position, and the only life lost was that of an unfortunate dog, the property of one of the passengers who remained at Kurtarpore. The engine-driver broke one of his ribs. The fall of the train into the gap is described by those who were present, and who were shouting themselves hoarse to the driver to stop, as something very terrible to see. It must indeed have been a sight never to be forgotten to see the chain of carriages steadily moving on, carrying with them an unknown number of living beings apparently doomed to certain destruction. It was a very great relief to discover that from the confused mass piled up above the passing engine every soul had escaped safe.—Bombay Times, Aug. 15.

Imports.—Calcutta, Aug. 12.—We have no change to report in the position of our markets, business transactions during the past week having been extremely limited. Advices from the interior are still of an unsatisfactory nature, and dealers here meantime keep out of the market, having no requirement for goods, and expecting to see a lower level of prices before they are in a position to re-enter the market.

Exports.—Calcutta, Aug. 12.—Jute: Though the arrivals of new Jute have been on a large scale, prices have continued firm, and in some instances a slight rise has been maintained. Saltpetre: The amount of business done during the week has aggregated about 300 tons, with a slight turn in the market in favour of sellers. Rice: There has been a somewhat better demand for fine white, for shipment to Melbourne, at from Rs. 3-6 to 3-7; middling Moonghy and Bullam have risen one to two annas. Linseed: The market has been inactive, and prices for bold have given way about an anna. Rapeseed: There has been a further decline in prices, and but little business doing; but quotations are almost nominal. Raw Silk: There is more disposition on the part of native holders to sell, but at a large sale of the well-known J. and R. W. mark during the week, full prices were realised. Bad accounts still continue to be received of the prospects of the rainy bund.

Madras.

Educational.—We (Madras Times) hear that Mr. Thom, Principal of the Dovetown Protestant College, has resigned that appointment, and that he is to be appointed Head Master of the Government, School at Rajamundry.

Travancore.—The Resident at Travancore has been directed to convey to the Maharajah the best thanks of this Government for the kind attention shown by his servants to certain ship-wrecked British subjects of a vessel named the Fanny, which was abandoned by the crew off the island of Minikai.

The Hunterian System.—A Madras paper laments to hear that orthodox officials, who have espoused the Hunterian system, write of Ooty as Uti, and of Coonoor as Kunur. We hope the gentleman whose business it is to paint the signposts will not be ordered to adopt the new mode of spelling.

Tea on the Shevaroys.—Major Hunter has kindly sent to the Madras Times a sample of the first tea grown on the Shevaroy Hills. Our contemporary has tasted the cup which cheers but not inebriates prepared from this sample, and the flavour seems to him to be very good, though distinctly peculiar. Major Hunter has two acres under tea.

Weather in Burmah.—From Burmah we learn that the weather up to the 24th July had been boisterous; but the ploughing and sowing of the paddy fields have been completed, and all reports say that the agricultural operations are progressing well everywhere, and fully as much land as last year is again being brought under cultivation.

Monkeys.—The Municipal Commissioners of Madras, we are told, have actually been successful in trapping and deporting into the country one hundred and six monkeys, at a cost of ninety-one rupees! There seems every probability that the indefatigable Sanitary Inspector will be able to get rid of a large number during the course of the year.

A Curious Tradition.—In the Coimbatore district of the Madras Presidency there exists a tradition that at one time the country thereabouts was peopled by a pigmy race, three feet high and with flowing beards, who were ruled over by a gnome Rajah who lived on a mound. The mound is still pointed out, but its existence has been fatal to the tradition, for Dr. Hunter on opening it found cinerary urns containing bones of full-sized men.

The late Colonel Boileau.—It is our painful duty to chronicle the death of a well-known and distinguished officer of the Royal Engineer Corps, Colonel A. J. M. Boileau, whose death at Cuddalore was telegraphed to the Presidency yesterday. Perhaps few officers of the Army or of the Royal Engineer Corps have done more for their Queen and country than the subject of our remarks. Colonel Boileau's services are as numerous as they are varied, and never have we known an officer take more interest in his work, or more assiduously care for the welfare of his Department and subordinates than he who has just passed away. This gallant officer entered the Corps Engineers in 1838, and his services are as follows:—Served with the Scinde Field Force from February 1841 to December 1843 under Generals Brook, England and Napier—was present at the destruction of the Fort of Emamghur on the desert, at the battles of Meanee and Hydrabad, and at the occupation of the Fort of Omercote—served in the Persian campaign and was present at the siege of Mohumra—also in the Malwa and Central India campaigns, was present at the relief of Mhow, affair before Dhar, siege of Dhar, battle of Mundisore, relief of Neemuch, siege of Ratghur, relief of Saugor, siege of Gurrokota, attack on Fort of Baroda, battle of Muddimpoor, siege of Jhansi, battle of Koonch, affair before Calpee, and battle of Calpee. Received a contusion on the arm from a bullet at Mundisore—medal for Scinde. In consequence of the death of Colonel Boileau, we trust that Colonel Carpendale, who comes in for his off-reckonings, will not be ousted out of his present appointment. Colonel Carpendale is an officer valued by Government and greatly esteemed by the public for his sound judgment, and as a hydraulic engineer he has earned a considerable reputation from the Government and the public. Now that this officer has been appointed to a post for which he is eminently qualified by ability and long experience, we can only express a hope that he may not be disturbed, more especially as his present appointment is one he likes and suits him in every way.—Madras Athenæum, Aug. 11.

THE BANGALORE SCANDAL.—A further inquiry into the Bangalore Van Ingen affray took place before Captain Gowpertz, the cantonment magistrate, on Monday last, when Messrs. Lambert and Frere were examined at great length. Mr. Lambert's manner in the witness-box, we regret to say, was very unsatisfactory. The inquiry is again adjourned, the second prisoner being in the meantime released on bail.

LIABILITIES OF PRINCE AZIM JAH.—The Commissioner for the Settlement of the Accounts of his Highness Prince Azim Jah Bahadur having closed the accounts of the prince on the 31st of July, and there being still fifty creditors more who have not come forward to demand their claims (notwithstanding the notification in the Fort St. George Gazette), the Agent for Carnatic Stipends a few days ago addressed the Government asking them what he should do with the money remaining unpaid to the fifty creditors, out of the fifteen lakhs of rupees sanctioned for the clearance of his Highness's debts.

THE LATE MR. R. UPSHON.—We regret to announce the death, at his residence, Vepery, on Sunday last, of Mr. R. Upshon, late Registrar of the Government Secretariat. Mr. Upshon enlisted in the ranks of the Honourable East India Company in 1834. After serving for a period of ten years, during which time he discharged his duties to the entire satisfaction of his superior officers, he bought his discharge in 1844. In 1846 he was entertained in the Government office as a clerk, where, from his aptitude for business, energy, and zeal, he was promoted to the office of Registrar of the Chief Secretary's Department. In 1870 he had to take his pension on account of the "fifty-five years' order." From the formation of the Infantry Volunteer Guards the deceased was a captain of one of the companies, and was much liked by his brother officers and men.—Athenæum, Aug. 13.

THE CENSUS.—The gigantic task of tabulating and digesting the fourteen millions of returns from the Madras Presidency census has, the Madras Times hears, been offered to Mr. C. E. Gover, the Municipal Sanitary Officer, in consideration of the great attention he has given to the subject and the general acceptance which his proposals have met with. The revenue Board nominated Mr. Gover, and the Government have requested the Municipality to place his services at the disposal of Government for a period of about eight or nine months. The last English census cost £162,000 and occupied the Registration department, under Major Graham and Dr. Farr, for a period of four years. It has been computed that the Madras Presidency returns will present six hundred millions of entries referring to land, cattle, and persons. The expected population is greater than that recently reported as living in Great Britain and Ireland, and the number of questions asked in each instance is nearly double the number asked in England. The returns will be in about eight languages, English, Tamil, Telugu, Canarese, Hindoostani, Malayalum, Oriya and Tulu, besides isolated schedules in Guzerati, Mahratti, &c.

THE TRADE OF MADRAS.—If we may judge of the increasing trade of Madras from the number of vessels in the roads, and especially of the number laid on for London, it might be safely said that the commerce of the port has improved. There were in the roads the other morning fourteen ships ready to receive cargo for London, and of these the Teviotdale was preparing to start on her homeward voyage after having earned Rs. 70,000 as freight. The Cassandra, which left last week, earned about Rs. 40,000. Of the fourteen vessels only five have almost completed their loading, and as there is some competition among the ships, rates for freights will go down a little. Besides these vessels, the agents of the B.I.S.N. Company are booking freight for two steamers via the Canal, and one or two other vessels are expected from the coast, to load for London. Some of the cotton presses in Madras are very busy, and it is a source of satisfaction to find that after a regular stagnation in the trade of Madras there are signs of a revival. Boat-hire is cheap, and owners will be glad to accept Rs. 1.11 for shipping and Rs. 2 3 for landing, though the regulation rate is much higher.—Madras Standard.

BANK OF MADRAS.—At the meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Madras, held on Monday last, the affairs of the bank, as submitted in the directors' report and statement of accounts, were discussed by two or three shareholders, who expressed themselves dissatisfied with the scant and meagre information given in the report, with regard to the losses which the bank has sustained during the last year. The reduction in the rate of interest on fixed deposits, which the bank has lately made, was also a subject on which dissatisfaction was expressed. A resolution was adopted by the meeting that the questions discussed, and the matters upon which information is required, should be embodied in a supplemental statement and report, and be submitted for the information of the proprietors and all others who may be interested in the affairs of the bank. We think it a pity the directors did not give this information in the report submitted by them to the proprietors of the bank at the late meeting. It would have looked very much better for this information to have been volunteered than for it to be called for, as is now the case, by the proprietors at their half-yearly meeting assembled. There is a strong feeling abroad that the losses of the bank are in reality much more heavy than represented by the directors in their report, and great anxiety is felt by the proprietors to know the extent of the damage which has been done. An ingenuous and open-hearted policy would have been a far better one for the directors to have adopted than the reticent and unsatisfactory course they chose, compelling the proprietors, in self-defence, to call for explanations, and thus reducing the directors to the humiliating position of having to render an extended account of their stewardship.—Athenæum, Aug. 13.

THE PROSPECTS OF THE COTTON CROP IN BERAR AND THE WURDAH VALLEY.

The following letter from Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac has been received by the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay:—

Camp Akola, dated 12th August.

Sir,—In continuation of former correspondence I have now the honour to report on the state of the weather and the prospects of the cotton crop in the Central Provinces and the Berars during the past week.

2. The accounts of the crop in the Wurdah Valley and the East Berar Division still continue to be everything that could be desired. I have ridden through a good many fields in the country a few miles north of Oomraotee, which place I have just left, and the plants appeared to be in excellent case and well forward. And I have heard not one single word of complaint of the season in my conversations with the native merchants and cultivators in this part of the country, a pretty sure sign, I think, that prospects are favourable.

3. The prospects in this part of the Berars (West Berar) are not so good. The complaint of want of rain is pretty general. In support of this I append extract from Mr. Dunlop's report, dated Shangaum, August 9th:—

"We are still suffering from want of rain. The weather continues to be cloudy, and daily partial showers fall, but the general cry in the district is for more rain. The young crops are fresh and green-looking, but are not making such rapid growth as they ought to, and there is an urgent need for two or three days' good heavy rain. If this does not come the prospects of the season's crops will be bad.

"The last few days have been warmer than usual, which makes matters worse.

"Akote is the only part of the district from which I have received any favourable news. The tehseeldar of that talook, writing on the 7th instant, says, 'There has been a great fall of rain here, and the cotton and other crops are now in a thriving condition.' This is probably the case all along the base of the Sautpoora range, for I have observed that the clouds have almost invariably been attracted towards these hills, and the tehseeldar of Julgaum reports that from 1st to 7th instant he registered 1·17 inches. The want of rain is most severely felt in the centre and southern portions of the district. In Sheagaum during the week under report we have had a very meagre supply. In my report of the 3rd instant I stated that the total rainfall had reached 7·56 inches, and since then we have had only 0·12 cents, making a total of 7·68 inches. Such rain as this is dried up by an hour of sunshine, and has almost no effect upon the crops.

"The crops on the cotton farm are backward, and, unless we get an abundant supply of rain soon, I fear the results will be very disappointing. So far the late-sown plants are in a healthy state, but without more rain to set them up they could not stand any prolonged dry weather."

4. The reports of the Deputy Commissioners of the Akola and Booldana districts, dated 8th and 7th inst. respectively, are also appended. In the report of the Akola district it is stated:—"The fall of rain during the week is so small that there is little or no improvement in the condition of the crops, but the weather being cool they have not materially suffered except the cotton plants, which are in some places destroyed by insects. On the whole the agricultural prospects are unsatisfactory." With reference to the Akote talook it is stated, the rainfall during the week has been beneficial, Jowaree (millet) plants in some places six to eight inches high, and cotton plants four to five inches.

In the Khangam talook it is reported that "the crops of jowaree and cotton sown at the commencement of the monsoon towards the hilly country are in excellent condition, but the crops on black soil which were sown lately are but just coming up." In the Balapore talook the sowing of the cotton has been completed, but the seed on black soil has not germinated. Rain much wanted. In the Julgaum talook it is reported that "the crops are in good condition."

5. The Deputy Commissioner of the Booldana district, writing on the 7th inst., says, with reference to the Chicklee talook:—"The fall of rain has been very light and partial during the week. In some favourable places the crops are fair. In the eastern and southern parts of the talook they are withering. Owing to this the ryots are much dispirited, and have taken their cattle to the ravines, leaving agricultural work." Of the Maiker talook, he says:—"Sowing of kurreef has, since the fall of rain on the 31st July, been commenced. In the Lower Pergunnah the fall of rain is reported in some places to be plentiful." And of the Mulkapore talook it is reported—"There has been pretty good rain during the week, and the already sown crops have benefited by it."

7. The reports from the Bassein district are not favourable, but this is not one of the most important cotton growing tracts.

8. The prospects of the season's crop may be briefly summed up as follows—In the Wurdah Valley, and in the eastern half of the Berars, prospects are very favourable. In the Akote country, and towards Julgaum, in the Akola district of West Berar, there has been sufficient rain, and at present there is nothing to complain of. At Akola itself, Khangam, and in the parts of the Bassim and Booldana districts, rain is much wanted, and the present state of the crop is critical. If rain falls again in the course of one or two days all the crop in the only portions of the Berars regarding which any anxiety is felt will not suffer materially, and this portion of the Berars represents rather less than one quarter of the whole cotton field.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) HARRY RIVETT-CARNAC, Cotton Commissioner.

P.S.—The following information, dated August 10, has just been received from the Assistant Commissioner of the Bassim district, who reports that the state of the weather is "more seasonable than at date of last report," and that crop prospects are brightening. And further adds:—"From 4th inst. to date (10th) we have had considerable rain, and we may reasonably hope that the tract which was suffering will pull through."

13th August, 1871. (Signed) H. R. C.

The following telegram has been also received from the Cotton Commissioner by the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce:—

"Akola, 14th August, 1871. Cotton prospects in Wurdah Valley and East Berar continue favourable, so also in Akote country. Around Bkola, Khangam, and to the south, rain is much wanted, and if further delayed, damage will result. Threatened portion comprises less than one quarter of cotton field."

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, July 31.—One by one Kurrachee is being deserted by all her old friends. Among the passenger list of last Saturday's steamer to Bombay appears the name of Dr. Morton, who is, beyond all question, an ornament to the profession, both as regards skill and unremitting attention. Although attached to the 2nd Belooch regiment, he was to be seen anywhere and everywhere, ministering to the wants of the sick, who had no claim whatever on his services, and in his case it may be truly said that his labour was a labour of love, and justly earned for him the sincere gratitude of all classes of the community. Assistant Surgeon Keelan has assumed temporary medical charge of the 2nd Belooch regiment. Major W. Widdicombe, Judge of the District Court of Kurrachee, goes home this mail on a short leave of three months to recruit his health. It is believed that Captain G. C. Grant, from Hyderabad, will act for Major Widdicombe, while Captain C. F. Boulton, 1st class Deputy Collector in Sind, will officiate for Captain Grant as District Judge of Hyderabad. Business has received a decided impetus lately, owing to the steady rise in the price of cotton in Liverpool. Large shipments of the staple are going forward to the home and China markets as well, for in the latter also the value of cotton has proportionately increased. At present cotton forms the chief item of our exports, and little, if any, of any other produce is being shipped. The French ships Brise Lames and Winslow, which left this for Havre about a couple of weeks ago, carried some rapeseed, but their chief cargo was cotton. It has since been reported that the Winslow struck on the bar on her leaving this port, and was compelled to put into Bombay to repair the damages she had sustained. There has been a little commotion in our mercantile circles about this unfortunate event, owing, it is said, to the captain of the vessel loading her a few inches deeper than seventeen feet, which was the limit fixed by the master attendant. It is true vessels of greater draught than seventeen feet have entered our harbour, but this is no excuse for the captain acting contrary to the instructions of the port officer, who is appointed to look after the interests of the shipping, and is responsible for any disaster that may arise in shipmasters adhering to his gauge of the depth of water on the bar. Where such an onus rests on one's shoulders, it is far better to err on the side of caution, if one errs at all. We have had no rain yet, although it has been threatening for the past two months. We have very high winds blowing, and as long as they continue we may look for a shower, and look in vain. The weather however is delightful, mornings exceedingly cool for this time of the year, and evenings the same.—Bombay Gazette.

BARODA, Aug. 11.—The installation and the presentation of the dress of honour (or poshak) to the Guickwar took place yesterday morning. At seven A.M. the Resident and Staff, accompanied by all the British officers in camp, arrived at the palace, where the Guickwar's troops were already formed up; the usual military honours were rendered, and the bands played "God Save the Queen." On the dress of honour being presented to His Highness by the Resident, the silver guns and three batteries of 68-pounders fired a royal salute; the British Artillery also firing a salute, the three Infantry corps firing simultaneously a feu de joi of five rounds each man. The Resident and suite then returned to camp, and the troops were dismissed. At two P.M. they formed procession and escorted the Guickwar into camp, where on arrival the troops formed into line facing the Resident's bungalow, and saluted his Highness as he passed to enter. At the same time the British Artillery, who were posted, under Captain McLoughlin, facing the gateway, fired a Royal salute, and another on the return of his Highness. Thus ended the installation ceremony of Mulhar Row, Guickwar. The elephant on which his Highness sat in the golden howda was one of enormous size, very richly caparisoned with cloths of gold and silver, jewellery, and ornaments of great value. His Highness left the city in an ordinary every day dress of plain white muslin; but on arriving within two hundred yards of the Resident's bungalow the elephant was stopped and made to kneel, while his Highness, in presence of a great multitude, commenced to dress himself in his robes of honour, and to cover himself with heaps of jewellery, ere he entered the presence of the representative of British power. The dresses and jewellery, were all laid out on the roadside on a white sheet, and a couple of large and splendid mirrors were in constant requisition to enable his Highness to adjust everything to his satisfaction. The crowd was immense, such as never before has been witnessed at Baroda on any previous occasion; and in the city, during the morning ceremony, it would have been perfectly practicable for a person to have walked on the heads of the people, so closely packed were they. The Guickwar, of course, appeared very grand, and indeed magnificent, the pearl necklace alone is worth an incredible sum; the diamonds in his turban, the wristlets, anklets, and various other articles were almost "too numerous to describe." The people, of course, cheered and shouted long life to him as the Guickwar passed, and all seemed joyous and glad. With regard to a paragraph in the Times of India the other day as to his Highness's intention to have a gold and silver carriage made, I may tell you that it is already constructed. Its chief beauty lies in the gold and silver filigree work which has been freely applied. The design is said to be entirely his own, and the ornamental work has been carried out under his directions.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MORE FRAUDS AT JACOBABAD.—Colonel Phayre has succeeded in discovering some serious defalcations at Jacobabad, by which Government has been defrauded to the tune of Rs.65,000. The mookhtyarkar of Thoor, named Wissundass, and his head moonshee Giddoomul, who are implicated, are in custody, and a close and searching investigation is being instituted, which is leading to further revelations of a startling nature.—Sind News, August 7.

The Floods in Guzerat.—The recent heavy rains in Guzerat have caused considerable damage to the B. B. and C. I. Railway. One or two bridges have suffered, and thorough communication with Ahmedabad has been stopped. Communication between Bombay and Baroda is still complete. A correspondent of the Chabook, writing from Broach, describes the extent of the damage. It began to rain on the evening of the 31st ultimo, and continued up to the 4th inst. The Mahee bridge, the highest on the line, is still standing, but the trains are not allowed to run over it, as it is supposed to totter. Two other smaller bridges are washed away. On the 5th inst. it was reported that a part of the line being washed away near Etola, the mixed train which started from Surat on that day had to stop at Meeagaum. The mixed trains from Surat to Ahmedabad have been stopped until further notice. The roads are not expected to be repaired within a week. From Tuesday evening last to Friday afternoon rain fell incessantly at Ahmedabad. The total amount registered is twenty-three inches; many houses and trees suffered by strong winds. The Sabarmutee river is flooded. The Sumsher Bahadoor, a vernacular paper of Ahmedabad, begs to apologise for a delay of about eight days on account of incessant rains at Ahmedabad.

Baroda.—A very exactly informed correspondent writes to us:—"From the description of the condition of Baroda subjects and of Guikwar rule, drawn by Mr. Beyts towards the close of his letter of the 4th instant, in defence of his Soopa Settlement, one would understand that utter misrule prevails throughout the Principality, and that the Guikwar owes his position to British support alone, so deep rooted is the hatred of the population against his government. Do the abundant cultivation, everywhere apparent, and the prosperous condition of the people, indicate to the observer the existence of misery? And did the tranquillity which reigned in all parts of the Baroda territory, when in the time of the great mutiny our own districts surrounding it were in all quarters more or less disturbed, show that Baroda subjects only waited for the withdrawal of the British Powers to become rebels against their own Sovereign? Official records show what we then owed to the Guikwar's administration, and how fully we acknowledged our obligations. Let me not be understood as upholding the Baroda system of Government; that is far from my intention, for I am cognisant of the numerous evils attending it, and deplore them. What I deprecate is that Mr. Beyts should be drawing an exaggerated picture of them, simply to defend his own views of land assessment."

Gallant Conduct.—A lake, about seven miles from Kherwarrah, was nearly being the scene of a fatal accident on the afternoon of the 1st inst. Colonel Mackeson, commanding the Meywar Bheel Corps and Lieutenant Nixon, the adjutant, with some of the men, went out to Banda Talao, the lake above referred to, to drag it, being well filled with fish of sorts. The scene of operations was a creek ninety yards broad. Seven or eight sepoys proceeded to swim across, taking the net with them, the two officers remaining on the bank to superintend proceedings. When the party got about seventy yards across, the leading man, Private Pema, was evidently in difficulty, when his companions proceeded pluckily to his assistance; but unfortunately, instead of trying to take him to the nearest bank, they commenced bringing him back to the starting point. Their efforts were unsuccessful, and one after the other had to desist from exhaustion, until only two were left. The position had become extremely critical, perceiving which, Lieutenant Nixon boldly plunged in and swam to the man's rescue. I may mention that the lake is as well stocked with "muggers" as with fish, and that although they will not attack a party of men splashing and making a noise, they show no hesitation in doing so in the case of a single person. As Mr. Nixon had fully seventy yards to swim before he could reach the party, his attempt was, therefore, attended with considerable danger to his own life, more especially as several of these ugly brutes had been seen in the vicinity. Fortunately, however, he was not molested, but reached the drowning man in safety. The other two men were greatly exhausted by the time he came up, and had to leave the exhausted swimmer to his own devices. Mr. Nixon got hold of the man under the shoulders, but in spite of being a strong swimmer, he found that, not only could he not move him, but that he was hardly able to keep him above the surface. By this time the villagers had heard of the accident and came to help. Nor was their co-operation a moment too soon, as the gallant officer was in great distress, owing to the difficulty he experienced in supporting the man. Luckily, Colonel Mackeson, when the accident occurred, had availed himself of a spare rope, and had had it taken over to the other side by land; the bystanders threw this out, and succeeded in reaching Mr. Nixon with it. He passed it round under the man's arms, but was so exhausted that afterwards he could only hold on to the end and turn on his back, when both were dragged to land, the sepoy quite insensible, and his preserver nearly so. It was then discovered that Private Pema had foolishly tied round his waist the rope attached to the net, which fully explained the difficulty Mr. Nixon had experienced in supporting him, as he had had to sustain the whole weight of a heavily-loaded net, some twenty yards long, as well as that of the man. The accident was attended with no more disagreeable consequences than the subsequent vomiting occasioned by the amount of extremely unsavoury water which had been swallowed by the persons concerned, who almost completely recovered after the administration of alcoholic stimulants.—Times of India Correspondent.

FREIGHTS.

To Liverpool—Cotton and Wool, £2. 15s. Seeds, £2 to £2. 2s. 6d.
To London—Cotton, £2. 15s.; Seeds, £2. 7s. 6d. to £2. 10s.

Imports.—Bombay, Aug. 15.—The business done in the week, although larger than we have had to report since July 18, has again been very small, the only transaction of any magnitude having been sales in 7 lbs. T-Cloths, of fine make. We are gratified to be able to state that abundance of rain has at last fallen in the large districts, for which so much anxiety was felt, and that the crops of all kinds are now everywhere reported to be in a thriving condition. Prices of Piece Goods have during the week shown little or no change; but in Grey Yarns, in which no business has been done, a decline of ¼ annas per lb., in most descriptions, may be quoted. In Coloured and Turkey Red Yarns a small purchase only of the latter has been effected, and the prices of these Yarns are generally unaltered. Metals continue steady; prices are generally maintained, except those of iron, which have undergone a slight change.

Exports.—Bombay, Aug. 15.—Cotton: Following the course of Liverpool, the market here has been very dull, and prices have again declined Rs. 5 to 10 per candy. The purchases for export have been most limited, aggregating about 1,800 bales only, of which the following were the principal, viz., 550 bales of Dholleras and Bhownuggur, at Rs. 215 to 208 per candy; 750 bales of Vingorla, at Rs. 196½ to 192 per candy; and 200 bales of Oomrawuttee, at Rs. 205 per candy. The market closes dull.

Government Paper.—Aug. 15.—A moderate business has been done this week, and prices may be quoted ¼ lower all round, and close weak.

Exchange.—Bombay, Aug. 15.—A fair business has been done during the week, and rates—in sympathy with the advance in Calcutta, and in consequence of the continued stagnation of our import market, and the almost entire absence of any demand for Bank bills—have risen ¾ per cent., and close firm. On China the rate is very weak, at the reduced rate of Rs. 222 per 100 dollars.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

Garrison Instruction.

Head Quarters, Simla, July 25.—The Right Hon. the Governor general in Council having sanctioned the extension to India of the system of instruction for officers of the army recently adopted at home, H.E. the C. in C. has been pleased to approve of the following arrangements for carrying out the provisions of Horse Guards' G.O. No. 65 of 1870:—

The establishment for garrison instruction will be composed as follows:—One superintendent of garrison instruction, with a staff salary of Rs. 500, and Rs. 165 office allowance per mensem. Eleven garrison instructors, with a staff salary of Rs. 400, and Rs. 45 office allowance per mensem.

The establishment for garrison instruction will belong to the department of the adjutant general of the army; and, as it has been decided by Government that the system is to be considered experimental at present, the appointments will, in the first instance, be guaranteed for two years only, subject, however, to extension to the usual period, and to re-appointment, should the system be finally established.

The superintendent of garrison instruction will have the rank of assistant adjutant general, and will be attached to the head quarters of the army in Bengal. He will visit the stations annually, or whenever it may be judged necessary, and, while so employed, will receive the travelling allowances sanctioned for the chief inspector of musketry.

The garrison instructors will be allotted to presidencies as follows:—

To Bengal	...	...	...	5 Instructors.
„ Madras	...	...	...	4 „
„ Bombay	...	...	...	2 „

The distribution of instructors in the Bengal Presidency will be as follows:—

Rawulpindee.—Sealkote, Nowshera, Peshawur.

Umballa.—Mecan Meer, Dugshaie, Ferozepore, Subathoo, Jullundur, Mooltan.

Meerut.—Chukrata, Delhi, Raneekhet, Moradabad, Agra, Bareilly, Muttra.

Cawnpore.—Gwalior, Shahjehanpore, Jhansie, Lucknow, Fyzabad.

Allahabad.—Benares, Seetapore, Saugor, Dinapore, Dum-Dum, Hazareebaugh, Fort William.

In the Bombay and Madras Presidencies the following stations have been fixed upon as centres of instruction:—

Madras, Bangalore, Rangoon, Secunderabad, Poona, Mhow.

The garrison instructors will belong to the divisional staff, but when not stationed at the head quarters of the division they will be under the orders of the officer commanding the station to which they may be posted.

There will be two courses of instruction annually, each extending over four months, a period which is considered ample for preparation for the "special examination," as laid down in Horse Guards' G.O. No. 65 of 1870. The first course of instruction will commence in the Bengal Presidency as soon as possible after Oct. 1. In Madras and Bombay the classes will be formed at such date as may be ordered by the C. in C. of those Presidencies, with reference to the climate of each station.

The classes will, as a general rule, be formed as follows:—

1st. From corps at centre of instruction—

Each British infantry regiment will furnish			2	officers.
„ „ cavalry	„	„	1	„
„ native infantry	„	„	1	„
„ „ cavalry	„	„	1	„

2nd. From corps at out-stations of circles—

Each British infantry regiment will furnish			1	officer.
„ „ cavalry	„	„	1	„

By this arrangement each class would consist of from nine to twelve officers; but it will be discretionary with general officers commanding divisions to modify the above numbers according to the exigencies of the service, provided that the instructor be permitted to fix a limit to the number attending each class.

In detailing officers to go through the course of instruction commanding officers of British regiments should keep in view the cases of those young officers upon whom the examination is compulsory; but it is by no means intended to exclude officers of the rank of captain or lieutenant who may desire to receive instruction on the subjects of the course, or who may wish to qualify for "certificates of competency."

Officers attending classes will be under the orders of the garrison instructor, and they will be struck off all duties while so employed.

In the event of any officer being considered unlikely to qualify for the certificate of competency, either through unpunctuality in attendance or want of application, a report will be made to the adjutant general of the Presidency through the usual channel, and the officer will be remanded to his regiment. It is to be clearly understood that officers are required to attend the classes with the same regularity as their regimental parades.

Except upon very special grounds, which must be submitted for the decision of the C. in C. of the Presidency, no officer failing to pass the examination will be permitted to leave his regiment to join another class.

Officers attending classes from the out-stations of the circle will be granted the usual passage at Government expense, but in the event of their failing to pass the examination, no such passage will be granted on a subsequent occasion.

With reference to the foregoing, and subject to the conditions and alterations therein specified, Horse Guards' G.O. No. 65 of 1870, is made applicable to India:—

Garrison Instructors and Examination of Subaltern Officers.

All subaltern officers of the cavalry and infantry now serving who shall not, before July 1, 1871, have passed the existing examination for the rank of captain will, after that date, be required to pass a special examination in the subjects mentioned below, before they can attain that rank; and all officers of cavalry and infantry appointed to the army after May 1, 1870, will be required to pass this special examination within three years after joining their regiment or depot.

This special examination will be in addition to, and independent of, the existing examination for promotion, which latter will be conducted as at present, merely omitting sections (a) and (g) in para. 161 of the "Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army."

The special examination will include the three following subjects:—

A. Military Law, comprising—
1. A thorough knowledge of the provisions of the Mutiny Act and Articles of War, the framing of charges, and the forms and proceedings of Courts-martial.
2. The candidate must give evidence of having studied some standard work on military law.

B. Field Fortification, comprising—
1. The distribution of working parties when engaged in throwing up field works.
2. Tracing and constructing breast works and the simplest kind of field works, making rifle pits, putting hedges, walls, bridges, and buildings in a state of defence.
3. Making gabions and fascines, and forming revetments of various materials.
4. Making and planting palisades, abattis, obstacles, &c.
5. Knot-tying, lashing together spars, making trestle and other temporary bridges.
6. Laying out encampments, including the construction of field kitchens, &c.
7. Attack and defence of outposts; street fighting.

C. Field Sketching and Reconnaissance, comprising—
1. To read and understand a military plan.
2. To make a sketch of, and report on, a road, a river, an outpost, and a position.

To enable officers to acquire information in the above subjects, garrison instructors will be appointed to certain stations at home and abroad.

A synopsis of the course in each subject can be obtained on application to the director general of military education.

In addition to the garrison instructors, an officer with the pay and allowances of an assistant quartermaster general will be appointed at Aldershot, to superintend the local instruction, and supervise the whole system for the army, subject to the orders of the director general of military education.

The special examination will be conducted partly by sealed printed questions, sent from the director general of military education, and partly orally and practically upon the ground, by a board of examination. This board will consist of a field officer, the commanding engineer (or an officer deputed by him, and not under the rank of captain), and a garrison instructor.

The printed questions shall invariably be answered in the presence of a member of the board, and be returned with the answers, and with a written report of the oral and practical examination, to the director general of military education, with whom shall rest finally the grant of a certificate of competency.

The garrison instructors will also give instruction in military history and military administration to officers who wish to qualify for the staff.

Monthly returns of officers attending the classes will be sent to the director general of military education (through the officer commanding the garrison), according to a form to be furnished by that officer.

Officers attending a class will have to provide their own drawing materials, paper and pens, sketching case or block, small cases of instruments, and scales of shade.

The cases of officers who may not have an opportunity of attending a course of instruction in a garrison are to be referred for special consideration.

Law Suits in the Punjab.

July 20.—No. 285.—The following regulations having been submitted by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab to his Excellency the Governor-General in Council, have been by him considered and approved, and are hereby published for general information, as having the force of law under the provisions of 33 Vic., cap. 3, sec. 1:—

1. Section 1, paragraph 12, of Act XIV. of 1859, prescribing a period of limitation of twelve years from date of cause of action for suits for the recovery of immovable property, or of any interest in immovable property, shall have no effect as regards claims for land, and the rent, revenue, and produce of land, preferred in the Settlement Courts of the Peshawur district during the present revision of settlement.

In substitution thereof the following rules are prescribed :—

2. Suits regarding land, or the rent, revenue, or produce of land, and suits decided during the currency of the summary settlement in which the claim has been rejected as barred by lapse of time under the "twelve years' limitation" rule, may be entertained by the Settlement Courts, provided the cause of action arose within twelve years previous to annexation, that is to say, after the 1st of March, 1837.

3. Rule 2 shall not apply to decisions regarding village boundaries, or to any cases that have been decided on the merits by the Commissioner, or the Financial Commissioner, or the chief Court in appeal, except with the sanction of those authorities.

4. The provisions of Act XIV. of 1859 regarding execution of decree are modified to the following extent :—In suits for execution of decree in which an order has been passed that execution is to be carried into effect during the present settlement, effect shall be given to that order accordingly, irrespective of the time that has elapsed since the order was recorded.

5. In cases where no order has been recorded directing execution to be carried into effect at settlement, and where the original decree has never been carried into effect, the persons concerned may apply to the Settlement Courts for execution, irrespective of the time that has elapsed since the date of original order, and execution may be ordered accordingly, unless the case is one that should be tried de novo under Rule 2.

6. When the settlement operations now in progress in the Peshawur district shall have been declared in the Government Gazette to have ceased, these rules shall cease to have effect.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

CANTONMENT MAGISTRATES.

Bombay Castle, Aug. 2.—No. 530.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council considers it expedient to remind divisional and other officers exercising command, that cantonment magistrates and civil officers exercising the powers of a magistrate in military stations are in no manner subject to the control of the officer commanding the cantonment or station as regards the exercise of their ordinary criminal jurisdiction.

2. Divisional and other officers exercising command are not empowered, under Act XXII. of 1864, or Bombay Act III. of 1867, or the Code of Criminal Procedure, to nominate an officer within their command to officiate as cantonment magistrate on the occurrence of a casualty, or on the departure of the incumbent on leave or medical certificate. Such a nomination, if made, does not confer magisterial powers on the officer nominated; for such powers can only be conferred by Government in accordance with the provisions of the Acts above mentioned.

3. Where there is no cantonment magistrate, any breach of cantonment rules committed by any person, whether subject or not subject to the Indian Articles of War, is punishable under Article 70 or Clause (C) of Part III. of those Articles respectively, in the manner therein provided.

4. Criminal cases arising in a cantonment during the absence of the cantonment magistrate, and which cannot be disposed of by the military authorities under the provisions of the Mutiny Act or the Indian Articles of War, should be made over to any magistrate having jurisdiction in the district in which such cantonment is situated.

Consular.—H.E. the Governor in Council has been pleased to recognise Mr. B. F. Farnham as Consul for the United States of America at Bombay.

HIGH COURT DELAYS.—On Friday last the Hon. Sir Michael Westropp announced to the Bar of the High Court the enactment of certain new rules, by which a speedy execution of decrees passed by the Court may be secured. The Chief Justice said that the rules would not be obligatory on all, but might be availed of by those who apprehended any attempt on the part of their judgment debtors to avoid execution, either by removing their persons or properties beyond the reach of the executing officer. This is no doubt an improvement and will further the ends of justice by making it easier to reap the fruits of judgments recovered in the High Court. We are afraid, however, that there is still room for improvement, and very vast room too. To facilitate the recovery of judgments will be admitted on all hands to be a no less important matter than to facilitate their execution when they are recovered. While the rules in question will have gone some way towards securing the latter purpose, the former, as far as we are aware, is still unattended to. What remedy have their Lordships adopted to remove the scandal of every great cause, or, to use the technical term, every long cause coming on to be heard a full twelvemonth after the date of its institution? We made some suggestions on this head some while ago, and one of them, namely, the utilisation of the Appellate Side Judges for original business, has, we are glad to observe, been also recommended by our contemporary the Times of India. As it is, however, we can only once more draw attention to the grievance. —Hindoo Prakash.

THE COMING ECLIPSE.—M. Janssen has been commissioned by the French Government to proceed to the East to observe the total Solar Eclipse of December next. He has therefore been compelled to decline the offer made to him by the British Association to take part in the British Expedition.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £317,000, to Bombay, £28,400, and to Madras, £54,600. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10$\frac{1}{2}$d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11d. will receive about 52 per cent. The average rate on Calcutta is 1s. 11. 04d., on Bombay 1s. 11. 02d., and on Madras 1s. 11.12d.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—De Quetteville's Indian Circular gives the following resume of Bullion Exports from August 19th to September 2nd:—By the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. From Southampton, per Candia, Aug. 19:—Bombay, gold, £26,578; Ceylon, £10,000; Madras, £10,000; Singapore, £3,000; silver, Hong Kong, £40,500. Per Nyanza, Aug. 26: Bombay, gold, £68,437; silver, £5,100. Per Mirzapore, Sept. 2, gold, Bombay, £530; Ceylon, £30,000; Madras, £4,271; Calcutta, £10,000; silver, Calcutta, £10,800; Penang, £1,950; Hong Kong, £24,792; Shanghai, £9,940. The price of silver is quoted as bar, 5s. 0$\frac{3}{4}$d. per oz. standard; dollars, 4s. 11$\frac{1}{2}$d. per oz.; 5 francs, 4s. 11$\frac{1}{2}$d. per oz.

MILITARY.—The Royal Warrant providing for the retirement of certain officers in the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers has just been published. The Warrant facilitates promotion in the two Ordnance Corps, and removes existing restrictions as to the number of officers permitted to retire annually upon half-pay. It provides also for the retirement upon annuities of a limited number of officers of the rank of captain, second captain, and lieutenant in the Royal Artillery. Two lieutenant-colonels, three captains of not less than twenty-four years' service, and one lieutenant of not less than twenty years' service in the Royal Engineers may retire every ten years—a similar regulation applying to the Royal Artillery.

THE AUTUMN MANŒUVRES.—The Daily News correspondent thus describes the march of the 1st and 2nd Brigades from Frensham to Woolmer on Saturday last:—The brigade cavalry advance guards consisted each of a squadron of the Bays, one under the command of Major Sneed, the other under the command of Major Stewart; they also had their flankers out where practicable. Then came the infantry advance guards. This duty in the case of the 1st Brigade was found by the 102nd Fusiliers, and the splendid manner in which the bearskin-topped marksmen advanced across the country in skirmishing order, never omitting to avail themselves of a scrap of cover, and leaving not a ditch or hedgerow unexamined, was a sight worth the ducking to witness. Very completely ducked were the Fusiliers, in common with any one enthusiast enough in light division work to be a spectator of their advance, but one can safely answer for the former that they seemed to think no more of ditch water nor of rain water than if they had been ducks. Not less assiduously careful, painstaking, and dashing, was the advance of the 82nd, covering the front of the 2nd Brigade.

IPECACUANHA.—At a meeting of the Botanical Sub-section of the British Association, Profession Balfour submitted some observations on the cultivation of ipecacuanha plants in the Edinburgh Botanic Garden for transmission to India. As a curative for dysentery the value of this plant was very great, and, in consequence of the partial failure, from various causes—such as the rashness and carelessness of collectors—of its cultivation in its native country (South America), its cultivation here for sending out to India became a matter of much importance. A short time ago Mr. James M'Nab, of the Botanical Gardens, discovered that by making cuttings of the rhizome of the plant under the surface of the ground numerous new shoots could be got, and the plant so propagated much more easily and plentifully. They had thus been able to send out a number of healthy plants to India, which it was hoped would be there equally successfully cultivated. Mr. M'Nab was also endeavouring, with fair prospect of success, to get the perfect seed of the plant, and if that could be done the difficulties of propagation would of course disappear. They had now two varieties of the plant in the Botanical Gardens, one of which had been cultivated there for forty years, and the other had just been got from South America, through the kindness of Dr. Gunning and Dr. Christison. Dr. Cleghorn, F.L.S., late Conservator of Forests, Madras, expressed his delight at seeing the satisfactory result of the ipecacuanha propagation. Every army surgeon, he said, knew the great value of this remedy in the treatment of dysentery, and he hoped that the result of this experiment would be as successful as had been the introduction of cinchona. He though much credit due to Professors Balfour and Christison and Mr. M'Nab in this matter.

PERSIAN GULF SQUADRON.—Some doubts having existed as to the sanitary condition of her Majesty's gun-vessels Magpie and Bullfinch, now employed in the Persian Gulf, it will be satisfactory to the friends and relatives of those on board to learn that the following telegram has been received at the Admiralty from Commander Doughty, of the Magpie:—"Ferejaum, Sept. 6.—Those suffering from heat have all recovered. No casualties from heat. Crews are healthy. Climate in Gulf now healthy and refreshing."

PROMENADE CONCERTS, COVENT GARDEN.—It comes within the province of the Mail as a military journal to notice the Covent Garden Concerts, for the purpose of pointing out the speciality of the military music so liberally selected and so popular this season. The martial pieces played have been rendered by such excellent regimental bands as those of the Royal Artillery, Grenadier Guards, and the Scots Fusilier Guards, under the direction of the Messrs. Godfrey. Several fine marches have been nightly played, together with one or two new ones, the most popular having been Prince Poniatowski's triumphal march for full orchestra, military band and chorus. Fantasias, combining both naval and military national airs, have been played nightly. Volunteer and other amateur bands might learn a lesson from the complete and perfect manner in which military music is performed at the Covent Garden Concerts.

SHAVING IN THE ARMY.—It must be presumed that a good deal is taken for granted, even when orders are issued for troops which they are expected implicitly to obey; nevertheless, when we read that "the following articles only will be permitted to be carried into the field during the Autumn Manœuvres," we should hardly have expected that anything of essential importance would have been omitted. We find, however, among the articles enumerated, a razor and shaving-brush, but no soap. A dry shave will be a new experience for Private Smith, who is already sufficiently exasperated that he should have to shave at all. Our chief object, however, is to suggest in the interest of the British soldier a reconsideration of the whole question of shaving. The present campaign would surely afford a good opportunity for trying the experiment of dispensing with the razor altogether. What if the genius who omitted the soap had omitted the razor or the shaving-brush? A toothbrush might have been substituted for the latter, and so much weight as well as loss of temper have been economised.—Broad Arrow.

CHOLERA AND CHARCOAL.—Charcoal as a Disinfectant.—The great efficacy of wood and animal charcoal in absorbing effluvia, and the greater number of gases and vapours, has long been known. Charcoal powder has also, during many centuries, been advantageously employed as a filter for putrid water, the object in view being to deprive the water of numerous organic impurities diffused through it, which exert injurious effects on the animal economy. It is somewhat remarkable that the very obvious application of a perfectly similar operation to the still rarer fluid in which we live—namely, the air, which not unfrequently contains even more noxious organic impurities floating in it than those present in water—should have for so long a period been so unaccountably overlooked. Charcoal not only absorbs effluvia and gaseous bodies, but especially, when in contact with atmospheric air, oxidizes and destroys many of the easily alterable ones, by resolving them into the simplest combinations they are capable of forming, which are chiefly water and carbolic acid. It is on this oxidizing property of charcoal, as well as on its absorbent power, that its efficacy as a deodorising and disinfecting agent chiefly depends. Effluvia and miasmata are usually regarded as highly organised, nitrogenous, easily alterable bodies. When these are absorbed by charcoal they come in contact with highly condensed oxygen gas, which exists within the pores of all charcoal which has been exposed to the air, even for a few minutes; in this way they are oxidized and destroyed. (Valuable instructions are also given as to the best modes of utilising the charcoal.)—Enquire Within upon Everything. (New Edition).

Spirit of the Home Journals.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The Times observes that a curious feature of the new era is the establishment of newspapers, some in English, some in the vernacular dialects. In the North-West Provinces there are twenty-three journals written in the language of the natives, and of these sixteen are under the patronage of Government, which takes a certain number of copies for distribution. These organs of opinion are, we are told, very independently conducted. They speak of us and of our rule without the least reserve, and offer their comments on public affairs with unqualified freedom. They are not always well-informed, and they occasionally make absurd mistakes, but the Press, with all its power and influence, is beginning to be a reality in India. Perhaps we may notice, too, as a feature exactly in conformity with the temper of the age, a singular growth of religious dissent. It is certainly not strange that the marriage customs of the Hindoos should be defended against attack by a strong body of Conservatives, but it is very remarkable that the attack should have been made, and that the British Government should be entertaining the question at the instance of native sectarians. Of education we hear that it is spreading rapidly, though not yet penetrating deeply. The better classes receive instruction in English schools, but there is not much teaching in the vernacular languages, nor much schooling at the command of the poor. It was said some years ago that the rising generation in Bengal looked upon English scholarship as the road to wealth, and we now learn that every scholar considers himself exempted by a kind of benefit of clergy from the necessity of manual labour. Natives who can read and write English think the qualification sufficient for official employment, and are indisposed to seek a living by ordinary service. Nor is this impression discouraged by Government, for it is desirable to reward proficiency, and there is room for many helpers in the work of administration; but the limits of such employment must soon be reached. At the same time it must be noticed—though, indeed, it is not remarkable—that, side by side with all these indications of progress, we still find examples of fierce and irrational fanaticism. Just at this moment an outbreak of religious bigotry has occurred in the Punjab, and a conspiracy of the most absurd, and yet mischievous, character has been finally suppressed at Patna. In the Punjab the Sikhs, who, though forming an independent communion, retain many of the prejudices of the Hindoos, have been greatly excited by the proceedings of Mahomedan butchers. The cow, in Hindoo eyes, is a sacred animal, and, although beef was certainly consumed in the Punjab, some discretion was required on the part of those who dealt in the forbidden commodity. This caution, it appears, had been recently disregarded, and cows were killed and beef exposed for sale in a manner which was interpreted as a designed offence. The consequence was a riot, in which some butchers were murdered, and all the tact of the authorities was required to prevent the quarrel from extending. At Patna the incident of the day has been the termination, after protracted arguments, of what were known as the Wahabee trials. The Wahabees are a sect of Mahomedans corresponding, perhaps, most nearly to what would be called "Revivalists" in certain European communions. They pretend to purer faith, stricter life, and regenerate sanctity. With all this, however, and above it all in India was combined a political conspiracy, directed to no less an object than the subversion of the British Government and the restoration of that Mahomedan Empire which we overthrew. It is scarcely credible that men of sound mind should have embarked in such a plot with means so absurdly disproportioned to the end, for the actual preparations of the conspirators in men and money would hardly have sufficed to create a local riot; but the agitation had been long maintained, the ramifications of the scheme were extensive, and every mosque and college was made a centre of sedition by teachers and preachers. Strange to say, the living heart of the conspiracy was in the remotest regions of the North-West—in the colony of Sitana, against which we conducted a successful, but by no means unopposed, expedition eight years ago. That little war broke up the organisation of the fanatics, and the principal conspirators were afterwards arrested, brought to trial, and ultimately convicted. Some of them were men of wealth, and it is, perhaps, a notable feature of the times that a strong agitation was brought to bear against the Government of India in bar of the prosecution. The authorities were said to be exceeding their powers, and one plea after another was advanced, until the result appeared uncertain.

The affair is now over, but it is evidence of the difficulties which, apart from any impolicy or injustice on our side, must beset our rule in India. Besides consulting the interests of an enormous population now beginning to think for itself, we have to be perpetually on our guard against some twenty millions of our subjects whose only grievance is that they are subjects, and that we, and not they, are Sovereigns. Such is our position, and it ought to be carefully appreciated by those who are moved to find fault with the administration of India whenever any popular complaint or disturbance is reported from the East.

PICKETING HORSES.

The Army and Navy Gazette hopes that we shall have no more stampedes. The new system of picketing bears all the blame, and there is no doubt that it had something to do with these misfortunes; but we must decline to call it new, as for several years it has been in force by special order of the Horse Guards, although under protest from the great proportion of cavalry officers. One cavalry colonel, Colonel Baker, who was also the great advocate of the condemned squadron system, is, we believe, its supporter, and his regiment has given full evidence of the error of their colonel's views by losing forty of their horses, even after full warning had been given them by the stampedes of two other regiments. It certainly would seem a strange and inexplicable anomaly that animals habitually accustomed to be made fast by the head, which we venture to think is the natural and best mode of securing almost every animal, should, at a period when they are more than ordinarily liable to fright, when more than ordinary precautions should be taken to prevent their escape or injury, then for the first time be tied up in a manner new and unaccustomed, calculated in itself to alarm and even terrify them. We trust that the system of head and heel ropes, tested and approved by long years of experience in India, will for the future reign supreme, and that the authorities will, both in this and in other matters, abstain from abandoning a method they know to work well in favour of one untried and opposed to the commonest principles of sense, even although it has been recommended by some officers who should know better.

COMPENSATION TO INDIAN OFFICERS.

The Homeward Mail is glad to see that the daily press is affording some space to the fresh ventilation of the old question of compensation to Indian officers. These claims must be reconsidered on the new basis established by the vote of the House of Commons for the compensation of officers affected by the abolition of purchase. The Indian officers certainly have a far stronger claim to compensation than those who have established an over-regulation value to their commissions in defiance of the law. The Indian purchase system has never been called in question. It was, in fact, formally sanctioned by the East India Company and by the British Government. The only real obstacle is the antiquity of the claim. It is barred by the statute of limitations, the authorities may say. You have pressed your claims very pertinaciously for the past nine years; it is true the present circumstances almost justify the concession you ask, but the demand is too old to be reconsidered. If such be the real, and not an imaginary answer, it will be a precedent we should be very sorry to see established. No honourable man pleads the statute as an excuse for not discharging his just debts, and in England, though, strange to say, it is not so in India, a man can establish his claim and leave his debtor to plead, if he will be so great a rogue, that the debt is barred. We hope the Indian officers will make a vigorous demand now while they are sure of a hearing, and we cannot believe that the plea of "too late" will be entered by the Government.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.
As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

VOLS. I. TO IV.,

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF

PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF

THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,

ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF

AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY

J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume.

The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

From the TIMES.

"We gather from the Preface that this work grew to its present handsome dimensions from a very modest commencement. It originated in the wish of Lord and Lady Canning to take home a private collection of photographs which might serve to recall the scenes and incidents of their Indian life, but as it advanced its importance began to be perceived, and Government, with a most judicious expenditure of public money, took it in hand. Very few of the photographs are unaccompanied by descriptions, often copious and graphic, of the subjects they illustrate, and the result is a singularly varied panorama of human life and character exhibited under almost every conceivable aspect. Although these four volumes deal with only a portion of the empire, there is scarcely a type of character, from the loftiest to the most debased, that is not to be found in them, and nowhere else, perhaps, in the world are peculiarities of character so strongly marked and sharply defined as in India. We might exhaust far more space than we can afford without giving the reader at all an adequate idea of the strange varieties of character to which these volumes introduce him."

AN ANALYTICAL HISTORY OF INDIA,

FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE ABOLITION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY IN 1858.

By ROBERT SEWELL, Madras Civil Service.

Post 8vo., pp. 28 and 334. 8s.

 The object of this work is to supply the want which has been felt by students for a condensed outline of Indian History which would serve at once to recall the memory and guide the eye, while at the same time it has been attempted to render it interesting to the general reader by preserving a medium between a bare analysis and a complete history.

(Established 1815,)

64, LUDGATE-HILL, LONDON,

Where they practice their painless system of DENTISTRY.

MESSRS. GABRIEL'S } CORALITE TOOTH PASTE, for cleansing and improving the Teeth, imparts a natural redness to the Gums, and gives brilliancy to the Enamel. Price 1s. 6d.

MESSRS. GABRIEL'S } OSTEO-ENAMEL STOPPING, warranted to remain white and firm, restores front teeth, and can be easily used. Sufficient to stop six teeth. Price 3s.

MESSRS. GABRIEL'S } ODONTALGIQUE ELIXIR, is most refreshing; it strengthens the gums, eradicates tartar, sweetens the breath, and for cleansing artificial teeth is invaluable. Price 5s.

PARTIES AT A DISTANCE requiring Artificial Teeth may have them supplied, in partial or complete Sets, by Messrs. GABRIEL'S System, on sending particulars of their cases, with a remittance of Ten Shillings (which will be deducted from the charge made for the Artificial Teeth), when the apparatus for taking a model of the mouth will be forwarded with all necessary instructions. Teeth supplied by other Dentists, not having proved satisfactory, can be remodelled on Messrs. GABRIEL'S system, at a moderate cost.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH REPAIRED and returned by following post.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

Bad legs, bad breasts, ulcers, abscesses, wounds, and sores of all kinds may be thoroughly healed by the application of this Ointment to the parts affected after they have been duly fomented with warm water. The discharge should not be checked at once, but rather encouraged, for any sudden check must, of course, be always dangerous. Nature is the noblest of physicians, and must not be opposed, but seconded. All sores are for a time the safety valves of the constitution, and should not be closed or healed until they assume a healthier character. Under the action of this powerful Ointment, aided by the Pills, the depraved humours of the body will be quickly removed.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Aug. 22; Agra and Madras, Aug. 20; Calcutta, Aug. 20.

THE Bombay papers still complain of deficient rainfall in their part of India. Guzerat however seems to have been favoured with more than its share. The same thing may be said of Upper India, where the unusual floods have seriously hindered traffic on several lines of road and railway. Of one disaster which befel the Punjab Railway we have already spoken. Another is recorded in this week's papers. All around Saharanpore the rains had flooded the country so as to make travelling impossible even by the railway, sixty miles of which had either been washed away or lay entirely under water. In the military lines of Umballa many of the houses are said to have come down through the Tangree River bursting its "bund." In some of the bungalows the water was a foot high. At Mussoorie more than six inches of rain fell in one night, and the sickness consequent on a downpour, whose like the natives had never seen, was very great. At Delhi the rising Jumna threatened to carry away the bridge. At Simla the roads seem to have been blocked by masses of stone loosened by the rain, and even telegraphic communication with the plains was interrupted. The bridge at Hurripore, on the road from Simlah to Sabathoo, has been carried away. Kashmere and Murree however seem to have escaped even their usual floods. In Oudh the rains had set in again harder than ever after a short break, and fever was reported as being rife in Lucknow. Except in the Sultanpoor district however, where the Goomtee had flooded the country, there was a good report of the crops in Oudh. As for Bengal, the rains seem to have favoured some districts far more than others—the crops in Rajshahye, Nowgong, Goalparah, and Julpigoree having suffered from want of wet.

ENGLISHMEN in India should be careful what they commit to writing in letters likely to fall into the hands of native princes in whose dominions they may chance to dwell. It appears that some time ago a Mr. Davis entered the service of the Jheend Rajah as a kind of bandmaster in chief. After he had trained three or four native bands with success out of the rawest materials, his master began, it seems, to look out for a cheaper servant. About that time a British soldier wrote to ask Mr. Davis's counsel as to the expediency of entering the Rajah's service. In reply Mr. Davis seems to have warned him against placing too ready trust in the promises of "deceitful natives." This letter somehow fell into the Rajah's hands. He instantly ordered the unlucky writer with his wife and family into close arrest under four sentries, had all their letters detained, and withheld from them all means of writing to their friends. After three or four months of this treatment, Mr. Davis at length got a letter conveyed to the Editor of the Lahore Public Opinion, by whom the strange story has been made public in time, we hope, to rescue the sufferers from aught worse than the natural effects of their long imprisonment. The Rajah of Jheend was our loyal servant during the Mutiny; but he must really be taught to remember that Englishmen who enter his service are not to be safely treated in that unceremonious style, even if they do make unkind remarks on natives in letters never meant for publication.

THE first sounds of an angry outcry against the new Income-tax Act reach us from several quarters. Under the new Act it appears that any collector may double the assessment of any person who delays to pay up the sum originally demanded, and may also fine or imprison at his own pleasure without fear of appeal to any court, whosoever appears reluctant to obey his arbitrary will. He is clothed in fact with unlimited power to harry and fleece the wretches who dare to differ from him touching the justice of his claim. His mere fiat is enough for his purpose. The police must carry out his orders and the jail governors receive his prisoners without a question. After all, the Rajah of Jheend has only taken a leaf out of his master's book. This is a curious way of soothing down the ill-feeling which the double income-tax of last year aroused all over India.

FROM Muscat we have official news down to the 6th August. Sayad Turki had carried his successful troops up to the walls of Sohar, which he at once besieged. His batteries had already made a breach, and the assault was imminent, when Sayad Ibrahim came to terms. It was arranged that the latter should retain Sohar and the coast line from Sullan to El-Khaborels; the remaining ports and districts being given up to Sayad Turki.

IT appears from a recent Calcutta telegram that the Indian Government have determined to organise a statistical department "for the purpose of ascertaining and conserving the internal resources of India." We have heard a good deal about developing the resources of a country, but the task of conserving them is one whose character we have no means of estimating offhand. What are the resources that need conserving, and how comes it that a new department is required for that purpose so soon after the creation of a Department of Trade and Agriculture? The telegram in short rouses a curiosity which time only may succeed in allaying. The appointment of Dr. Hunter to the head of the new department fails to furnish us with a clue to the right way of answering the riddle.

ACCORDING to a Bombay telegram the rumour of a year's extension of office being granted to Sir S. Fitzgerald, Governor of Bombay, obtains general credence. That there is no likelihood of such an arrangement is more than we are prepared to say; but we have no reason to believe that the question has hitherto been discussed in the Indian Council.

In the Friend of India appears an interesting and temperate statement of the reasons which have led the older section of the Brahmo Samaj to oppose the Marriage Bill bearing that name. The members of the Adhi Samaj, the old original sect of reformed Hindus, as founded by Rammohun Roy, and now represented by Baboo Debendranath Tagore, claim, like the Old Catholics of Germany, to retain their connection with the main body of worshippers owning a common origin. Their ritual is "based on Hindu rites and ceremonies." They have always "respected and observed Hindu social customs and institutions, except where these militate against their religious belief." In celebrating marriage they adhere to all such rites and ceremonies as savour neither of idolatry nor superstition. In spite of their peculiar opinions and practices, they have "always been recognised and treated even by the most orthodox Hindus as undoubted members of the Hindu community." Their own forms of marriage they consider quite as valid as those observed by the Sikhs and Jains. The new Bill, however, whose preamble throws a doubt on the validity of marriages already celebrated by them, will compel them in future to choose between a Hindu ritual of which they partly disapprove, and a new form of marriage which would tend to place them outside the pale of Hindu society. It makes no distinction between them and the Progressive Brahmos who, under Keshab Chandar Sen, have seceded from the old Samaj and cast off all connection with the existing Hinduism. They deny therefore that the petition presented by these latter for a law to legalise Brahmo marriages represents the feelings of the whole Brahmo community. The Bill drawn up in accordance with that petition "imposes a civil form of marriage quite inconsistent with the religious spirit" of the Adhi Samaj, and a system of registration "quite inconsonant with Hindu usages and customs." The very title of the Bill is dangerously misleading. It assumes that all Brahmos form one body distinct from the general body of Hindus, so that, if the Bill as it stands became law, the original Brahmos would find themselves sharply divided from that Hindu community to which they still belong, and from which, in behalf of a "healthy and spontaneous reformation" from within, they have no wish whatever to cut themselves adrift.

These objections are so reasonable that we can now understand why the further consideration of the Brahmo Marriage Bill was put off till after the return of the Government to Calcutta. It does not therefore follow that the Bill, in the words of a contemporary, "will be shelved as unnecessary." If one section of Brahmos is content to do without it, there is no doubt of the anxiety shown by the Progressive Brahmos for some law which will clearly recognise the validity of their own forms of marriage. But it is evident that the provisions of the Bill must be modified so as to ensure the older Brahmos perfect freedom to marry in their own way; and the title and preamble of the Bill must be so altered as to leave them no fair ground for complaint.

In our last issue a valued correspondent drew attention to what certainly seems a great evil consequent on the high price of salt in India. There may be some good reasons for retaining a tax which yields the Government a revenue by no means easy to replace in other ways. But the most reasonable taxes may become the most oppressive if they are levied at too high a rate. To most Englishmen it may seem a trifling question whether the Indian salt-taxes should be raised or lowered to one uniform level; but to millions of natives in India a difference of one or two rupees a maund on so prime a necessary of life in a hot climate means all the difference between comfort and discomfort, health and disease. Our correspondent tries to bring that difference home to us by asking what the English poor would say, "if each family were to be taxed £3. 6s. for the privilege of eating salt." That sum may be taken as a fair equivalent for the three rupees which a maund of taxed salt costs an Indian peasant in some parts of the country, in addition to as many rupees of prime cost. Six rupees a year being too much for his scanty means, his cattle have to go without their proper share of salt, and the result is that some of them die for want of the precious antidote to disease. The soil of India in many places abounds with salt, but any attempt to use the untaxed mineral would bring the peasant into a sad scrape. He himself indeed and his family have sometimes to content themselves with a cheap and nasty salt, in which Glauber's salts or sulphate of soda may frequently be found. To the want of salt has been traced the recent heavy mortality among Indian cattle; and from what we have heard in other quarters we shrewdly suspect that this same want of salt has had much to do with the loss of human lives from cholera. It has at any rate been more than once found that prisoners properly supplied with salt escape the disease which is raging outside the jail. Another hardship arising from the salt-tax is the difficulty of utilising mineral manures, such as soda, the sulphate and nitrate of soda, and potash, which might easily be extracted from the salt-bearing earths but for the penalties enforced against the illicit manufacture of salt even for private use. This old complaint re-appears in a letter to the Indian Economist, the writer of which further declares that any amount of phosphate of lime could be obtained from the Sewálik Hills, if the Government did not bar the way. That less salt is consumed in India than what ought to be consumed, is evident from its increased consumption wherever the duties have been lowered, and from its comparatively large consumption where the duties have not been raised. The natural inference is that instead of raising the salt-tax anywhere, the higher duties should be reduced to the lower level. In fact, if the salt-tax must be maintained at all, a duty of one rupee a maund, if not less, would very soon make up for the first loss consequent on any lowering of the present rates.

We think we may safely venture to assure the military readers of the Homeward Mail that they need have no fear lest the claims of Indian officers to bonus compensation should be put out of court by the Statute of Limitations. Our contemporary has raised a difficulty which a moment's reflection would have melted into thin air. If the India Office were bent on withholding justice in this matter, it would have to look out for some better excuse than this of a lapsed claim, seeing that the claim itself was formally acknowledged by Lord Cranborne in 1866. The principle of compensating Indian officers for losses arising from no act of their own was the avowed motive of his Lordship's despatch to India, in which compensation was offered up to a certain point on terms ingeniously framed to neutralise the seeming concession. From the principle thus admitted the Government cannot withdraw, nor would it even if it could. It stands committed by its own act to the granting of due compensation for actual loss, and the only question it has still to consider concerns the amount of compensation actually due. No Statute of Limitations can therefore bar the settlement of a claim acknowledged five years ago, and repeatedly urged again since then. What the Indian officers now ask for is simply a revision of the terms conceded in 1866. They would have bread and not stones. They would have fair compensation for prospects marred by the change of masters and circumstances, instead of a sham compensation for what they had actually spent in buying out their seniors. They ask, in short, for nothing more than the terms already granted to officers in the Royal Army, whose claims on the whole were legally very much weaker than theirs. That the India Office will turn a deaf ear to their just demands, in spite of the rules laid down for the benefit of their comrades in the Line, and of the obligations incurred by the Parliamentary Guarantees of 1858 and 1860, is more than we can believe. Such a proceeding would involve too great a shock to the old English love of fair play, and would give the aggrieved officers too powerful a lever for renewed agitation, to be regarded as any longer feasible. A commission, we believe, is already sitting to adjust the claims of her Majesty's officers in accordance with the terms of the new Army Act. Would it not be as well to bring the Indian claims before the same or a similar body, empowered to ascertain the "customary" sums once paid in each Indian regiment, and to award compensation accordingly? If the principle of reimbursement for the loss of a retiring bonus were once frankly yielded, we are sure that the claimants would be content with a moderate valuation of their respective claims. In point of strict justice it may be a question whether England should not pay a share of the consequent expense; but no such question should be allowed to delay the settlement of a grievance which has so long cried in vain for redress.

The Mont Cenis Tunnel was practically opened on the 13th of this month. On that day at any rate the first train, accompanied by the Chief Engineer, the Director-general of the Upper Italian Railway, and a number of other officials passed through the eight miles of tunnel in forty minutes, and two hours later performed the return journey in fifty-five minutes. The greatest temperature inside the carriages was 25 degrees centigrade. During the return journey the Tunnel was found to be quite clear from the steam discharged on the former passage. At the formal opening on Sunday, the 17th, the official train performed the whole distance from Bardonecchia to the French side in thirty minutes, the passage of the tunnel itself being completed in twenty. Among those present at the opening were several eminent Frenchmen; a good omen, we hope, for the early completion of the Mont Cenis Line.

The next Overland Mail from Bombay will be due in London on Saturday next.

THE WEATHER IN BENGAL.—Whilst in many districts in Bengal the bhadai crop has been almost destroyed by heavy rain and floods, we read that in other districts more rain is wanted. In Rajshahye the district reports tell us that the crops are suffering from want of rain; in Borgrah more rain is wanted; in Nowgong the aous crop is suffering from want of rain; and the same account is given of Jalpigori and Gowalparah.

A CIVIL SERVICE QUALIFICATION EXTRAORDINARY.—The following somewhat startling note by his Honour the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, under date July 21, is published in the Calcutta Gazette:—"I would have it made a qualification for the subordinate executive service that candidates should be able to ride. It is of immense importance that a sub-divisional officer should, for example, be able to go out ten or fifteen miles before breakfast, and make a judicial precognition into the circumstances of a murder—the body, the blood, the scene of the struggle, and so on—without interfering with his regular work for the day; and in very many of the duties of an executive officer such activity is required. Riding should therefore be added to the obligatory subjects of examination, and I will thank the committee now sitting to arrange this."

PASSAGE ALLOWANCE.—In continuation of G.O. by the Governor-General of India in Council, No. 471 of 1865, regarding the passages and passage allowances of officers of her Majesty's British forces proceeding to or returning from India, the Governor-General in Council has been pleased to notify that a married officer above the rank of subaltern proceeding to England on duty otherwise than by her Majesty's troop ships, is entitled to a free passage, or the cost of a passage, for a female servant; and that messing allowance at two shillings a day is to be deducted from officers who proceed otherwise than by troop ship for each servant for whom passage money is drawn, which is, in the case of general officers, married or unmarried, two; and of others, married, and above the rank of subaltern, one female servant.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned candidates, who appeared for examination in the native languages before the last half-yearly committee on July 10, are declared by the Board of Examiners, Fort William, to have passed the Higher Standard in Hindoostanee, agreeably to G.G.O. No. 734 of 1864:—Lieut. J. W. Ottley, R.E.; Asst. surg. F. Howard, M.D., R.A.; Lieut. J. S. Biscoe, R.A.; Assist. apoth. H. Clayton, R.A.; Sergt. J. Stokes, 2-25th R.A.; Cornet R. F. Trotter, 4th hussars; Lieut. B. A. Combe, 21st hussars; Ensign H. E. Penton, 1st battalion 11th foot; Ensign R. E. A. Jenkins, 1st battalion 11th foot; Ensign T. W. Conran, 26th foot; Ensign A. P. ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, September 19, 1871.

INDIA IN 1869-70.—III.

THE province of Oudh, with an area about equal to that of the whole Netherlands, and a population denser than that of Belgium itself, contains altogether 23,730 square miles, nearly half of which is shared among 51,625 landholders great and small, while more than a fourth is held by 371 talookdars, who pay each £500 a-year and upwards towards a land-revenue of more than a million and a quarter. Out of 162 paid and unpaid judges, 52 only are Europeans. To the short harvests of 1869 elsewhere, and the consequent export of grain from Oudh, is attributed the main part of the increase in riots and petty thefts during the year. The steady increase in civil suits on the other hand is ascribed to the growing wealth and confidence of the people in their civil courts. The thirteen jails in Oudh are held to furnish insufficient room for the 18,750 prisoners confined in 1869, although that number represents a proportion of only one prisoner to every 940 of the people. The average cost for each prisoner however was only £3. 6s. in the year. A regular police force of 8,289 officers and men, since greatly reduced in number, was maintained for £112,586; while the 32,916 village chaukidars cost the landowners no more than £76,430. The percentage of convictions to trials—80.46 per cent.—does credit to the efficiency of the police in Oudh.

In the year under review Oudh had no canals, but the first steps were taken to carry out a scheme which will irrigate more than half the province with 1,148 miles of main canal and 4,230 miles of minor channels. As many as 858 miles of new road were constructed at a total cost of £5,825; rather a contrast to the present cost of road-making in England! Of the £43,765 spent on schooling one in thirty-six boys of a school-going age, about £35,000 comes out of imperial or local revenues, a large proportion compared with other provinces. It is something however to know that the schools were four times and the pupils thrice as numerous as in 1865, while the village-scholars had increased tenfold in the same time. Literature also seems to thrive in Lucknow, which can boast of twenty presses; seventeen devoted to printing in the vernacular. Twelve towns in Oudh are municipally governed, and native reform-clubs have been already started in three. The export trade of the province, consisting chiefly of grain and oil-seeds, amounted to £2,826,621, and the import trade to £2,545,202.

In the Central Provinces, nearly as large as the British Islands, but less populous by two-thirds, the distress of 1868 left sharp traces in the first half of the following year. It is pleasant to find how much of that suffering was allayed by the charitable efforts of the natives themselves. The famine works undertaken by Government during the year will all redound to the lasting benefit of the country. With the gathering of the autumn harvest the suffering seemed to disappear by magic; and the able-bodied forthwith left the relief camps to labour in the fields. The sickness however which usually follows famine lingered for some time longer; whole districts being wasted with endemic fever which especially attacked the wild tribes and the spirit-drinking, flesh-eating people of the lower castes.

The completion of the railway from Nagpore to Jubbulpore in the beginning of 1870 at once gave the Central Provinces a new importance in the commercial world of India, and raised Jubbulpore into the place once held by Nagpore. From March 1870 "a continuous stream of traffic began to flow towards Western India," in striking contrast with the old inertness consequent on the absence of good roads and proper means of carriage over a wide space of country. To complete the change thus effected little more is now wanting than a light railway from Nagpore to Raipore in the south-east; and this want also will soon be remedied under a scheme already laid before the Government. Another aid to the development of these provinces turned up in the newly discovered coal-fields of Chanda, with the mines of workable iron lying near them.

If the increase of civil suits be any test of a people's well-doing, these provinces must be doing very well indeed, for in seven years the number of such suits rose from 24,666 to 63,137. Crime of course increased considerably during a year of partial suffering. Of the prisoners tried not more than one in five was acquitted, a result which speaks well for the sharpness of the police. It is also to the credit of the people that the increase of offences against property was unaccompanied by any proneness to agrarian outrages. High praise is given to the 112 native landowners, merchants and bankers, who served as honorary magistrates. The 17,747 prisoners cost on an average £5. 10s. 7d. a man.

The land revenue of the province amounted to nearly £600,000, or six-tenths of the whole local revenue, which included £41,602 from forests, £115,163 from salt, and £92,940 from spirits and drugs. Of several schemes projected for improving the supply of water the chief was the Kanhan project for damming the river of that name near Nagpore, so as to render its waters serviceable by means of canals for a large tract of country during the greater part of the year. The number of schools and scholars fell considerably during 1869, owing to sickness and agricultural distress. Out of 72,835 scholars enrolled there was an average daily attendance of only 44,480; so many children being called away to help their parents in earning a livelihood. The 134 girls' schools were attended by little more than half the 4,579 girls entered on the books. Rice, wheat, and other food grains took up between them an area of nearly 11 million acres, while more than 1,400,000 acres were planted with oil-seeds and cotton in nearly equal parts. It was not a good year for cotton, which suffered from the heavy rainfall of October. It was a better year for trade however; the imports, of which grain and sugar were important items, being valued at over four millions and the exports at more than three millions sterling. The export trade in country cloth rose from £347,562 to £904,470, and a net increase on the whole of £349,202 was reported for the year under review.

The Punjab has an area as large as France, and the purely British part of it is about as large as Italy. Of this latter less than a third is cultivated, and about one-fourth more is cultivable. It had in 1869 nearly 3,000 miles of waterway, about 20,000 miles of road, and only 412 miles of railway. Its five chief cities have a population ranging from 56,826 in Multan to 154,417 in Delhi. Its gross revenue in 1869-70 was over 3¾ millions, of which the land-tax furnished close upon two millions. Owing to unfavourable seasons the drought of 1868 spread far into the following year. Thousands of cattle had perished, and great suffering threatened the people, in spite of all efforts to avert or lessen it, when the heavy rains of September quenched all further anxiety on that score. Sickness however played sad havoc during the year, more than a quarter of a million lives having been lost by malignant fever before the year's end. All this notwithstanding, the year's revenue showed an increase of a third of a million, the foreign trade of the province rose to £5,487,583, and the yield of manufactures to £3,842,500. The 34 Native States cover an area as large as the British moiety of the Punjab, containing about five million people, and yielding a revenue of a million and a-half. Bhawalpore under British management has prospered exceedingly since 1866, when it fell into our hands during the minority of the late Chief's heir. By the end of 1869 its revenue had doubled, the State debts been paid off, and the promise of a large yearly surplus, to be devoted to canals and other public works, had already shown itself. A like good fortune has favoured the small State of Chamba. It was in 1869 that the Maharajah of Kashmere engaged to abolish all transit duties on goods passing between India and Eastern Turkistan. In return for this and other concessions the Indian Government agreed to abolish the export duty on Kashmere shawls, and to let Indian goods pass into Kashmere duty free.

The relations of the Punjab Government with the frontier tribes were steadily improving in 1869. By means of mingled firmness and kindness the old state of chronic warfare has been replaced by one of general peacefulness. The tribes in the Black Mountain and some of the Waziri clans excepted, the British Government is "on the best of terms with its frontier neighbours." Peshawar is no longer troubled by Swati raids, each of the tribes around Kohat has sought our friendship, and the "faithless" Afridis have remained true to their engagements. Some of the tribes are already cultivating British soil, and others are aiding the Indian Government in the prevention of frontier crime. The wildest tribes now lay their disputes at the feet of British officers, and some of them have even asked to be treated as British subjects. Raids of course there were, but hardly one of them was aimed at the Indian Government. The Chief of the Bhugtis actually refused to shelter one of his own clansmen, who had fled beyond the British border to escape punishment for taking part in a raid.

The increase of crime in the Punjab was confined to offences against property, breaches of the peace being actually fewer than in the previous year. Out of 49,572 people tried 36,580 were convicted, or nearly three in every four. The number of civil suits rose, in spite of famine and depressed trade, to 164,595, or more than the whole number of such suits in Bengal, Oudh, and the Central Provinces put together. There were 40,880 prisoners confined in thirty jails, at an average cost of £6. 14s. a-head.

Out of 18¼ million acres under tillage 811,794 were sown with cotton, and the outturn was reckoned at 618,900 maunds of cleaned cotton, or an average of only 61 lbs. an acre—a very poor yield compared with the 500 lbs. averaged in Egypt. Most of the cotton is made up in the country for home use. Skilled labour in the Punjab averages 11¾d. and unskilled labour 4¾d. a day. Besides iron, antimony, copper, lead, and gold, salt of all kinds is found in such abundance that the total outturn of 1869-70 was 1,307,378 maunds [of 80 lbs. each], worth £376,558. Many kinds of stone for building, as well as marble, limestone, gypsum, slate, and petroleum abound in the Province. The imports rose from £2,600,000 to £3,140,000, but the exports fell from £2,700,000 to £2,350,000. The trade passing through Ladakh was worth about £65,000.

Owing partly to the prevalent scarcity and sickness, partly to want of funds and a reduction in the number of schools, there was a great decrease both in schools and scholars; the average daily attendance of the latter having fallen from 141,665 to 73,768. With regard to the prevalence of cholera during the year, a committee found that it was generally traceable to the impure drinking-water. There was a large increase in the number of persons relieved in the public dispensaries. At the end of the year 118 towns in the Punjab were furnished with municipal committees. Owing to certain restrictions on the levy of octroi duties, the municipal income had to be made up by fresh taxation; which "caused some distress among the poorer classes."

INDIAN CONSERVATIVES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In these degenerate days, when the good old Tory principles of our forefathers have become a thing of the past, it is refreshing to come upon a pure stream of unadulterated Toryism, even though it flows from the East. India has always been the hot-bed of Conservatism, but I was hardly prepared to see sentiments like those expressed by a speaker at a public meeting at Lucknow the other day. The meeting, I may add, was convened for the purpose of supporting a "Reform" Association got up among the natives at Calcutta. I enclose the extract, which I have cut out of the Lucknow Times, as it may amuse some of your readers. I think Baboo Sanwal Singh deserves to be made a C.S.I., a distinction which would come with peculiar grace from a Liberal government. Fas est et ab hoste doceri.—Yours faithfully, P.

Baboo Sanwal Sing then rose up and addressed the meeting at some length. He commenced by remarking that he had conversed with several learned pundits on the subject of female education, and found that the opinion of the orthodox Hindus was against it. He himself endorsed their views, and questioned the wisdom of the Indian Reform Association in endeavouring to establish schools for the education of women. He entirely deprecated the idea of enlightening the mind of the female sex, and maintained that to educate them would be to inflict a positive mischief on society. Women should, under no circumstances, be allowed to enjoy a higher sphere of life than that afforded by the present Purdanashin-zenana system as prevalent in this country. Some of the monstrous evils resulting from the education of females were, said he, first, their breaking through all manner of moral restraints; secondly, their claiming equal privileges with men; thirdly, the creation in them of a desire to become independent; fourthly, the utter impossibility to keep them confined within the zenana; fifthly, increase of expense; and sixthly, the diminution of the matrimonial prospects of men—for no enlightened female, he held, would prefer to accept for her husband an uneducated man. (Laughter.) He referred to the condition of Europe, and said what results the progress of female enlightenment and female liberty had produced in that country! (Hiss.) The idea to give an enlightened education to women was, in fact, highly objectionable, and the steps taken by the Reform Association were essentially calculated to sap the foundations of social morality. What good, he argued, would result by teaching the lower classes to read and write? It would be far better to train them up as agriculturists, mechanics, &c. He, in short, was opposed to the further spread of education even among the nobles, excepting, of course, those who belonged to the "upper ten thousand." He still more deprecated the idea of educating their females, nay, of the female sex in general. It was not the intention of nature, he said, to place women on an equal level with men, both physically and intellectually. The legitimate functions of the former were to look after our lower domestic concerns, and to subordinate their desires to those of men. He denied that they possessed any other capacity save that of concocting mischief, of planning intrigues, &c. Education, therefore, at their hands, would prove a dangerous weapon. It was, therefore, extremely undesirable to adopt a course which would be ultimately subversive of social harmony, and serve as a powerful stimulus to the increase of vice and immorality. In illustration of his remarks he referred to the pages of the "Mysteries of London." He therefore expressed a hope that every right-minded man would withhold his support from the Association. He added that he himself had been to Calcutta and had seen the working of the female schools with his own eyes. He assured the meeting that those schools were not availed of by respectable classes; that only daughters of the lowest castes, such as chamars, &c., attended them. They were also the nurseries of women of questionable character. As regards the cheap Literature section, he remarked that men are generally apt to be misled by false reports of things, which they have never seen, for in truth Bengal was not yet so far advanced that its masses should appreciate a newspaper. He wound up by saying that the efforts of the Association to suppress intemperance were to some extent good, but he condemned its cry for Government aid to carry out its object. He traced the cause of drunkenness in the spread of English education, and maintained that the evil, however deplorable, was inevitable under the existing circumstances of the country.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

HOW TO GOVERN INDIA.

The Friend of India holds that we are strong in India. What then?—should we disregard the wishes of the people? Because we are strong in India we ought to regard the wishes of the people still more, and in order that we may do so some means certainly are necessary that we may ascertain what those wishes are. We are glad to see that this view is spreading. It had not one opponent at the meeting to which we are referring. It is beginning to find an expression in the English press; our readers will find very marked expressions of it in extracts now and then in our columns. The great merit of the proposals, too, is their practical character. They are not a claim for representative institutions, in the sense in which those institutions are understood in England, or France or Germany, or America. Anything at all approaching such an idea would be both impracticable and uncertain as applied to India. When the mania for English institutions first prevailed in Europe every nation that adopted them made of them a muddle and an absolute failure. Nations have to be governed on the basis of their own instincts and traditions. It seems easy to some people to change a man's views from an old creed, the creed of his forefathers, to a new one the creed of another nation. But how difficult the thing is in reality let our missionary records tell. We fancy that we have changed people—changed their views, their habits, and those inwoven principles which are at the basis of individual character; and we are astonished sometimes to find that while we have been thinking that we have changed everything we have scarcely touched the real chord of the individuality of the man or woman concerned. We reason as if we were dealing with only one man or womau. In point of fact in dealing with that one we are dealing with a hundred generations, and with a force—a momentum—which every nation has increased. The individual Hindoo of today is a product of unnumbered generations. His very being has been moulded by those generations which we affect to count as nothing. We may, it is true, alter an individual and many individuals; but what we are referring to is the representative individual, the type of the great conservative mass. Our attempt at action upon the mass is in one respect one of the great blunders of our rule of India, but it is a blunder that we have always perceived in time to prevent it being carried too far. We have, for instance, always recognised in time the great truth that we have no right to teach religion with State money. The old Company seized upon that truth, before the Queen's Government did so, and held to it with a pertinacity that nothing could shake. We have perceived also that we have no right to interfere with native customs, provided those customs do not interfere with public morals—morals that are alike in all nations, or lead to the destruction of human life. But strangely enough after seeing so much there is a world of fact that we never see at all. There cannot be a doubt that individual life is more secure under British rule than it ever was before in India; at least we think there cannot be a reasonable doubt of it. But who would imagine that in the ordinary procedure of Law Courts we administer justice more effectively than it would be by a native machinery organised on the basis of native habits and traditions? We differ very much from Mr. Syed Mahmood's opinion that natives cannot sit in the same council with Europeans without losing dignity or independence. But if this were the fact, and however strongly its were so, there would only be the greater necessity for the councils being mixed, because there would be all the greater necessity for natives endeavouring to overcome the difficulty; and that they could do so there cannot be a doubt. The decentralisation scheme of the Government of India will, we believe, develop into some such councils and will enable the Government of India to have at its disposal the best information possible from all parts of the empire; information not based upon individual interest but representing the men and interests most prevalent in the districts. In ordinary times, possibly enough private interests might prevail, but in cases of famine of widespread disturbance, the popular feeling would make itself represented wherever there were fair means provided for its expression.

THE "ENFANT TERRIBLE" OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The Friend of India observes that the Indian Committee has been going on so promisingly in the glorious grooves of jog-trot that it is positively astounding to come upon an out-and-out social, political, and religious infidel like Mr. James Geddes—a man who believes neither in Governor-Generals nor English enterprise, nor missionary zeal, nor any other mortal thing in this benighted land. We have not since the beginning of the Indian Committee read anything with half so much pleasure as the evidence of Mr. Geddes. We daresay it is all wrong. Of course, infidels—political or otherwise—always are wrong till heterodoxy grows into orthodoxy in the march of events, and then, of course, they are right; but that takes ages; and if Mr. James Geddes lives ages (he seems out of the run of ordinary mortals), we, at all events, will not be there to see. Still, there is something so healthy in his gruff answers, in his evident determination to be as obnoxious as possible to all the powers, whom most other witnessses seem bent on trying to please, that we should be sorry indeed if Mr. Geddes does not live to at least be Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to which he seems on a fair way, for after all his gruff answers he said that in a few months he would be serving Mr. Campbell. The Indian Mirror, when driven into a corner some weeks ago as to its assertion that the Bengalees are the Scotchmen of India, replied with an extraordinary list of parallel cases, and among others stated that Scotchmen (notice the St. Andrew's dinner) and Bengalees were both excessively fond of praising themselves. Now, we all have a little tendency that way, and we have been praising ourselves and our Government of India to such an extent that it is a positive relief to come upon this Diogenes of the Bengal Service—this competition-wallah who has been seeking for fully ten years, with a lantern evidently of the best, for one honest act in the Government of India. We hope our readers will not take us as joking or at all inclined to joking. We say—and mean it every word—that after cart-loads of prose we have at last arrived at poetry, after Blue-books we have come to a real epic; a picture, a warning, and a prophecy. We sincerely hope that Mr. Geddes will soon be restored to his post. We give Mr. Campbell credit for qualities of a very high order, but poet he is none, and humour he cannot have much, coming from the North side of the Tweed; so that Mr. Geddes, come when he may, will have a healthy and genial influence in Bengal. His evidence was full of grand poetry, but what we are most struck with is its glorious departure from jog-trot. That is its marked merit, and if it is not too soon to take a step in the matter we beg to propose Mr. James Geddes as the next Lieutenant-Governor of this Presidency.

SHOOTING VERSUS DRILL.

The Madras Times admits that even ordinary rifle practice is, of course, in its way a good thing, and perhaps, there are difficulties in the way of reproducing in peace the dampering conditions of war; but, allow it what credit we may, it would seem to be little short of madness to concentrate all the energies of the military mind on that one branch of the soldier's profession. Yet that this is practically the case can scarcely be doubted. Infantry soldiers get prizes for shooting, but for nothing else. Marching well, the knack of turning out quickly when the alarm sounds, powers of endurance generally, and a dozen other qualifications each and all of which have ere now turned the scale of victory or altered the whole aspect of a campaign are totally disregarded. Sometimes in regimental sports a small money reward is offered to the man who will fastest walk a mile or two in heavy marching order, and that is the beginning and end of all efforts to encourage the most valuable of all qualities in a foot soldier. Drill on a parade ground like a billiard table is no use whatever in determining the powers of a regiment in this respect. Any adult in ordinary health can march, wheel, and counter-march, for an hour or two, without suffering ill effects; but that is no training for the field. Long and arduous manœuvring over moderately difficult ground is required for the rank and file, just as much as are camps of exercise for the officers. The one must be educated physically, the other mentally, in those matters which will occupy his energies on service; and in the case of the soldier substantial encouragement should be offered to those who excel. There is but little use in a man being able to make five centres out of six at a thousand yards, if the ten mile march to the scene of action knock him out of time. Better a moderately good shot and a frame inured to fatigue, than a crack marksman whose legs are unable to carry his arms to the front. It is the same with the cavalry. Prizes are given for proficiency in sword exercise, but for infinitely more important points in connection with the management and equipment of his horse the bold dragoon goes unrewarded. This might be excusable if we preserved the customs of chivalry in modern warfare. Doubtless were one champion for each army to do battle for his country, it would be absolutely necessary that the arm on which so great a stake depended should be thoroughly trained, no matter at what cost. But now-a-days hand to hand fighting, in other words the only scope for displaying individual excellence with the weapon, is almost unknown. There is a trot, a gallop, a stampede, a retirement, and the cavalry have done their share of the day's work till the time of pursuit arrives. Once again, proficiency with the weapon is good for the individual, but it should not, any more than in the case of the foot soldier, be permitted to monopolise his attention.

ANGLO-INDIAN MORALS.

The Madras Times thinks that it is not difficult to understand why Anglo-Indians have acquired so sad a character. "Is it true that people in India are as naughty as they are said to be?" inquired a lady of a civilian home on furlough. "My dear Madam," replied he, "we in India are precisely the same as you in England, only our windows have no shutters, and we have always a dozen servants watching us." The peccadilloes of Anglo-Indians are therefore proclaimed by a thousand tongues. Does Mrs. Jones permit a little flirtatious nonsense on the part of Captain Smith when he calls after Mr. Jones has gone to office of a morning, ayah, butler, bearer, and a dozen more know all about it, and entertain the bazaar with it the same evening; whereas had Mrs. Jones lived in England the drawing-room door would have excluded prying servants from any knowledge of the comedy. If a woman really goes wrong in this country she must do so in the open face of day. She can make no assignation without half-a-dozen servants being taken into the secret; she can receive no visitor without the whole household knowing of it—and witnessing the entire interview, for that part of it, if they care to peep. Our friends at home are therefore quite wrong in applying the same gauge to Anglo-Indian morality that they apply to English morality. In England a convicted sinner may represent a hundred who have not been found out; but in India, so complete is the publicity of life among Anglo-Indians, it is scarcely possible for a woman to stray from virtue's paths and yet keep her reputation. It is true that sometimes men in high places do their best to taint the reputation of the society they live in. A Governor sometimes shows an unedifying penchant for "fast women," and behaves as if he thought a fly-blown reputation the best title to social distinction; but his conduct no more represents our morality than the conduct of the "first gentleman in Europe" represented the morality of our grandmothers.

ANGLO-INDIANS PAST AND PRESENT.

The Englishman, notwithstanding all that has been said, and, for that matter, all that has been done too, cannot help thinking that, so far as India is concerned, "the former days were better than these." Steamers and the Suez Canal, railways and telegraphs, have well-nigh demolished both time and space, and the only idea of the modern exile is to get back again as soon as possible; his sympathies have no time to get Indianised; he looks upon the country as a place where he is condemned to pass a certain number of years of penal servitude, and directly he has made a competence, either in the shape of pension or accumulations, he is off to Europe to spend it. This, of course, is very pleasant for the adventurer, but it needs no prophet to foretell that India must sooner or later feel very grievously the change that has come over the Anglo-Indian manners and customs. The majority of people who live either on salaries or on the income derived from professions spend less and less in India every year. Even our charitable institutions suffer, and of course our amusements get small by degrees and beautifully less. Every rupee spent in this country is begrudged, because it could be so much better spent at home; the screw is put on in every direction, if haply the sojourn in the East may be shortened even by a month or two. The ancient Indian hospitality is no more; it costs too much money, and is out of place with the thrifty feeling of present days. But the matter is not only one of money. There is a wide-spread and general dislike of India on other grounds beside. Whether it is that we cannot forget the Mutiny, or whether we are irritated by the weekly epitome of home pleasures and jollities which we are kept from sharing in, we do not know; but the fact remains, that we are getting more and more impatient of our prison-house, and are fast getting to hate the country we used to like so well. In times of old, a young man coming to India, whether civilian, soldier, or merchant, knew that he had many years of Oriental residence before him, with but small chance of getting a run back again before the end of his career; and so he took an interest in the country and in the people; he tried, moreover, to make himself comfortable, and to that end spent a goodly portion of his earnings. India to him was more than a caravanserai, to leave which as soon as possible was the great aim of life, it was a home for years—in many cases a home for ever—and he made himself at home. How different is everything now! Diogenes would hunt in vain for the man who thought or cared for his adopted country otherwise than as a place in which to haste to be rich, and then to run away from as fast as possible. Every year the mischief increases; we take more out of the country—we leave less in it. We are fast getting to think that our only duty in India is duty to ourselves. The old East India Company was wise in its generation; it saw perfectly well that to take anything like an absorbing interest in the country people must stay there, and not have their minds agitated by a too frequent prospect of Europe, and so furlough was made unattractive, and officials tempted by large allowances to take their quantum of leave within Indian limits. Defence they provided for by a local army, and it is fully well conceded now-a-days that in this respect, at all events, the grave and reverend seignors of Leadenhall-street were right. It is too late, of course, to go back to the old ways; we must march with the times, but unless some remedy is found for the present distress, we augur but badly for the future of the British in India.

ACCIDENT WHILE TIGER-HUNTING.—An accident lately occurred to a gentleman of this city while tiger-hunting in the jungles of Gungashagur, near Saugor. Mr. Kennedy, of Middleton-row, with a large party of beaters, shikars, &c., numbering about forty, went to hunt, and raised a tiger. Smaller game was expected, but the brute was fired at, and wounded by one of the party, and disappeared in the jungle. Mr. Kennedy entered the jungle after the animal, when he was suddenly charged upon by the infuriated beast, and brought to the ground. His followers manfully ran away, and the gentleman was very severely wounded all over his body by the tiger in the contest for life and death which followed Mr. Kennedy's upset. Fortunately for him, the panic of the beaters was speedily allayed, and taking heart of grace, they returned to see how their master fared, and the tiger, alarmed at the noise of their approach, bolted further into the jungle. Mr. Kennedy was found to be much injured, was put into a boat, and brought to Calcutta, where under Dr. Fayrer's treatment he is making some progress towards recovery, but he has been frightfully mauled.—Englishman.

LEAVE IN ENGLAND.—The period of leave in England, which may be taken without forfeiture of claim to a free return passage by an officer ordered home on duty, has been extended to six months.

JUDICIAL.—Sir Richard Crouch, Chief Justice, is expected to return to Calcutta in October next, but it is said that it is not likely that he will continue in his office beyond a very few months. Mr. Justice Norman is spoken of as his successor.

MILITARY.—The Government of India have intimated that the rank of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel does not reckon towards the twelve years' service for Colonel's allowances in the case of officers of the local service, but applies only to officers of the Staff Corps.

COLONEL M. THOMPSON.—The Englishman learns that Colonel Mowbray Thompson's case has been reconsidered, and that, if he retires at all from the army, his retirement will be purely optional. Also, that Colonel Thompson, will, at least for the present, remain in the service.

ILLEGAL TRADING.—Major Walter, late of H.M.'s 97th Regiment, and commandant of Sarawak, has been dismissed the Rajah's service for illegally engaging in trade. A court of inquiry into the Major's conduct was held, the Rajah presiding; but the Major refused to plead, and was so disrespectful to the Court that the president then and there dismissed him from the Sarawak service.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT.—It is said that the Lock Hospital at Lall Bazaar, Calcutta, under the Contagious Diseases Act will be done away with from next month, and the patients will be removed to the Sealdah Hospital; and when this shall be done, one of the two Lock Hospital Sub-Assistant Surgeons will also be done away with.—Englishman.

FEUDATORY.—The death of Rajendar Partap Lahi, Bahadoor, of Hathua, is reported to have taken place in the Sarum district on the 23rd of July. The Raj is said to be a very ancient one, the line of succession having been uninterrupted through a hundred and two generations. The late Rajah was granted a perpetual jageer of the estates, yielding 20,000 rupees annually out of the confiscated lands of Koour Singh.

CHOLERA AT LUCKNOW.—The Oudh Excelsior lately stated that three men of H.M.'s 1-17th Regiment, stationed at Lucknow, belonging to one company, died of cholera on the 11th instant. Having made inquiries we find that this is hardly correct, as only one case of cholera has as yet occurred in the cantonment. The victim (for the attack was fatal) belonged to the 1-17th Regiment it is true, but no other cases have since appeared.—Pioneer.

CURE FOR SNAKE-BITE.—We (Pioneer) hear that a native in Cawnpore has offered for scientific examination a cure for snake-bite, which he maintains to be a specific, and with which he has already cured several cases. If we remember rightly a reward was not long ago offered by Government for an antidote to snake-poison —is it not worth while to have the present remedy tested? Although impostors have from time to time been exposed, it is not hard to believe that a cure, better at any rate than a penknife and a live coal, is in the possession of natives—somewhere.

THE WAHABEE CASE.—We understand that measures are being taken to bring the case of Ameer Ali and his fellow prisoners who have been convicted and sentenced by the Patna Court before the High Court of Calcutta on its appellate side. Mr. Evans, of the Calcutta Bar, will, we believe, take the lead this time. Hashmadad Khan, who was acquitted, intends to press his action for damages against Lord Mayo and Sir William Gray. In connection with this it has been mentioned to us that the very next morning after the conclusion of the Wahabee trial in Patna both the judge and prosecuting officer proceeded post haste to Simla.—Mofussilite.

THE RIGHT OF APPEAL.—We (Englishman) hear that the military officer in the Assam Commission, whom the Lieutenant-Governor removed from his office for the miscarriage of justice, to say the least, in the alleged case of coolie-flogging, has been memorialising the Supreme Government for a reversal of the sentence. Without entering into the details, we cannot help thinking that the right of appeal from the local Government has of late been too freely used by military officers in civil employ. A too facile interference by the Supreme Government would be subversive of discipline in Bengal.

NAGPORE SCHOOL OF MEDICINE.—We find from the report on the Nagpore School of Medicine, Central Provinces, for 1870, that at the beginning of the session there were forty-eight students. Of these, three absconded, and eight were dismissed, during the year. Twenty-one were made passed medical pupils and reported fit for admission into the service as 3rd class hospital assistants. A cash account is annexed to the report showing the receipts and disbursements of the official year just ended. The income of the year has not been much exceeded, although the expenditure has been exceptionally heavy. A number of books have been added to the library, and several additions have been made to the Materia-Medica Museum.

REWARD OF MERIT.—The Viceroy has conferred the title of Maharance upon Rance Shurnomoyee, of Cossimbazaar, as a personal distinction and as a mark of appreciation of her munificent charity and liberality.

FINANCIAL.—The committee sitting upon the future Controller General of Military Finance Office is composed of Mr. R. Chapman, Colonel Burne, and Colonel Innes. "Rumour whispers (says the Indian Daily News) that Colonel Innes would not fall into a fit of ungovernable rage if appointed to succeed General Broom. With all respect for Colonel Innes and the better man, we are clearly of opinion that—right set aside, for right would undoubtedly promote Colonel Atkinson to the vacancy—the place belongs to Mr. George Kellner. Pecuniarily, there would be no gain to Mr. Kellner, one of the first accountants in India, but to Government, to the public interests, the gain would be very great. We trust that Lord Mayo will not permit any petty service and gingerbread considerations, hereto the ruin of India, to stand in his way."

A FINE ART SHOW.—The Fine Arts Exhibition to be held at the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta, will be opened on the 18th December, and is to remain open for a fortnight. Only Original Pictures in Oil and Water Colours, Architectural Drawings, and original Sculpture (including subjects in marble, plaster, and clay and metal castings or wood carving) will be entitled to prizes. Four gold medals are to be awarded for the best figure and landscape paintings in oils and water-colours, and silver medals for the second best of each kind. In addition to these, the following prizes will be awarded:—Silver Medal for excellence in Architectural Drawing. Silver Medal for the best sculptured or modelled group of either Human Figures or Animals. Silver Medal for the best Basso-relievo. Silver Medal for the best set of Etchings suitable for book illustration. The Council will nominate Judges and provide for the cost of return carriage from Calcutta, but they will not be responsible for any damage in transit "unconnected with the packing and making over to the Railway or other carrying companies." Space will be allotted in the Exhibition for other Artistic subjects not within the classification given above, and honourable mention will be made of such subjects, though prizes will not be awarded.

OUTRAGE UPON A BRITISH SUBJECT.—The Lahore papers brought by the Indian mail give prominent notice to the fact of an Englishman, Mr. Charles Davis, and his wife being illegally kept prisoners by the Rajah of Jheend, a small native State in the Punjab. Mr. Davis joined the service of the Rajah about five years ago as bandmaster, and has been very successful in raising bands among the natives, who, under his instruction, became sufficiently skilful as to be competent to play before Lord Mayo and the Ameer of Affghanistan at the Umballa Durbar, and before the Duke of Edinburgh at Lahore. The bandmaster had, however, incensed the Rajah, who possesses power of life and death over his own subjects, by giving frank advice to a British soldier not to enter the service of Jheend without certain guarantees. The letter fell into the hands of the potentate, who, annoyed at the expression that the "natives were deceitful," ordered Mr. Davis, with his wife and family, into close confinement, placed four sentries over them, took possession of all his property, deprived him of writing materials, detained all his letters, and stopped his correspondence. Mr. Davis has had no trial; and he and his family have been kept close prisoners for the last four months. It is believed that the remonstrance of the Indian Government will not be lost upon the ruler of Jheend.

LORD MAYO AND THE P.W.D.—In continuation of our remarks on the Nusseerabad barracks we do not much wonder now at the disgraceful failures of the P.W.D. all over the country. Not long ago we repeated the story of the Saugor barracks, and stated that they, like the ones at Nusseerabad, were now the subject of a Court of Enquiry. Will it be believed that the president of that Court was the officer who inspected them a few months ago and found little the matter with them!! Since they were inspected by that official a civil engineer of experience has been put in charge of them, and soon after inspection of them reported them as unsafe, and on his own responsibility moved the troops out of some of them. This aroused the military authorities, and a committee, composed of officers of experience assembled on the 4th of July and sent in their report to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. The military authorities of course acted promptly, but not so the P.W.D. We hear that the Chief Engineer has not up to date visited Saugor, that the Superintending Engineer came with a committee of two other C.P. Engineers (so that the whole committee is to judge of work in charge of their own Chief Engineer), and remained in Saugor a few days and inspected the barracks, and then returned to Jubbulpore, his head quarters, to (it is presumed) prepare his report on these barracks. Is it too much to ask that the report on the Saugor barracks by the military committee be placed at the disposal of the press at once, as also a copy of the engineer's report? And will Lord Mayo send at once to Saugor a committee of his own to enquire fully into the whole affair. The ex-engineer at Saugor, who first reported these buildings as dangerous, is now we hear being sat upon and told to hold his tongue. Let him speak by all means, and we think Lord Mayo could not do better than ask that gentleman for a direct report on the strange proceedings that we hear have taken place at Saugor.—Delhi Gazette.

Two European Lads Drowned.—We are sorry to learn of the accidental death by drowning, on the 9th, of two of the orphan lads of the Sanawur Lawrence Asylum, named Farquhar and Gibson, aged respectively twelve and fourteen. They, accompanied by a companion, had left the school without leave, and in attempting to cross a mountain torrent in the neighbourhood in search of mangoes, lost their footing and were swept away by the fierce current which, on account of the continuous heavy rain of the past two months, is much deeper and stronger than usual. The third boy, who escaped, immediately returned and reported the circumstance to the school authorities, and they lost no time in sending off two of the officers and some of the elder lads to the scene of the accident. No traces of the missing ones could be found, though the search continued throughout the night. Early on the following morning, however, their lifeless bodies were recovered and brought in. No blame can, we feel sure, be attributed to the Asylum authorities; as all the boys were out for the ordinary holiday ramble, from whom these three stole away on a predatory excursion. An inquest must of course, have been held; and no doubt the result of the enquiry will be shortly made known.—Delhi Gazette.

How to Manage Fever.—The acting Inspector General Indian Medical Department has drawn up the following excellent code of rules for the treatment of fever. When a person is attacked with fever he should not expose himself to the sun, the night air, or rain, but stay in doors, and take a dose of any simple purgative medicine, such as castor-oil. When this has cleared out the bowels, he should take the vegetable medicine (quinine), which has been proved the best of all remedies for fever. The mode of taking it is as follows:—For a grown-up person, put into a cup as much quinine as will lie on half a rupee, and having added some water, stir it well and drink the mixture. A similar quantity should be taken three times every day till the fever ceases. Afterwards one dose daily for a week or so will be sufficient to give strength to the body and prevent the return of the fever. Children suffering from fever should also have a purgative and quinine. A child under five years of age may take twice a day as much quinine as will lie on a two-anna piece. A child of from six to twelve years of age may take twice daily as much as will lie on a four-anna piece. Many persons stop taking food when attacked with fever, but to do so the Inspector General says is a bad custom, as it makes the fever stronger and may produce dangerous consequences. Persons ill with fever will find it beneficial to drink milk, congee, good pepper-water or soup, and as soon as possible should begin to take their ordinary food. Persons recovering from fever should keep the body warm and never sleep outside the house at night. During the feverish seasons of the year people should wear warmer clothing than usual, and refrain from sleeping in the open air or in damp clothes.

The Private Soldier.—Colonel S. Henning, 26th Cameronians, at Fyzabad, has recently exchanged into another regiment shortly leaving India, for England, whither private circumstances render it imperative on him to return. Colonel Henning's final order to the Cameronians took the form of a kindly farewell address, in which occur the following remarkable passages:—"I cannot let the occasion of my departure from you pass without a few lines from me. It is with great regret I have been led to take this step. I cannot let it pass without testifying to all generally, in your respective ranks, my appreciation of the support you have rendered to make the maintenance of order and discipline which has made my command one of pride and happiness. I include in this with pleasure the good private soldier—for I would bid him remember that no rank has more moral power in the matter of 'Order' than his own by example displayed in the barrack room, and other associations with his comrades. I often read in the papers letters from the people who evidently know nothing about the army, inferring that, except when actually on parade, we are all that is idle, dissolute, and vicious; I tell such from my experience, it is my first conviction that, taking us at all points, and having regard for numbers, there is no other class of her Majesty's subjects with which we cannot claim a most favourable comparison." Few will be inclined to regard the above as other than deserved praise, but every thoughtful officer of experience might truthfully testify to precisely the same effect. It must be recollected that a soldier's whole conduct is under a close surveillance, to which if an equal number of civilians of any class could be subjected for a year, or half a year, the recorded results would be very unfavourable to their repute.—Calcutta Daily Examiner.

The New Central Provinces Sanitarium.—Great things were expected of the new military sanitarium of Puchmurree, when it was first determined to station troops there, away from the hot blasts of Nagpore and Jubbulpore. And now that the picturesque plateau has had a tolerably fair trial, the expectations formed regarding it have undergone no modification, but have on the contrary been considerably raised. This says a great deal for the future of the hill, seeing that the formation of a new sanitarium must necessarily be beset with difficulties, which every month of its occupation reduces. We heard something of heavy rain and fever a few weeks ago, but we think there can have been no good ground for the fears to which that sinister rumour gave rise. At any rate, there is neither heavy rain nor prevailing sickness now, for latest intelligence reports only six men in hospital, of whom only one had a touch of fever, the others being afflicted with ailments which, unfortunately, are not uncommon in most corps. The rainfall up to the latter part of July had been 35 in., a quantity made up in great part by occasional showers. True, they had a big burst in June, but since then the climate has been everything that could be desired—a third of the day a little cloudy, the rest bright and cheerful, with a fine life-giving breeze and a lovely landscape. Officers who are well acquainted with not a few of the sanitaria of India say that if Puchmurree retains through September and October the reputation it has acquired since Col. Baigre set to work at it after last monsoon, there will hardly be any hill station that can beat it. Few fears are entertained on this score. But even should a few cases of fever occur it must be remembered that the men of the 79th, who are quartered there, are men many of whom have had the terrible Peshawur, the Rawul Pindee or some other malignant fever, and who are consequently susceptible to a recurrence of it at almost any time. Our own impression is that the season most likely to test this sanitarium will be that of the north-east monsoon, when malarious breezes from the jungle country round the upper waters of the Nerbudda and Mahanuddy may reach the hill top; but we are sure all proper precautions will be taken to shield the residents from any periodic perils that may declare themselves when a couple of years' statistics are available.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Aug. 19.—There is still no improvement to report in the state of our piece goods market; indeed, business during the past week has been in a state of complete stagnation, and prices in most cases are nominal. Advices from the interior still continue dull and uninteresting, and there seems at present to be but little prospect of any early improvement.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Aug. 19.—Jute: The large arrivals of new Jute have caused a general fall in prices, though not to so large an extent in the best as in the inferior descriptions. We now quote Seraigunge, good to fine, Rs. 4-8 to 5-8; Narainguge, Rs. 4 to 4-7; and old Jute, Rs. 3-12 to 4. Saltpetre: There has been a good steady business transacted during the week, and prices have remained firm at last week's quotations. Rice: There is no change to record in prices, though shipments to Europe have fallen off. Linseed: For the best sorts prices remain as last quoted, but small and Liverpool sorts average nearly an anna lower. Rapeseed: There has been an increased activity in the market, but prices have not risen. Raw Silk: But little business has been done, the March bund being nearly exhausted, and the Rainy bund not being sent forward rapidly, owing to wet weather and the small crop; prices remain unaltered. Corahs: There has been an improving demand for the best descriptions. Inferior qualities are still dull, but considerable shipments have been made on owners' account.

MONEY MARKET.—Government Securities are decidedly weaker; two annas per cent. decline may be quoted on all denominations, and more on Fives. The realising about £300,000 of Secretary of State's drawings during the week has made a cheaper tendency of the money market more apparent. The demand for Bank of Bengal Shares is still quiet, but holders ask and get Rs. 1,380.

Madras.

THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL, MADRAS.—The Hon. J. B. Norton, who arrived here on Monday last from England via Bombay, assumed charge of his appointment of Advocate-General, Madras, yesterday, from Mr. J. D. Mayne.—Madras Athenæum, Aug. 16.

DEATHS FROM WILD BEASTS.—In a return showing the number of deaths by wild beasts in the Madras Presidency during the past year it is stated that 183 persons were killed by tigers, twenty-one by cheetahs and panthers, seven by bears, ten by bisons, five by wild hogs, four by elephants, and three by alligators. One man (in Trichinopoly) was killed by a deer, and two persons died from the bites of mad jackals. Tigers are most destructive in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Jeypore, Kurnool, and Coimbatore. It is satisfactory to find that there have been no deaths by tigers in Canara during the year under review. Seven persons were killed by tigers in that district in 1869, and sixteen in 1868. Eleven persons have, however, been killed by cheetahs in Canara during 1870.

MADRASSEE ENGLISH.—We remember to have read some time ago, in one of the Madras] papers, the following specimens of English composition:—An ex-school master, petitioning for a clerkship, promises that "I and my family will ever cease to pray to the humble Almighty to shower his blessings on you and yours for ever." Another, begging for an increase of salary on account of the rise in prices, says:—My pain and sufferings are impeachable and lie only in the comprehension of gentlemen of your honourable disposition ready to open your bowels of compassion to sympathize with the afflicted, and by extending your gracious hand to shoulder them from the civil darts of this dear city." A third makes the following excuse for absence:—"Please excuse attending office to-day, as my grandmother despatched her life and want to go to firing place to see body fired and ashes put in hole." A clerk, complaining of "fever and grapes" request, most very humbly a day's leave, as he is "unfortunately ill by the blessing of God." Certainly the imposing style and fluent composition of the above articles plainly show the immense advancement made by the natives of that place in the difficulties of the English language, and certainly ought to encourage those who labour to work and faint not, for, consider the utility of men like these in a public office—as corresponding clerks they would be invaluable.

THE KING OF BURMAH.—The following is characteristic of his mercantile Majesty of Mandalay:—"Two Mogul merchants have received the Order of the Tsalway, and have been asked to supply Rs. 50,000 worth of piece-goods per mensem to his Majesty." The official diary from which this is taken then goes on to give an instance of the King's sense of justice in releasing a Mogul who was in false imprisonment, and of his good feeling with regard to trade, and the Bhamo and Shan trade routes in particular, by quoting one of his Majesty's remarks, to the effect that "he hoped to see a great change in three months' time." Matters, so says the Political Agent, are going on very smoothly at Mandalay now. "Trade has recovered, and his Majesty seems to be very particular as regards the same. The other day he had the result of inquiries made from 700 Burmese traders read out in my presence; not a single complaint of any sort. A number of Oo-Boot-Soung-Shamasmen, who have devoted their lives to religion, and of whom there are about 1,000 altogether in Mandalay, were then called up and asked questions concerning the peace of the country and the welfare of the people; the replies to which were also satisfactory. His Majesty told the head men to report any deserving cases of misfortune and insolvency that might come under their notice among traders, and that he would assist them with a loan of money for one or two years without interest. After a very pleasant and satisfactory interview," concludes the Political Agent, "I left the palace." How different a picture is this, the official picture, to that drawn by the local press!—Athenæum.

TOBACCO.—Mr. Broughton, Government Quinologist, has sent a report to the Board of Revenue on the different specimens, and cul-smokers. He has analysed fifty-three different kinds, and given in a table the percentage of ash, carbonate of potash, and nicotine contained in each specimen. Although Mr. Broughton has taken so much trouble, he confesses that the quality of tobacco cannot be inferred from any analysis that may be made. After the analysis we are still ignorant of the proper proportions that are required in order to get the best flavour. The more nicotine there is in tobacco the stronger it is, and the absence of this accounts for the well-known mildness of Manila and Havanna cigars. It is the amount of potash contained in tobacco that determines the ease or difficulty of keeping it lighted. As is well known, the tobacco of Vizagapatam and Trichinopoly, but especially the latter, is the best in the whole Presidency. Mr. Broughton thinks good tobacco might be grown on the Neilgherries, if proper care were taken. He also says truly enough that a slight apprenticeship is required before Europeans fresh to this country take kindly to the indigenous weed, and he recommends that sorts grown from foreign seeds only should be exported to Europe. We are not told how tobacco is cured; but only that the process is nearly the same in all parts of the Presidency. He strongly condemns the use of jaggery water. It is interesting to know that it is on account of the better system of manuring land in the Trichinopoly district that they obtain better tobacco. From the report there appears to be nothing peculiar in the climate or soil to account for the superiority. Other districts would do well to take the hint.—Madras Times.

MAHARAJAH SINDHIA.

His Highness Sindhia, Maharajah of Gwalior, G.C.S.I., at present a visitor to Bombay, is in every way one of the most notable among the present generation of Indian princes. He is not one who affects much of our Western manners and civilisation. Though thoroughly well informed about all that concerns not only his own State, but the affairs of India generally, he is not a zealot in college building, and, for his own part, is content to leave scholarship to pundits. A Mahratta of the Deccan, he is not ashamed, by his visit to Panderpoor, to acknowledge the "superstitions" of his own caste people, though he rules over proud Rajpoot thakoors, Jats, and a very miscellaneous agricultural population. Though not free from that too anxious desire to increase his revenue, which is the besetting weakness of his neighbour, the other Mahratta prince at Indore, Sindhia better understands what his people can bear. During the famine two years since, though slow to proclaim unreserved remissions of revenue, no one can doubt the sincerity of the exclamation in his tivation of tobacco in South India, which must be interesting to all famous proclamation of February 1869—"If by any possibility I could have averted the calamity which has fallen, no sacrifice would have been wanting on my part—but the hand of God has caused it." Colonel Daly, in speaking of the proclamation, says every word is his own,' and he describes how the calamity appalled Sindhia, and caused him often to ejaculate, 'How can I feed a people?' Roads and bridging are being carried out gradually in the Gwalior territory, but one could wish to hear of some more comprehensive efforts by that Durbar towards applying the lessons of the famine by the construction of reservoirs and bunds on every considerable stream. And as this journey to the coast must make his Highness give a thought to the advantages of foreign commerce, we hope he may consider to return by the B. B. and Central India Railway, instead of by the G.I.P., over which he has already travelled. Should he return by way of Guzerat and the Mhye valley, he may see that it would be a good thing for all his territories if he were to unite with Kerowlee in making a branch line from Gwalior through that State to join the Agra, Ajmere, and Neemuch line, instead of joining himself to the zigzag route, via Indore, which he may be pressed to support.

If H.H. Sindhia has a weakness, it is fondness for military display; but the pursuit is far more than mere parade with him. It has been said that he can handle a brigade as well as most of our generals; but without pursuing that comparison, it is quite certain he is by far the best native commander in India. Should we require allies in the field, or in support of movements on the border, the Maharajah, judging from the past, would be one of the first to support the Imperial cause. Fourteen years have passed since the fiery trial of the Mutiny, and his Highness has learned much since that period. He was then supported by the sage counsel of Sir Dinkur Rao, and the vigilant advice of the enthusiatic though prudent Macpherson, then Political Agent at Gwalior; but Sindhia has always had full credit awarded to him personally for the fidelity and tact displayed by him during that crisis, and for which he received the fitting reward of being invested with the Star of India of the first rank. Both the Maharajah and the Dewan warned the Agent of the mutinous spirit of our own troops, the Contingent, and after its revolt in the middle of June, Sindhia not only resisted the threats and offers of the mutineers to take him in triumph to Agra, but detained the whole body of them at Indore until the middle of October.

Since that period H.H. Sindhia has been tested in his allegiance by the more wearisome trials of ordinary administration and political negotiation. During the difficulties of the last three years the Maharajah has "got on with" three such different officers (all able men) as Colonel Showers, Generals Chamberlain and Daly; and, notwithstanding his strong will, and the prominent likings and aversions of his Highness, he has never in these years, so far as we have heard, diverged from his settled principles of self-dependence on one hand, and political fealty on the other. The tract of country covered by the Gwalior districts and feudatories amounts to nearly 20 000 square miles, is estimated to contain 1,180,000 inhabitants, and yields a revenue—nett payment to Sindhia, we presume—of 68 lakhs. It is in regarding a widespread State and energetic native ruler like this of Gwalior that we recognise the political significance of the term British Empire in India. We have within our own red line as much or more than we can directly administer with satisfaction and success. But through our political agents, and by the silent influence of example, the British Viceroy exercises a beneficent and effective sway through the length and breadth of this continental peninsula. With self-reliant and intelligent native rulers like Sindhia we shall find it to our account to let them have their own way with their people, though that may be very different from ours. But as we know they have much to learn we rejoice to see them come out from their remote provinces to take note of this busy world which is the Englishman's element.—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

News from Persia.—By the steamer which arrived here from Persia on Aug. 15 we have news from Yeza and Kerman up to the beginning of July. The large sum which was forwarded from Bombay by the committee of the "Fund for Ameliorating the Condition of the Poor Zoroastrians in Persia" had been distributed among the suffering Parsees, and had afforded a great relief. The suffering among the Zoroastrians was abating day by day, while among the Mahomedans it was intense, many of them were dying from starvation and cholera. The news from Ispahan and other surrounding places was still appalling.

Cholera in Poona.—We regret to hear that two deaths from undoubted cholera have taken place in the 9th Regiment Native Infantry, a woman and a child; there can therefore be no further doubt that this fell disease is lurking about the cantonment, and it behoves the higher authorities to see that all recommendations of medical officers are carried out implicitly and without parsimony. The first decided case of cholera this season was that of the late lamented Mrs. Le Mottee, of the 56th Regiment; other cases were reported in the native village of Wanowrie, but these were not authenticated. We sincerely trust that these cases in the 9th Regiment are not the precursors of others, as is usually the case; at all events, we are quite sure that if there is a medical officer in the presidency able to stamp out the disease effectually at its outset, that medical officer is Dr. Boustead. We would suggest to the cantonment authorities a rigid scrutiny and proper examination of every batch of pilgrims that arrives in Poona, for we believe that these persons very frequently disseminate the disease.—Poona Observer.

Cotton Prospects.—The following telegram, dated Khaugaum, August 21st, from Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac, Cotton Commissioner, to the Secretary to the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, was received at Bombay:—"Cotton reports from all quarters favourable, except portion of South-Western Berar noticed last week. Since then no rain has fallen. Plants in some places are beginning to suffer. Damage is yet not very considerable."—We are indebted to Mr. Melville, of the Mofussil Company, for the following copies of telegrams received last week from the districts regarding the condition of the cotton crops:—"Wurdah. The rainfall has been very slight, but the crops are in excellent condition. Oomrawuttee. Hardly any rain during the week, but the crops are still flourishing. Sheagaum. Crops look very fair. No rain yet. Khamgaum. The crops in this district are much in want of rain. Weather here still bright and dry. Rain has fallen on the neighbouring hills. Excellent accounts from Akote. Broach. Crops in good condition, but rather backward."

The Jacobabad Frauds.—The parties implicated in the alleged frauds at Jacobabad, regarding which particulars have been furnished to our readers, have moved the Sudur Court through their pleaders, Messrs. Dyaram and Oodhayram, to have the preliminary investigation into their case held either in Kurrachee or at Hydrabad, assigning as a reason that justice will not be done to them at Jacobabad, where the authorities are strongly biassed against them. The accused Vussunmull, the Mooktyarkar, adduces, in support of his request for a transfer of the trial, the fact of an animus being evinced towards him ever since he gave evidence on the trial of a man charged with murder, who was convicted and sentenced to death, but who, on appeal to the Sudur Court, was acquitted and discharged;" the acquittal of the man, Vussunmull alleges, was brought about through the testimony given by him. The pleaders for the accused have, moreover, impressed on the attention of the Court that there is a particular method adopted by Sindhis of keeping accounts, and that the deficiency said to exist will be found to be no deficiency at all when the accounts are closely overhauled and carefully inquired into. That the accused have requested Col. Phayre to submit the accounts to any Dufturdar, but that Col. Phayre has refused to accede to the request. The Sudur Court will give its decision to-day on the motion made for the transfer of the case.—Sindian.

Cholera in Turkish Arabia.—The following letter from Surgeon W. H. Colvill, Civil Surgeon, Bagdad, to the Inspector-General Indian Medical Department, dated Bagdad, 22nd June, has been placed at the disposal of the press:—"In my last report, dated Bagdad, 11th May, 1871, on the progress of cholera, I had the honour to inform you that the disease still lingered in Busreh, and had attacked severely the village of Maghil contiguous to it. Since then it has gradually and steadily crept up the banks of the Euphrates and Tigris,—on the Euphrates attacking in order the villages of Sheik-il-Sork, Samawah, Diwaniych, Hillah, Meshed Ali, and Keebella; and on the Tigris, Kurna, Amara, and Kut il Amara, with the intervening Arab tribes. Merchant steamers, English and Turkish, arrive here by the river Tigris from Busreh at the rate of two a week, touching at the intermediate villages. There is now no quarantine, for the Turkish authorities have had no official information of cholera, and almost appear to believe that it was not cholera which attacked Maghil and their troops en route to Central Arabia. On the 10th of this month an English steamer arrived from Busreh, and on the way up two passengers were attacked with cholera, and one died. The chief engineer, a young Englishman, who was very attentive to the dying passenger, was seized in this place on the 13th, and this, so far as I can find out, is the first clear case of cholera at Bagdad. He has recovered. Since then I have seen two other cases of well-to-do people. One has died, but I have failed to trace any distinct connection they may have had with people or places infected by the disease.—I have, &c., Wm. H. Colvill."

Floods in Guzerat.—A correspondent of the Times of India writes from Mehemoodabad, Aug. 11:—Very heavy rains have fallen in this part of the Kairazilla. The first showers commenced on the 1st instant. On the 2nd the river Watruck overflowed its banks, and the water spread in all directions with such tremendous force as to carry everything before it—houses, shops, huts, cattle, carts, &c., in the neighbouring villages. Not even the oldest inhabitant in these parts can recal within his memory a scene of this description. The town of Mehemoodabad appeared to be sunk in a sea of water, all the surrounding parts presenting a sheet of water. In the neighbouring village of Ghodasur, belonging to a Thakore, as many as 500 houses are reported to have fallen down. The village of Makura—where cotton is grown—has only twenty-five houses standing within its boundary to mark its existence. In Khatray, another village situated at the distance of a mile and a half from this, and containing about 300 houses, only fifty houses are found standing, the rest being one mass of ruins. Sunsolee, another neighbouring village, presents the same miserable and awful aspect. The entire bridge on the river Watruck has been washed away, the brick and chunam construction on the two sides of the river only remains to indicate its former existence. Within the town walls of Mehemoodabad the water of the river forced its way, and the ground in front of the new dispensary, built at the expense of the Bombay shet, Mungaldas Nathoobhoy, has a very large hole made in it. The land revenue of Government has fallen much in arrears during this year. For the next year the prospects are gloomy, and it is feared that Government will find it very hard to realise as much revenue, from the Koli villages especially, as it did last year.

CINCHONA.—The Government Quinologist, states, in reporting on the results of the analyses of two specimens of red bark from Mahableshwar, that the specimens of bark differed in appearance from most of the India grown bark of C. Succirubra in having a thicker corky envelope, which had partially scaled off the surface in many places. This was more especially the case with the elder bark. The following analyses are given in percentages of dry bark :—

No. 1.—C. Succirubra Bark, Four Years Old.

	Per cent.
Total alkaloids	5·95
Quinine	1·06
Quinidine and other alkaloids	4·89
Sulphate of quinine obtained crystallized	0·75
Sulphate of quinidine and cinchonidine	3·16

No. 2.—C. Succirubra Bark, Three Years Old.

Total alkaloids	5·34
Quinine	0·67
Quinidine and other alkaloids	4·57
Sulphate of quinine obtained crystallised	0·39
Sulphate of quinidine and cinchonidine	2·48

The most remarkable quality of the barks is that they contain but little cinchonidine compared with the usual yield of red barks, and that alkaloid is nearly entirely replaced by quinidine, an alkaloid of somewhat greater value, and not yet found in any large quantity in Indian barks.

A HORRIBLE STORY.—The Deccan Herald says :—The railway magistrate was engaged on Saturday last in a preliminary investigation into a charge of murder alleged to have been committed in the village of Bheegwan, two miles from the Decksal station. Fifteen persons are accused as principals and accessaries. The witnesses tell a most horrifying tale. They state that a young Marwarrie widow, of about twenty years of age, was found to be enciente ; and that her brother brought an old woman from a neighbouring village to give her drugs with a view to produce abortion ; that after drugs had been administered for three days without effect, the brother ordered the old woman to give her a potion to cause her death ; that the potion was prepared and offered to the young woman, who refused it, and that the brother and other members of the family forced it down her throat ; that after taking it the young woman cried for water, which was denied her, and that she crawled towards the water and got a brass vessel full, which was immediately snatched from her and herself thrust into a dark room ; that early next morning preparations were made in the house for carrying her out for cremation, and that she was carried out by her brother and other members of her family while she was yet alive ; that she was thus placed on the pyre and the pyre lighted, and that when the flames reached her body she thrust the cow dung cakes from off her in agony and threw herself from the pyre, and that her brother and another with large sticks pitchforked her back on to the pyre and held her there till she was burned. It is alleged by the witnesses that the police patel of the village received Rs. 500 from the brother before the dose of poison was administered to allow the thing to go on ; and that several others received other sums to prevent them from giving information to the authorities. The whole affair was discovered and brought to light by the Railway Police Inspector Abdool Feroze. If the facts related by the witnesses are established, it will prove to be one of the most horrid murders of which we have any record.

To London—Cotton, £2. 15s. ; Seeds, £2. 7s. 6d. to £2. 10s.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Aug. 22.—The business done in Piece Goods during the week has again been on an extremely small scale, but towards the close a better feeling has been growing, although prices at the close show no change. Metals are firm, and prices of some descriptions have advanced about 3 annas per cwt. Coal : Market continues dull ; West Hartley, Rs. 18 alongside.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Aug. 22.—Cotton : This market has been firmer latterly, and prices may at the close may be quoted Rs. 2 to 5 per candy higher, but the business done has again been very small.

EXCHANGE.—Bombay, Aug. 22.—There has been a fair business transacted for the present mail, but there have been scarcely any fluctuations in rates, the only change to notice having been a slightly increased demand for Bank Bills. In China exchange there has been little doing ; 60 days' sight bills are quoted Rs. 222 per 100 dollars.

GOVERNMENT PAPER.—Bombay, Aug. 22.—The transactions in Government Paper have been large, and rates have steadily declined during the week. The decline has been most marked in Five-and-a-Half's, which are ¾ per cent. lower.

SHARES.—Bombay, Aug. 22.—The transactions in Shares have been considerable, more especially in those of Spinning Companies, but prices of all descriptions are rather lower. Press Companies' Shares are not much asked for, and buyers would have an advantage. Land Companies' Shares are lower, with the exception of "Frere's," which are asked for at an advance of Rs. 10. Bombay Bank Shares are slightly weaker.

ACCIDENTS IN THE HILLS.—Accidents at Hill stations have been very numerous this year. To add to the number, news comes to us now that four natives at Dugshai, four others at Kussowlie, and sixteen at Subathoo, have been killed in one way or another caused by the unusually heavy and never-ceasing rain. The bridge at Hurrecpore had been swept away. All roads have become really dangerous ; and it was rumoured at Kussowlie on the 10th that a European on his way down from Simla had been buried under a landslip.—Delhi Gazette.

Official Papers.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH'S VISIT.

The following despatch from H.M.'s Secretary of State for India is published for general information:—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

MY LORD,—I have received at various dates during the past year, and subsequently up to the present time, interesting correspondence from your Excellency's Government relating to the several demonstrations made by Native Princes and Chiefs of India in honour of the visit of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh to India.

2. Wishing to have before me all the information relating to the circumstances of this visit, I have hitherto delayed addressing you on the subject; but, although it is possible that some further reports may be received from your Excellency's Government bearing upon the same subject, I think that the time has come when I should no longer abstain from recording the satisfaction with which H.M.'s Government have regarded the loyalty and devotion with which so many of the Princes and Chiefs of India have welcomed H.R.H. to their country, and declared their attachment to her Gracious Majesty the Queen.

3. It was natural that the first visit of a Prince of the blood royal of England to H.M.'s Indian dominions should have been regarded by the Princes and Chiefs of India and of the adjacent countries as an event of much interest. The feelings with which they hailed the arrival of H.R.H. would have been testified by demonstrations on a scale of unusual magnificence had it not been that the measures which were in contemplation to give full effect to the royal visit were arrested by an unfortunate event. Many parts of the country were afflicted with a great famine. Your Excellency, therefore, very rightly abandoned on your own part, and discouraged on the part of others, all idea of a vast assemblage at some central point, which would have brought from a distance many Princes and Chiefs, with large numbers of attendants, at a heavy cost to themselves, and to the injury of the people of the districts through which they might have been compelled to pass.

4. Nevertheless, the Princes and Chiefs of India, on the approach of H.R.H. to their several territorities, took occasion to demonstrate their sense of the honour done to them by the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh, and their devotion to her Majesty the Queen, by pressing forward to meet the Prince, and, not merely by verbal expressions of loyalty, but also by substantial acts, testified the pleasure which it afforded them to meet the son of her Majesty the Queen.

5. It has, indeed, been a source of much satisfaction to her Majesty's Government to know that many of the Native Princes and Chiefs have sought to commemorate the sojourn of H.R.H. in India not by costly pageants, as in days gone by, but by enlightened acts of philanthropy, especially by endowing institutions for education, which will confer lasting benefits upon the people.

6. It affords me much satisfaction also to record the high opinion which her Majesty's Government have formed, from the public correspondence laid before them by your Excellency, of the judgment, tact, and courtesy by which H.R.H., during his tour, won the respect and regard of all classes in India.

7. It is satisfactory to learn that, at a time when it was necessary, owing to the condition of your finances, to put some pressure upon the Indian tax-payer, the good results attending H.R.H.'s visits have been attained without laying any perceptible burden upon the people of the country.

8. All the circumstances of H.R.H.'s progress through India, as reported by your Excellency, have been laid before her Majesty, and I have been commanded to inform you that it is her Majesty's wish that her grateful acknowledgments should be conveyed to those Princes and Chiefs of India who have thus manifested their attachment to the family of the Queen and their loyalty to the Crown of England.

9. I am commanded also to convey to your Excellency, to the Governors, the Lieutenant-governors, the Chief Commissioners, and other public functionaries under your Excellency, her Majesty's thanks for your successful efforts to render the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh acceptable to the Native Princes and Chiefs, and to all classes of the communities of India.

10. I cannot conclude this despatch without recording my hearty acknowledgment of the excellent judgment and discretion evinced, in all their arrangements, by Sir Neville Chamberlain, Sir Seymour Blane, and Captain John Clerk, the officers especially appointed to the personal staff of the Duke of Edinburgh. The high character of Sir Neville Chamberlain as a soldier, the fame of whose achievements in the field had extended beyond the borders of India, naturally gave him great influence and authority, which he turned to the best account, whilst full effect was given to his judicious efforts by the zeal and assiduity on all occasions displayed by the officers under his command.—I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant, ARGYLL.

PRIZES FOR SHOOTING OFFERED BY H.E. LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

The Right Hon. Lord Napier of Magdala, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., has signified his intention of bestowing the following "Commander in Chief's" prizes for rifle competition by the regiments of British cavalry, batteries of royal artillery, and regiments of British infantry, serving in the Bengal Presidency, under the following conditions:—

I.—CAVALRY.

(Including Batteries of Horse and Field Artillery.)

Prize.—A Sword, regulation pattern, value £10. The match to be divided into two stages. Every non-commissioned officer and soldier, with their commanding officer's permission (and commanding officers are requested to place as few restrictions as possible on the number of competitors), will be eligible to enter for the first stage on payment of one rupee each, and will fire five rounds each, standing at 300 yards.

The twenty men who make the highest scores at this distance, in each regiment or battery, will be considered as the champions of their regiment or battery, and they alone will compete in the second stage of the match, without paying any further entrance, and will fire five rounds each, standing, at 300 yards, and five rounds each, mounted, at 200 yards. The men will fire from twenty troop or battery horses, to be selected and assigned by the officer commanding each regiment or battery. The individual who makes the highest aggregate score at the two distances of the second stage will be the winner of the sword presented by H.E. The regiments and batteries competing will be placed in order of merit, according to the aggregate scores made in the second stage by their twenty champions.

The whole of the entrances, without any deduction, will be issued in individual prizes to the best shots in order of merit, amongst the competitors in the second stage of the match, without reference to the regiment or battery to which they may belong. The number of money prizes, and the amount of each prize, will depend on the number of entrances for the match, and will be determined by the Chief Inspector of Musketry, in communication with the instructors of competing regiments, as soon as the total number of entrances shall have been ascertained. The winner of the sword given by H.E. the C. in C. will, in addition, receive the first money prize.

II.—INFANTRY.

(Including Batteries of Garrison Artillery.)

Aggregate Prize.—A Cup, value £70.

Individual Prize.—A Watch, value £20.

The match to be divided into two stages. Every non-commissioned officer and soldier—the sergeant and assistant sergeant instructors of musketry excepted—with their commanding officer's permission (and commanding officers are requested to place as few restrictions as possible on the number of competitors), will be eligible to enter for the first stage, on payment of one rupee each, and will fire five rounds each at 500 yards. The twenty men who make the highest scores at this distance, in each regiment or garrison battery, will be considered the champions of their regiment or battery, and they alone will compete in the second stage of the match without paying any further entrance, and will fire five rounds each at 500 yards, and five rounds each at 600 yards. The highest aggregate score made by the twenty champions of any regiment or garrison battery, at the two distances of the second stage, to win the cup presented by Lord Napier of Magdala, which will be regarded as regimental property, and will, as a general rule, be deposited in the sergeants' mess. The individual who makes the highest aggregate score of the twenty champions of the regiment which wins the Commander-in-Chief's cup, in the second stage of the match, will win the watch presented by his Excellency.

The whole of the entrances, without any deduction, will be issued in individual prizes to the best shots in the second stage of the match, in order of merit, without reference to the regiment or battery to which they belong. The number of money prizes, and the amount of each prize, will depend upon the number of entrances for the match, and will be determined by the Chief Inspector of Musketry, in communication with the instructors of regiments competing, as soon as the total number of entrances is known. The first money prize will probably be 200 rupees.

THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT.

From D. F. McNeile, Esq., Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, to Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Fort William, May 25, 1871.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Government order of the 8th inst., upon the Board's land revenue report for the year 1869-70, and to submit the following reply thereto:—

2. The various inquiries and observations contained in the latter part of your letter, beginning with the 19th paragraph, will shortly form the subject of a separate report.

3. With reference to the first eighteen paragraphs, I am to observe that the instructions now given by Government for the preparations of the board's next annual report, involving as they do the collation and arrangement of a great mass of materials, will, it is feared, make it impossible to secure the submission of the report, as required by your 45th paragraph, at an earlier period than usual. On some of the questions raised, the Board are in a position to supply sufficient information, without calling for fresh details from the local officers. But on most of them the particulars required cannot be given without a careful inquiry into the statistics of each separate district in the Lower Provinces, and that inquiry must extend under some heads to a detailed examination of the past revenue history of each district from the time of its original settlement—an examination which, in some of the western districts, will be found extremely difficult, in consequence of the destruction of records which took place during the Mutiny of 1857. Great difficulties will also arise in the collection of the necessary data, from the fact that, in the permanently settled districts, there is at this moment scarcely a collector who has been long enough in charge of his district to be at all thoroughly acquainted with the details of its past and present physical and social condition:* and further, from the fact that the reports which must now be called for are of a kind in the preparation of which the district officers generally have hitherto had no experience. I am distinctly to represent that on some points indicated, especially in your 5th paragraph, the nature of the settlement of Bengal will make it impossible to give accurate and full information. Under that settlement Government has altogether abstained from interfering with the landholders in their management of their estates, and therefore Government officers are not in a position to report upon the details of such management; nor have they the means of acquiring, except by accumulating general information in the course of many years of residence, a knowledge of many other matters that would come under their daily cognisance if they were engaged in the administration of a ryotwar revenue system. From the most experienced of them, therefore, little more is to be expected, in reply to some of the inquiries of Government, than expressions of surmise and vaguely-formed opinion. It is further to be feared that, even in respect to some of those subjects on which accurate information is attainable, the mass and variety of the duties which now devolve on district officers will render it impracticable for them to conduct, except in an intermittent and irregular way, the researches into their own office records which will be indispensable to the preparation of correct reports.

4. I am directed to preface with the above remarks the request of the member in charge of the Land Revenue Department that he may be permitted to furnish, in his annual report for 1870-71, such a statement in reply to the present Government orders as he may be able to compile from his own knowledge and the data available at such short notice in the records of the board's office; and that the requisition of Government for specific information on such questions as the changes which the permanently settled territory has undergone during the last eighty years, the size and character of estates and under-tenures in each district, the number of estates which have changed hands since the settlement, the prices of produce at various periods, &c., may be suspended for another year.

5. If this request be conceded, the necessary orders will be issued in detail to the local officers, and they will be directed to use their best endeavours to collect and supply the requisite statistics in their reports on the administration during the current year.

6. I am to state that separate reports on the subjects indicated in your 15th, 16th, and 18th paragraphs will be submitted as soon as possible; but upon these subjects also special inquiries must be made from the local officers.

7. In conclusion, I am respectfully to deprecate the imputation of carelessness and inefficiency conveyed by the second paragraph of the Government orders. The board's annual administration report has been for many years submitted by them, and accepted by Government, in the form in which the report, which has now formed the subject of such severe animadversion on the part of the Government, is drawn up. The submission of a report, as distinguished from mere tabular returns, was a course adopted by the board for the first time in 1846, Government having called (in the rules of practice prescribed in June, 1842) for certain figured returns only; but even then, in 1846, the commissioners were strictly limited in the reports required from them to explanations and remarks directly suggested by the tabular statements called for. No changes, except in points of detail, were subsequently made in the form of the report; and, therefore, in the absence of any fresh instructions from Government, it certainly did not suggest itself to the board last year that they would be held worthy of blame for not preparing a report of a totally different character from that which had been submitted and accepted during each of the previous twenty-four years.

From Rivers Thompson, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal in Revenue Department, to the Officiating Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, Land Revenue Department.

Fort William, June 10, 1871.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated May 25, communicating the remarks of the Board of Revenue on the resolution recorded by the Lieutenant governor on their report on the land revenue administration of the Lower Provinces for the year 1869-70.

2. The Lieutenant governor would by no means impute carelessness and inefficiency to the board, being well aware of the great zeal and ability with which they have always performed their duties. He recognised the fact that the form of the report was one which had been long handed down, and if the board had not had a very exceptionally strong secretariat, he would have contented himself with asking that the character of the report should be altered for the future. As it is, he must still think that with such a secretariat a more interesting report might have been looked for; but he has no doubt that all his requirements will now be well met as far as it is possible to meet them.

3. With reference to the difficulties suggested, the Lieut.-Governor readily accepts the proposal that the member in charge should only give him, with the report for the past year, such information as he can furnish from his own knowledge, or can compile from available data, leaving the more detailed information necessary as a preliminary to a new series of reports, to be furnished hereafter, either in a special report, or as part of the report for 1871-2.

4. The Lieutenant-Governor hopes that speedy measures will be taken to collect the information required, which, though very wide in its scope, is not, he thinks, more than the officers responsible for the administration of this great country may reasonably be expected to furnish. The facts stated by the board regarding the want of permanence in the collectors, and consequent want of knowledge of their districts, and want of experience in the preparation of such reports as are called for, are very sad. The call is one which his Honour is well aware of, and will try to the best of his power to mitigate. As a series of questions have been already addressed to the collectors for the preparation of a gazetteer, and as the board and the collectors have of late years been engaged in collecting some statistical information in connection with the statements prescribed by the Government of India in accordance with the recommendation of the statistical committee, it is hoped that some materials may be already available, and that the rest may be procurable.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor thinks it important to make a few remarks with reference to the board's emphatic observation, that, under the permanent settlement, Government has altogether abstained from interfering with the landholders in the management of their estates, and that, therefore, officers are not in a position to report on such management, having no means of acquiring information except by many years of residence, which it is not generally given them to attain. As matter of history, the Lieutenant-Governor must express his belief that there is some error in this statement, if it is intended to mean that the policy and mode of administration indicated were the immediate consequences of the permanent settlement. His Honour gathers from the notices in old records that for many years after that settlement Government did very frequently interfere, and did perseveringly seek to obtain information regarding the agrarian affairs of Bengal. The Code of 1793 is full of provisions for the protection of the under-tenants and farmers, for the filling of zemindaree and village papers, for the maintenance of village officers, and for the record of property in land. Both on many occasions in those early days, and in not unfrequent occasions to this day, by court of ward's management, attachment, Government purchase, and otherwise, most estates have come under direct Government management. The regulations of 1817, 1818, and 1819, regarding canoongoes and putwarees, very abundantly show that up to that time the Government had by no means in any degree abandoned principles of admiuistration which have prevailed in other parts of India. On the contrary, efforts were then made to reorganise the village and pergunnah officers, and to obtain in the offices of Government the most detailed information regarding all holdings and all payments. The settlement regulations of 1822 and 1833 do not show any change of policy as respects Bengal. Regulation IX. of 1833 repealed provisions for enforcing the putwaree's papers in Bengal as well as in the North-Western Provinces, and rendered zemindars who failed in this respect incapable of suing for rent—a provision which remained in force in Bengal till 1859. It seems to the Lieutenant governor that it was only at some time subsequent to 1833, and after the separation of the North-Western Provinces, that school officers sprang up in Bengal who adopted and enforced the non-interference system, discouraged, and eventually put down, putwarees, notwithstanding the still subsisting regulations in their favour, and held it not to be the function of Government to interfere and seek information, but rather to let the zemindars and people settle their affairs in the Courts. If the Road Cess Bill is passed, it will be absolutely necessary, in carrying it out, to fall back on the still subsisting regulation, and on the duties of landholders and functions of Government recognised in earlier days. And the Lieutenant-Governor must avow, that in asking for information regarding the working of the existing system, nature of tenures, the condition of the people, and other matters, he is acting on a view of the duties of Government more consonant with that of the older administrators than with views more recently held in Bengal. He believes that this view is now held by her Majesty's Government in England and in India, and he is confident that he will have the very efficient assistance of the members of the board in acting on it.

* Only six collectors in the regulation provinces of Bengal have at this time been in charge of their respective districts for a period of two full years, and only two out of those six for four years.

FISHERIES OF PORT BLAIR.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIV.—DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

Resolution by the Government of India in the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce, No. 6, dated Simla, July 27.

Extract paragraphs 11 to 13 of the resolution of the Government of India in the Home department, Nos. 11-17, dated Jan. 4.

11. The Governor general in Council has carefully perused Dr. Day's report regarding the fisheries of Port Blair, and the explanations furnished by Colonel Man. H.E. in Council has also had under his consideration the remarks made by Dr. Rean on the subject in his annual report. Admitting all the facts stated by Colonel Man, there is still sufficient ground for Dr. Day's general view that the resources of the settlement, as regards fish, are not properly utilised. It has never been laid down that the convicts shall always have fresh fish supplied to them. There is no doubt that fresh fish will not always be available, and that fresh fish are apt to spoil in hot weather, yet this is exactly the condition of things in British Burmah, where the bulk of the daily food of the people consists of fish.

12. The Governor general in Council considers that some system might be established to preserve the surplus fish, and to prevent it from being wasted. What is wanted is, that there should be an effort to catch fish on a larger scale, and means provided for regularly preserving all that is not sold when fresh. The Governor general in Council does not apprehend that there should be any difficulty in the matter. The resources of the settlement for the supply of fish seem to be unlimited; all that is required is to catch more; and to do this it is only necessary to employ a larger establishment of convict fishermen. Salt is available apparently at a cost of about a halfpenny a pound, and possibly, if more extensively made, might be cheaper still. Wood is available in abundance for smoking. If, therefore, a regular establishment were kept up at which all surplus fish could be smoked or salted, or both, as soon as caught, there ought to be no difficulty in having a ration of fish, either fresh or preserved, every day for the entire convict population.

13. On one point, in regard to this subject, Colonel Man no doubt is right. The contract made by Captain Laughton does not seem to be so improvident as Dr. Day's report made it appear, and the system enforced by him is not, in the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, deserving of the condemnation pronounced upon it in Dr. Day's report, which appears to have been written under a misapprehension of the real character of the contract. It is true that this system is incompatible with the proper curing of fish; but no blame can properly be imputed to Captain Laughton on this account. The Governor general in Council is therefore glad to relieve that officer from any censure which may be supposed to attach to him with reference to the fishing contract.

From A. O. Hume, Esq., C.B., officiating secretary to the Government of India, home department, to the superintendent of Port Blair and the Nicobars, No. 422, dated Fort William, Jan. 21.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1,100, dated the 6th ult., on the subject of the publication of Dr. Day's criticisms on the management of the fisheries of Port Blair.

2. In reply, I am desired to state that the Governor general in Council regards that by an oversight Dr. Day's report was published in extenso, before your replies to certain strictures therein contained had been received. On perusal of the explanations furnished by you, and other documents bearing on the question, H.E. in Council, although unable to allow that the administration of Port Blair had utilised to the fullest extent the resources of the settlement as regards fish, has come to the conclusion that the contract made by Capt. Laughton was not so improvident as Dr. Day's report made it appear, and that the condemnation pronounced upon it in that report was based upon a misapprehension of the real character of the contract. H.E. in Council therefore has, as you will have seen from paragraphs 11 to 13 of the resolution of the 4th instant, relieved Captain Laughton and your administration from any censure that might be supposed to attach with reference to the fishing contract.

ENLISTING COOLIES AS EMIGRANTS.

Extract, paras. 1 and 2, from a letter from the Secretary to the Government of India to the Secretary to the Government N.W.P., No. 2,915, dated Simla, June 14.

1. I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 16th ult., submitting a correspondence on the subject of an attempt made by a recruiter at Allahabad to compel certain coolies to enlist as emigrants.

2. In reply, I am directed to request that the thanks of H.E. the Governor-General in Council may be conveyed to the Rev. T. Evans and the Rev. J. Williams for searching out the case, for placing it before Government, and for bringing the offenders to justice.

MILITARY.—It is announced that, on the recommendation of the Government of India, her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer a good-service pension, in room of Major-Gen. A. Broome, C.S.I., Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, deceased, upon Major-Gen. William Templer Hughes, C.B., Bengal Staff Corps, from March 28 last.

SUICIDE OF A MILITARY OFFICER.—On Sunday morning, about half-past eight o'clock, Major Augustus Spiller, of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, committed suicide, in the presence of his wife and a cousin, at his lodgings, in Clarence-square, Gosport. The unfortunate gentleman had been ailing for some time since the return of the regiment from India, and had only recently resumed his duties after three months' sick leave. On the evening before the suicide he was in a more than usually depressed state of mind. Next morning, however, he joined his wife and cousin at breakfast, and during the meal he seized a table knife and nearly severed his head from his body. Death was necessarily almost instantaneous.

MONEY ORDERS FOR INDIA.—Subjoined is a complaint regarding the want of money order facilities for India such as are enjoyed not only by other principal portions of the Empire, but also in connection with several foreign countries:—"On inquiry at the Post Office, I am informed that money orders are not issued in India payable in England and vice versa, and, as stamps are not available, there is a want of accommodation for the transmission of small sums which is most inconvenient, and frequently an impediment to traders. In looking through the British Postal Guide, I see that several foreign countries, as well as Australia, Canada, and China, and even the Falkland Islands, are afforded the now ordinary facility of transmitting by money orders, and it does seem somewhat strange that the same accommodation should not be accorded to the thousands of our fellow-subjects residing in India.—A REMITTER."—Home News.

A NEW CAMP BOTTLE.—Readers of the correspondence from the "seat of war" must have derived some amusement from the remarks made on the soda-water bottle in which the British soldier, not having a reserve stomach like the camel, is condemned to carry his daily supply of drinking water. The inconvenient shape of this article, and the manner in which it is worn, are as bad as can be, unless the authorities should revert to the wooden keg used in the days of Marlborough. The "London Irish Volunteers" are wiser in their generation, and have adopted the water-bottle known as the "Cochrane pattern," which is made of ebonite, and hollowed to fit the side—an expedient which also adapts it to serve as a pillow, as the hollow part fits the head and is comfortably padded. In hot weather the felt with which the bottle is covered being wetted, serves to keep the water cool by evaporation. Considering all the advantages which the Cochrane water-bottle combines, and the very great inconvenience of the soda-water bottle now in use, it would be a real service to the soldier if the authorities could be persuaded to take a lesson in a small practical matter from the "London Irish."—Broad Arrow.

EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY.—The House of Commons' Select Committee appointed to report upon the subject of railway communication between the Mediterranean, the Black Sea, and the Persian Gulf was not nominated until July, and all that the committee was able to do was to take some evidence, which has now been published, and to recommend its own reappointment next session to continue the inquiry. Sir H. Rawlinson gave the committee a general account of the various routes which have been under consideration. General F. R. Chesney was examined, and described and recommended the Euphrates line going from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf. He was followed by Mr. W. Ainsworth, who was attached to General Chesney's mission in 1835-37; by Captain E. P. Charlewood, also attached to that expedition; and by Mr. Telford Macneill, who has been engaged in surveys with a view to this Euphrates line. Mr. T. K. Lynch, who is acquainted with the country, and who furnished Mr. Andrew with much information, also gave evidence before the committee. Sir G. Jenkinson, on whose motion the committee was appointed, gave an account of the part he has taken in the matter. Sir J. Macneill, who was also examined, stated that engineers would now be able to carry a line over the Balan Pass to Aleppo, to be worked with locomotive engines. The only other witness examined was Mr. W. J. Maxwell, civil engineer, recently returned from Asia Minor, whither he went to examine the Balan Pass, and a continuance of the line to Aleppo, and he states that the pass is practicable. The elevation crossed would be 2,173 feet; snow is rarely upon the ground; the oldest inhabitant of Balan remembers three feet of snow on one occasion, but this is spoken of in the neighbourhood as a most extraordinary occurrence. In a paper handed in by him, Mr. Maxwell states that the difficulties to be encountered in carrying a railway over the Balan (or Beilan) Pass are not for a moment to be compared with those of the Mont Cenis Railway, and that there are no zigzags required, and nothing to be dreaded from the severity of the weather. It is stated that it is not at all probable that the native tribes would interfere with a railway by the proposed route, but that some small subsidies might have to be given.

BRITISH INDIA.—The little annual Blue-book on statistics relating to India, issued from the India Office, shows that the imports into British India by sea in the financial year 1869-70 were of the value of £46,882,386—viz., £13,954,107, treasure and £32,927,579 merchandise; and the exports were of the value of £53,513,721—viz., £1,042,352 treasure and £52,471,375 merchandise. Going back to 1861, we find the imports, in round numbers, only £34,170,000, and the exports of rather less value, being £34,090,000. The exports therefore have increased much more than the imports. The tonnage of all vessels (including native craft) entered and cleared at ports in British India has increased from £5,101,947 tons in 1861 to 6,274,550 tons in 1870. At the end of the year 1869-70 eighty-six millions sterling had been expended on railways in British India; considerably more than 4,000 miles of railroad were open for traffic, and more than 17,000,000 of passengers were carried in the year. Exclusive of State outlay on guaranteed works, the Government expended £6,389,082 upon public works in the year 1869-70—viz., military buildings, civil buildings, and public improvements, the latter absorbing £2,649,277. 14,014 miles of Government telegraph lines were open at the commencement of the year 1869-70. 83,032,957 letters and newspapers were transmitted through the Post Office of India in the year 1869-70, and the mails were conveyed over 50,878 miles, by railways, boats, carts, camels, or runners. The troops employed in British India, officers and men, in 1869-70, were 180,820—62,939 Europeans, 117,881 natives. There were 24,274 schools and colleges belonging to, aided, or maintained by the Government in British India, with an average attendance of 789,125 pupils; the Government expended £637,463 upon the schools and colleges, and the total expenditure of the year from all sources was £1,070,685. The Vaccine Department report 1,617,513 successful vaccinations in the year 1869, and 186,389 failures. 15,274 emigrants embarked from British India in the year 1869-70, the majority for British Guiana and the West Indies, 5,404 for Mauritius. The population of India under British administration (exclusive of native States) is reported 151,146,516; the public debt in the year 1869-70 £108,186,338; the gross public revenue, £50,901,081. The area under British administration is stated at 963,929 square miles.

THE NEW 16-POUNDER.—On September 11, six guns carefully packed in jute and wrappers, and jealously guarded from the vulgar gaze, were held in readiness at the Royal Arsenal to be despatched to Aldershot, there to be the armament of H battery of field artillery, and as experimental weapons to take part in the autumn manœuvres. They are 16-pounders, weighing twelve hundred weight, and rifled in three shallow grooves similarly to the 9-pounders. The shape, however, differs from that of the latter, there being no swell at the muzzle; the sighting, too, is different, occupying a central position on each of the trunnions. A cleverly-devised arrangement for securing the screw which tightens the rear sight is observable on these guns; in lieu of the old chain, which frequently became detached, there is an arm upon the head of the screw, which catches against a button on the surface of the breach as it unwinds itself, and prevents the screw from making more revolutions than are actually requisite. The carriages, limbers, and ammunition waggons for these guns have undergone very important modifications. Similar weights to those of the 9-pounders have been retained; but the number of rounds has necessarily been reduced from 120 to 100. They are disposed as follows:—Six boxes on the waggon and two on the limber, containing each twelve rounds, making an aggregate of ninety-six. The remaining four repose in two shallow boxes beside the gun on the carriage itself, and upon these boxes, when closed, seats are arranged for two additional men. The shells are packed tight, with a stuffing around them of tow—a wise provision to prevent their jolting. The old covers, with mouldings to rest upon the extremities of the shells, seldom fitted close. A narrow chest for fuzes finds room for itself between the two boxes on the wagon limber. A contrivance beneath the axle-bed of the gun, only approachable by a considerable amount of manipulation—involving a loss of time, scarcely, we imagine, to be advisable—contains tubes. Such is the new 16-pounder. That it is a weapon of terrible efficiency none can doubt. Experiments at Shoeburyness have established its reputation, as the Americans say of their Gatling, "beyond a peradventure." But we question whether its superiority in point of range and weight of projectile counterbalances the extra labour which is involved in its transport. The ensuing month will afford interesting information on this point. We understand, however, that a third steel and iron field-gun is about to be experimented on—a 25-pounder, weighing 21 cwt.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Bengal, Paynter, from Cardiff to Aden, put into Milford on Sept. 9, leaky.

The Maritana, McDonald, from Bombay to Liverpool, which put into Algoa Bay on May 26 leaky, has discharged all her cargo. About 1,000 bales cotton, found damaged, have been dried and re-packed, and will be forwarded to their destination with the sound cotton. Some linseed and myrabolums were so much damaged as to be unfit for reshipment, and were sold on July 22; and a considerable quantity of seed, &c., was not worth the expense of landing, and was thrown overboard. The vessel continues to make five inches of water per hour, and, as the leak is evidently in her bottom, it cannot be got at without leaving her down, for which operation there are, at present, no means at the port.

The Dorothy, Walker, from Akyab to Falmouth with rice, put into Algoa Bay on July 23 disabled. She experienced a heavy gale on July 12 in lat. 33 S., lon. 35 E., during which she was thrown on to her beam ends, had to throw overboard about 30 bags rice, lost part of bulwarks, and strained her stanchions. Since her arrival she has made very little water. Surveyors have recommended the discharge of about 400 bags of her cargo in order to lighten her forward, as her cutwater is damaged.

The Colombo, McMillan, from Calcutta to London, put into Ascension on Aug. 16, her cargo having been discovered to be on fire that morning. She has been surveyed, and the cargo in the forehold (rapeseed) has been found much burnt, and a considerable quantity completely destroyed; this has been ordered to be thrown overboard. The surveyors further state that the ship's company have been employed clearing the cargo from the fore hatchway for the last two days, and no trace of the fire as has yet been discovered, we consider it expedient that additional labour should be supplied from the island forthwith, as there is every danger of the fire spreading." Eighteen Kroomen will be at once sent to the vessel in compliance with the above recommendation.

The Pakwan, Shiels, from Calcutta to Hull, arrived off Plymouth on Sept. 11 with loss of maintopgallant and royal yards.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

A NEW SUMPTUARY LAW.

The Pall Mall Gazette remarks that one by one the old associations of Anglo-Indian life seem doomed to disappear. Nabobs are no more. Nankeen trousers have not been seen by the present generation. White jackets are among the pleasures of the past. And now it is announced that the black coat is to be deprived of its social precedence in Indian drawing-rooms. Hitherto the wearer of what military men call "mufti" has had the presumable reputation of being a richer man than any wearer of uniform of the same age and standing. The probability was that he belonged to the Civil Service, in which case it was known that—in the language of mammas and chaperones—he was, as a husband, "good for three hundred a-year dead or alive;" that stipend being the lowest to which he could be reduced even in the case of the most hopeless incapacity, while it also represented the pension assigned to his otherwise disconsolate widow. If not in the service, the wearer of a black coat was sure to be a rich man; so that a young lady was always supposed to be advancing her prospects in life when she attached herself — within the limits of becoming flirtation — to an inhabitant of that curious garment. But henceforward members of the Civil Service in India are on all "dress" occasions to wear the diplomatic uniform, such as has been hitherto confined to governors and "political" officers. And as all military officers will have the privilege when in civil employ of wearing the same, the new dress will be inadequate to convey the old distinction. A change of the kind was perhaps necessary; young civilians in India dress themselves as a rule as well as young gentlemen of the same class in England. But the costumes of officials of high standing—especially if distinguished in the service—are apt to be, to say the least, rather eccentric. Sir Henry Lawrence, when out of uniform, as he mostly was, described himself as "the worst dressed man in Asia." Sir James Outram was as little particular as could be in the matter of costume. And as for Sir Charles Napier, he disdained even what are usually considered the first essentials of the toilette. "You are in time for a bath before dinner, Sir Charles," said Lord Dalhousie, when the hero of Scinde arrived in Calcutta to take command of the army after the disaster of Chillianwallah. "No, thank you, my lord," was the uncompromising answer; "I had a good wash at Alexandria;" a story which anybody can believe who chooses. And thus through the example of men like these—who were all military, by the way—the rough-and-ready school took its growth. It became customary to suppose that if a man had a province to govern, he could govern it best in his shirt-sleeves. Civilians, being less under restraint as regards dress than military men, of course fell more easily into the delusion. The members of the service in the presidencies were comparatively careful in attire—but it must be remembered that they had the reputation of being feeble and red-tapey. The North-West and the Punjab men, administering, as far as the Punjab was concerned, "irregular" government, grew still more irregular in their dress. They imitated greater men; smaller men imitated them, until at last members of the "heaven-born" Civil Service did not scruple to appear even upon solemn official occasions in costumes suggestive by turns of a missionary, a gamekeeper, a gentleman engaged in the City, an uncovenanted clerk, and a cashiered officer. Lord Mayo has now put a check upon the dangerous movement.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

The "Weekly Circular" of Jay Cooke, McCulloch, and Co., with New York Mail dates Aug. 29, and Cable prices, Sept. 11, says:—

"There has been little change since our last advices in the condition of financial affairs. Money is still comparatively abundant at 2½ to 3½ per cent. on demand loans, and 6 to 7 per cent. on discounts of prime mercantile paper. There has been a temporary halt in the outflow of currency to the interior, and hence the Associated Banks lost, last week, only 609,000 dols. of legal tenders, while the changes in the other items of the weekly statement were not important as affecting the lending ability of the Banks. The Gold premium has been comparatively steady, speculation having been quieter than perhaps at any period since the suspension of specie payments. Last week the Treasury sold 2,000,000 dols. of gold; besides which, about one-half the amount of the September interest on Ten-Forties has been paid in advance. United States Bonds have been quiet, so far as respects the ordinary investment demand; but prices have been very firm, in sympathy with the rapid negotiation of the New Five per Cent. Loan. The more settled tone of business in the Gold Exchange has been attended with an improved demand for Bills of Exchange, and rates have correspondingly strengthened, while the current supply of Commercial bills is more liberal than a year ago."

Advertisements.

India Office, 16th September, 1871.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL hereby gives notice that the GOVERNMENT of INDIA have informed him that it is their intention to issue the following Notification in India on this date.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

16th September, 1871.

Notification.

1. His Excellency the VICEROY and GOVERNOR-GENERAL in COUNCIL has resolved to PAY OFF the FIVE PER CENT. LOAN of the 28th February, 1857, raised by the Government of India in pursuance of advertisement in the Calcutta Gazette of the 16th January, 1857, and to which additions or transfers have been made under subsequent Notifications, the Loan being commonly known as the New Five per Cent. Loan of 1856-57.

2. It is intended to discharge the Loan at the expiration of the term guaranteed in the original Notification —viz., on the 16th January, 1872, and formal notice of this intention will accordingly be published on the 16th October next.

3. In anticipation of such notice, His Excellency has determined to offer to the holders of this Loan the option of transferring the amount of their holdings, to the extent of Rs. 13,50,00,000, say £13,500,000 sterling, into a new Loan (which may be called the Transfer Loan, 1872), to be opened upon the following terms:—

(a.) Promissory Notes will be issued for sums of Rs. 500 and for sums above that amount in even hundreds of rupees; the Notes will be payable to order, and interest thereon will be paid half-yearly on the 16th January and 16th July in each year.

(b.) Interest will be paid on this Loan at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum during the first seven years of currency, and thenceforward—viz., from the 16th January, 1879, inclusive, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.

(c.) The Notes will be issued in a form similar to that employed for the Notes of the Four per Cent. Loan of 1st May, 1865.

(d.) No part of the Loan now announced will be paid off before the 16th January, 1882, nor without a previous notice of three months to be issued at any time after the 15th October, 1881.

(e.) Applications in writing from persons who may desire to make such transfer should be made to the Secretaries and Treasurers of the Banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or to the officer in charge of any treasury, at which the interest on the present Loan is payable; such application must be accompanied by the Note which it is desired to transfer, receipted as follows:—Received the contents by transfer into the Transfer Loan of 1872, advertised in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated 16th September, 1871.

(f.) His Grace the Secretary of State for India has been requested to receive Tenders for the transfer, under this Notification, of any Note of the Five per Cent. Loan of 1856-57 held in England.

(g.) Interest at 5 per cent., up to the date of advertised discharge, will be paid to proprietors in anticipation, on the surrender of their Notes for transfer into the new Loan.

(h.) No application for transfer will be received after the 15th November next.

(i.) The new Transfer Loan will be allotted to applicants in the order in which the Notes tendered for transfer are received, whether in India or England, the difference of time between India and England being reckoned to be six hours. In case several applications are received simultaneously, which cannot all be complied with, the available amount will be issued rated in proportion to the amount of application.

4. It being deemed expedient to increase the investment of the Paper Currency Reserve, Promissory Notes will be issued to the Currency Department in exchange for coin amounting to not more than Rs. 2,70,00,000, and not more than the excess of the amount of the Loan of the 28th February, 1857, now outstanding over Rs. 13,50,00,000.

5. The Notes issued to the Currency Department will be in all respects the same, and subject to the same conditions as the existing Notes of the Four per Cent. Loan dated 1st February, 1843, commonly known as the Fifth Four per Cent. Loan of 1842-43, of which Loan they will form a part. The price to be paid by the Currency Department will be the market price of Notes of the said Loan on the 16th January, 1872.

Tenders from holders of Notes enfaced for payment of Interest by Bills on India, and proprietors of the Loan in question registered at the Bank of England, will be received at the India Department of the Bank of England, for transmission to India up to the 15th November, 1871, inclusive.

The Forms of Tender can be obtained on personal application at the India Department, Bank of England.

PROFESSIONAL OPINIONS

SUPPORTING AND RECOMMENDING THIS SYSTEM.

March, 1871.

I have much pleasure in bearing my unqualified testimony to the admirable system of military exercises as given in Sergeant-major B. Browne's book. I can speak confidently of it, having had personal experience of its value. I am in the habit of recommending it to all those under my care, who require this additional mode of treatment for developing their frame.

C. M. MILLER, M.D.,
Assistant-surgeon, London Rifle Brigade.

MR. BROWNE,—Nothing can be more true, in my opinion, than all you say in favour of training all our boys to military exercises. Its usefulness cannot be overrated, either to the boys themselves or to the nation, which would thus find, in a short time, and without any inconvenience or effort, the best part of its educated population prepared to take part in the defence of the country, almost without training, and should their services in this way happily never be required, the country would still have the satisfaction of seeing its young male population immensely benefited in health, strength, appearance, and general manliness. If carried out at all schools, it would become the favourite pastime of the boys.

H. EYRE, Lieutenant-general.

Birkbeck Schools, Kingsland, N., March 7, 1871.

For some years past all the boys and girls of these schools have been put through a course of systematic drill, such as that laid down in Sergeant-major Browne's book. The results have been in the highest degree satisfactory. Not only is the physical condition of the children greatly improved, but the discipline of the drill-ground produces habits of obedience and attention, which, carried into the school-room, conduce greatly to the mental progress of the children, as well as materially aid in maintaining order. Until the time shall come when the Government shall wisely insist upon every child being efficiently drilled, schoolmasters who have not yet tried the experiment will do well to do so without delay.

Of course it is of the utmost importance that the drill-instructor should not be a mere martinet. He must be able to convey his instructions clearly and pleasantly; have an unlimited supply of patience, and show that he really takes an interest in his work.

It has been our good fortune for some years to have secured the services of Sergeant-major Browne, the author of this little book ("Setting-up Drill," &c.), who is not only assiduous in performing his duties, but who is fond of his work, and shows it, and, therefore, succeeds admirably.

JAMES RUNTZ, Head Master.

Kingsland Middle Class Schools, Sandringham-road, March 7, 1871.

Physical exercise is undoubtedly one of the requisites of youth, and if such exercise be conducted with a purpose, it is not only productive of health to the body, but also induces habits of order and energy. In our schools the system of drill instruction has been adopted with the best results, and I am quite convinced that any school would be the better for its introduction. Of course a great deal depends upon the drill-instructor; but if such an one as ours (Sergeant-major Browne, who is thoroughly fond of the work, and at the same time a strict disciplinarian and a perfect gentleman), be obtained, the result will be all that can be desired.

ROBERT LANE, Head Master.

Southgate-road Middle Class School, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

It is fortunate in the present day there is but little need for insisting upon this physical training of youth, as its importance is so generally recognised. To insure success, however, it is indispensable that it should be conducted by well-qualified instructors, such as are apt to teach, of gentlemanly manners and good disciplinarians. From my observations of Sergeant-major Browne, I am able to testify to his possession of these qualifications, and have very great pleasure in recommending his system of drill to those who may be desirous of introducing physical exercises into their schools.

THOMAS WILSON, F.R.G.S., Head Master.

Finishing Establishment for Young Ladies, Benyon-house, 32, Culford-road, De Beauvoir-town, N., March 6, 1871.

Mrs. Aldam has great pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficiency of Sergeant-major Browne's method of drilling, and as possessing not only great patience, but also consideration for the strength of the pupils, that no undue fatigue is occasioned, no too sudden a strain upon the muscles of growing children, eager, perhaps, to outdo their schoolfellows, a point too frequently overlooked, when a large number are being drilled.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.
BE NOT DECEIVED.—There is a giant marching onwards from the East who threatens to invade our prosperous country; his name is Cholera, and his cohorts consist of Impurity, Irregularity, Debility, and Despondency. Each of these provocatives of this dire disease may be overcome without danger by Holloway's remedies, provided they be resorted to without delay the moment listlessness, looseness, feverishness, or pain betrays disordered action. The "Directions" will enable the least cultivated to treat successfully and subdue completely these warning symptoms of cholera. When confidence in Holloway's Preparations is once established, each believer in their virtues will humanely recommend them to his acquaintances, that none may foolishly harbour the foe's friends within his own fortress.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Aug. 29; Agra and Madras, Aug. 27; Calcutta, Aug. 26.

THE defective rainfall on the Bombay side is still the subject of general remark and speculation. The water level of the Vehar Lake which supplies Bombay with water was ten feet lower than last year, and if September should not make up for previous shortcomings, scarcity might be looked for next May. In some parts of the Presidency the Banians are already buying up all the grain. Goozerat was an exception to the rest of Bombay, but the damage done by floods to the Central Indian Line would be made good in a day or two. Nearly all Upper India on the contrary was groaning under the weight of never-ending rain. Beyond Saharunpore railway traffic was completely interrupted and likely to remain so till October. The Northern Part of the Central Provinces had also been drenched with rain.

LATER accounts of the Jheend Rajah's proceedings against Mr. Davis attempt to explain away the worst part of those proceedings. When Mr. Davis's letter reflecting on those "deceitful natives" fell into the Rajah's hands, he ordered the placing of a guard over the offending gentleman "simply to impress on his mind that he was not worthy of the confidence which his Highness had reposed in him." This mode of expressing want of confidence however was emphasised by a close imprisonment of four months. An attempt is also made to get rid of the Rajah's special liability for his treatment of a British subject, on the ground that Mr. Davis is either a half-caste or a born Indian. With such evasions the local authorities will know how to deal. One good however has already come of the stir made on this matter by the Press. The Rajah has set Mr. Davis and his property free.

DR. EADES, acting Superintendent of the Bareilly Jail, appears to have caused a dangerous commotion among the prisoners and the people outside by his highhanded contempt for native usages. He took away from the high-caste Hindoos the junao or sacred string worn by each of them in token of his caste. The sufferers showed their resentment in their usual way. The Brahman cooks were flogged for refusing to cook any longer. Forty or fifty of the Hindu prisoners were punished in the same manner for refusing to eat, and the rest were locked up without food for the same reason. The news of what had happened spread outside with the usual embellishments, and every one believed that the heads of the Hindoos and the chins of the Mohammedans in jail had been shaved by order of the Superintendent. Thereupon the shops were closed, and meetings held to consider what should be done by an angry populace. Fortunately the Magistrate and Commissioner appeared at this critical conjuncture upon the scene, and it was not long before a telegram arrived from Sir W. Muir ordering the immediate restoration of the junaos. We are curious to learn what earthly purpose Dr. Eades hoped to further by this wanton-seeming experiment on native patience at a very critical time.

AMONG the latest proceedings of the Supreme Legislative Council at Simla is a little Bill brought in by Sir R. Temple to circumvent the designs of certain persons in French India, who have been shipping from Pondicherry indigo dye made from indigo leaves to the detriment of our one per cent. export duty.

THE Bombay Bar having been the first to petition against Mr. Stephen's new Evidence Act, their example is now being followed by the Calcutta Barristers, who also object to certain clauses limiting the counsel's power of cross-examining witnesses, and enlarging the judge's freedom for direct interference with the course of trials.

FROM Madras we learn that the inquiry into the Van Ingen affair at Bangalore has issued in the discharge of the elder Van Ingen and his two younger sons; the magistrate reserving his judgment for a few days on the case of the elder son, Mr. Edward Van Ingen, who fired his gun at the trespassing ensigns—too hastily, the magistrate seemed to think. Mr. Van Ingen, sen., however, was praised for the forbearance with which he had acted under very trying circumstances.

ONE of the subjects taken in hand by the new Agricultural Department is the cultivation of Carolina rice. So far as the experiment has yet gone, the American rice appears to be hardier, to ripen earlier, need less moisture, yield a longer straw, and a fuller ear than the native plant. It is also said to improve under cultivation. On the other hand, the straw is coarser, and less liked by cattle, while the grain is harder to thresh out and less palatable in native eyes, an objection which many an old Anglo-Indian will, we think, readily endorse. In this country we might add that Carolina rice costs about twice as much as "Patna rice." Lord Mayo however looks on the experiment with favourable eyes, and it will therefore be continued on a larger and more conclusive scale.

THE Hon. Mr. George Campbell seems like to rival the late Sir Charles Napier in the production of entertaining essays under the guise of official minutes. If the objects of his criticism wince under the lash applied to their shortcomings, he succeeds at any rate in amusing the general public. In his recent Minute on the Income Tax returns for 1869-70 he points out that 58 ministers of religion, 17 legal practitioners, and not one medical man, have owned to incomes above Rs. 10,000 a-year. This, he observes, "would make it appear that religion is much more lucrative than law" a fact which "even the greater rigidity of conscience that may be assumed in the former case" does not sufficiently explain. "Medicine as a lucrative profession is nowhere." Mr. Campbell invites the Board to throw some light on "these singular results." He next proceeds to satirise the usual modes of assessing income-tax on "mere cultivators," of whom 34,375 were taxed on incomes of Rs. 500 a-year, "thus beating the traders, who number 33,308." Whereas farmers in England are assessed at five to ten rupees an acre, he finds that Indian farmers are charged from five to twenty rupees per beegah. "It is strange indeed," he adds, "if an Indian farmer makes more by the land than an English farmer." He is therefore not surprised to find from the Board's Report of July 1870, "that the income-tax falls with the greatest severity on the class of ryots and agriculturists; that it is among this class that the greatest discontent is felt in connection with this mode of taxation; that among them more than others a strong and bitter feeling has been excited by the tax," and that some of them have even threatened to migrate to Nepal. It is evident therefore that even the official mind in Bengal had become alive to the oppressive working of the income-tax in the case of ryots assessed on imaginary incomes of Rs. 500 a-year. Mr. Campbell for his part fails to see how "holders of ten or twenty acres can approach an income of Rs. 500 per annum," and in spite of the taxable level being raised this year to Rs. 750, he still asks for some radical change in the mode of assessing the small cultivators. He would "be sorry to think" that, because the sources of their income are visible, they are "made to pay more than traders and others whose sources of income are not visible, and who can prove or disprove anything by their books."

IN the face of these pregnant criticisms we can only wonder at those lighthearted gentlemen who ignored the prevalence of popular discontent in India by burying their heads deep in the sands of official make-believe. From the facts just recorded of Bengal we can easily guess at the amount of oppression endured throughout India by the levying of an ill-adjusted tax through a host of native officials, whose zeal and unscrupulousness would alike press cruelly hard on their own countrymen. Of this part of Mr. Campbell's paper the drift is plain enough, whatever doubts there may be as to Mr. Campbell's views regarding the general principle of an income-tax. To our thinking indeed his very hits at the traders who make false returns of income tend to strengthen the arguments of those who oppose the tax on the score of the great injustice that seems inseparable from all attempts to work it.

WITH regard to the alleged absence of medical incomes above Rs. 10,000 a-year, Mr. Campbell's accuracy is disputed by the Englishman, which declares his statement to be "simply contrary to fact." In one case it knows for certain that the higher income was returned and assessed, and it has reason to believe in the existence of many more such cases. Mr. Campbell's attack on "traders" must also be taken with some reserve, for the Friend of India quotes more than one case of overcharge on commercial incomes, and similar instances have from time to time been adduced in the pages of other Anglo-Indian journals.

The new Warrant of Precedence appears to have displeased and disappointed a good many of our countrymen in India. District judges have been left out altogether. The Recorders of Maulmain and Rangoon are lifted into the First Class, above the Judicial Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces, who wield the powers of a local High Court. While the other members of the Executive Council rank apart above the First Class, the Law Member of Council is placed at the bottom of that class. The Inspector-General of Police and the Inspector-General of Jails occupy different classes. A Commissioner of Division—says the Englishman—will in his own division take precedence of a member of the Revenue Board, and the Lord Mayor of Calcutta is placed on a level with a magistrate-collector, below the Director of Public Instruction, the Chief Sanitary Commission, and the Registrar-General. The same journal complains with seeming justice that the Warrant recognises only official rank, ignoring members of liberal professions and persons holding academical degrees.

A CALCUTTA telegram of September 19 declares that stern justice has been dealt out to the Punjab murderers. One of them, Bishen Singh, who murdered a judge of the Small Cause Court at Lahore, has already been executed. He is described as an educated man, but of the same caste as the other murderers. According to the same telegram, news from Kabul had been received to the 4th September. At that time it appears that Yakoob's partisans were flocking in all haste to Herat in order to avert the danger of its falling into hostile hands—said hands, if we mistake not, being those of Yakoob's father, Shere Ali, who wants to make sure of that important stronghold by placing it in charge of his own troops. To such a move the original garrison had shown their strong repugnance by threatening to hand the fortress over to the Ameer's nephew and enemy, Abdurrahman Khan. The telegram is obscure even for a telegram, but the only meaning we can extract from it is that Yakoob's adherents will continue to hold Herat in Yakoob's name.

THE latest telegrams from Calcutta report the gradual subsidence of the floods in Bengal. Much damage however has been done in many ways, whole districts being still under water, and the crops upon them being entirely destroyed. The North-West, on the other hand, which earlier accounts had described as suffering from the heavy rains, is now declared to be suffering from drought.

THE telegraph last week brought us the startling news of a murder committed on the Acting Chief Justice of the High Court at Calcutta. It appears that Mr. Justice Norman was entering his Court on the 20th of this month when a Mohammedan fell upon him with a long Ghoorka knife and stabbed him in the stomach and in the left shoulder. He fell under the double blow, but got up again, ran a little way after the assassin, and even had strength enough to fling a brick at him. The murderer was soon caught, and Mr. Norman was carried to a house near the Court, where he died early the next morning in his wife's presence. The murderer on examination made no defence, but talked wildly like a madman. According to the Times telegram his madness appeared to be feigned. He is described as "a wild, ignorant man, evidently an adept at murder." Be that as it may, we are told that either wound would have caused death, one of the stabs piercing from belly to spine. His victim was buried on the day of his death, according to Indian custom, amidst general demonstrations of regret. The funeral, which took place at the public cost, is said to have been "more impressive than any ever remembered" at Calcutta. At first it was supposed that no political motives had aught to do with the murder, which, according to popular report, had been done out of sheer revenge for an adverse judgment issued by Mr. Norman in a private suit. Still later news however indicates a growing belief in the direct connection between his untimely end and that Wahabi movement to which the Patna trials have just offered one more check. It is now widely asserted that the murderer himself is a Wahabi, one of those Mohammedan fanatics whose plottings have twice in a few years involved us in a frontier war. We are told that on the night of the murder a great many Mohammedans of the murderer's class left Calcutta to go up country, and that several arrests have since been made. It appears that the assassin himself is a Punjabi, which, coupled with the description of him already quoted, may mean that he belongs to one of those Pathan tribes which, some twenty years ago, furnished the murderer of Colonel Mackeson. If so, there is no need to connect him with the Wahabi plotters; his Pathan origin being quite enough to account for the savage onslaught, and for the thorough way in which he carried out his cruel purpose. There is much, no doubt, in the known character of Indian Mohammedans, in the growth of Mohammedan conquest in parts of Central Asia, and in the seeming revival of Moslem fanaticism in Upper India, to make Anglo-Indian statesmen look out for suspicious signs of the times. But in default of further evidence we are inclined to think that the first thoughts of the Calcutta people on this sad event were juster than their second.

ON the day of the funeral of the murdered Judge every place of business was closed, every native housetop crowded, and every road to the cemetery lined with people. The feeling of grief and sympathy is described as "intense." The late Judge had earned for himself a wide repute for uprightness, sound judgment, courteous manners, and many private virtues. A letter in the Times informs us that Mr. Norman was the son of a Somersetshire banker, that he was called to the Bar in 1849 or 1850, and about ten years afterwards became a reporter for the Court of Exchequer. In 1861 he was offered for the second or third time a judgeship in the High Court of Calcutta, which he "accepted with some hesitation," having an excellent prospect before him in England. The same writer pays a loving tribute to the private and professional worth of "a man born to be loved," whom he had known intimately for thirty years past.

Another judge of the Calcutta High Court has lately died. Mr. Justice Unookool Chunder Mookerjee, who had not long been raised to the Supreme Bench, was suddenly seized with paralysis, which carried him off on the 24th August. According to the Englishman he was "a man of sound legal acquirements and solid ability," set off by a character "singularly unpretentious and modest," a genial manner, and "the kindest of hearts." His place, according to the same authority, will most likely not be filled up, so long at any rate as the remaining judges are equal to the business which may come before them. It is fortunate that Calcutta can get on so well with a reduced allowance of judges. At Bombay and Madras, if all accounts are true, the want of another judge or two is severely felt at the present time.

The recent death of Captain J. P. Basevi, of the Royal Bengal Engineers, has called forth a sympathetic review of his past career from the pen of Colonel Walker, Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India, in which Captain Basevi had long borne a conspicuous part. The son of the well-known architect, he left Addiscombe in December, 1851, as head of his term, with the first prize for mathematics, the good conduct sword, and the Pollock medal. Appointed in 1856 to the Trigonometrical Survey, he soon gave evidence of special fitness for the work. In 1860 he took part in a military reconnaissance of the country of the Masud Waziris on the Trans-Indus frontier. Two years later he explored single-handed the wild mountain tracts and forests of Jeypore and Bustar, eastward of Vizagapatam—a region full of malaria and very thinly peopled. But the work by which he will be chiefly remembered, and to the completion of which he fairly sacrificed his life, was the course of observations, made with the pendulum, in order to ascertain the varying force of gravity at the different stations of the Trigonometrical Survey. In 1864 Basevi entered on this trying work with the spirit of a true enthusiast. For ten hours a-day he never left his pendulums save for a few minutes at a time. Every hour and a half he took his observations, and two hours of the night were generally devoted to determining the time by watching the stars. For at least twelve days together would this strain upon his energies be kept up; often for weeks together in a room specially heated 40 or 50 degrees above the temperature outside—a room in which very few of his visitors cared to stay more than a few minutes at a time. His labours went to show a gradual decrease of the earth's density towards the Himalayas and a corresponding increase towards the coast and out in the middle of the sea. At Cape Comorin for instance the gravity was less than upon an island 250 miles off in the same latitude. To complete these important researches Captain Basevi early in the present year set off with his pendulums for the lofty table lands beyond Kashmere. At Moreh in the Kiangchu table-land, 80 miles south of Leh, he renewed his labours in June at a height of 15,500 feet. From thence he went northward to the Changchenmo Valley, setting to work at a height of at least 16,000 feet above the sea. But the hand of death was already upon him, in the midst of those wild solitudes and that highly rarefied air. His one European helpmate he had sent back, and only native faces were around him, when on the 16th July he complained of a bad cough and pains in his chest. The bad weather he had encountered on his way from Kashmere and the tremendous changes of temperature in a few hours—from below zero to 70 or 80 degrees—may have told upon a frame weakened by previous trials. On the 17th at any rate he died in the midst of dressing; the blood that oozed from his mouth and ears betokening the immediate cause of his untimely end.

Colonel Walker concludes his kindly retrospect with a few lines which demand quoting at full length. "With the devotion of a soldier on the battlefield, he has fallen a martyr to his love of science and his earnest efforts to complete the work he had to do; in a hard struggle with the physical difficulties which he had to encounter . . . . he succumbed at the moment the prize was almost within his reach and his work all but completed, and he was looking forward to a speedy return to England and to his wife and children."

The next Overland Mail is due in London on Saturday, September 30.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, September 26, 1871.

RAILWAY ROUTES TO INDIA.

Now that the question of a direct railway route to India has been formally opened by a Parliamentary Committee, we may assume that its further discussion will lead to some kind of practical issue, in favour of this or that project for developing the good already gained by each new success in bringing India nearer to England. In spite of all that has been done in that direction since Waghorn proved the possibility of linking the two countries by a road through Egypt, English enterprise declines to content itself with accomplished facts. The dream of a time when a traveller starting from London may reach Kurrachee in something less than a week has long been cherished by sanguine brains, and the very progress made in the last thirty years towards such a consummation adds a fresh spur to the efforts of those who would convert the dream into a reality. Lord Russell's advice to "rest and be thankful" sounds absurd to people who cannot rest satisfied with a present advantage so long as they see their way to something better in the distance. We have got the Suez Canal, they argue, and the Egyptian railway, with a weekly Overland Mail that does the journey in about three weeks. What is to prevent our saving a week of time by carrying a railway from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf? Better still, would it not be possible to get rid of the water-passage altogether, and so bring India within a week of England?

To these general questions the Select Committee will in due time furnish some kind of answer. Meanwhile, from the evidence already taken, and from what has lately appeared in the papers, we learn something of the various schemes proposed for the end in view. Sir Henry Rawlinson described several routes by which the whole or part of the sea-voyage might be done away. There is, to begin with, Mr. Andrew's project of a railway from Scanderoon down the Euphrates Valley to Bagdad, Basrah, and the head of the Persian Gulf. Such a line would save at least a week on the present route, and leave each end of the railway safely guarded by the neighbourhood of a British fleet. Another route, proposed by Colonel Herbert, would likewise start from Scanderoon, the ancient Alexandretta, but, striking across the Euphrates at Bir, would pass through the wealthier cities and more settled districts bordering the Tigris to Bagdad and Basrah. In development of Mr. Andrew's scheme we have the longer overland route of 1,700 miles, direct from Scutari to Aleppo and thence onwards, as before, along the Euphrates Valley. This is the line recommended by the Turkish Government. Of the Black Sea routes there is one supported by Mr. Childs, which starting from Tereboli, near Trebizond, crosses the mountains to Erzingan in the Euphrates Valley, whence, after a steam voyage down the river, it strikes across to Diarbekir, and again takes steamer down the Tigris. Another scheme would connect Diarbekir with Samsun on the Black Sea. Yet another would start from Trebizond to Erzerum, thence over the mountains, striking the Tigris above Moosul. But to both these last routes there seem to be fatal objections; the Tigris in the one case being navigable only for two or three months in the year, while the "inhospitable Taurus" blocks the way in the other.

Besides these, Sir H. Rawlinson mentioned three projects for linking India with Constantinople. One of these lines would follow the northern road from Constantinople to Erzerum, whence it would cross the Persian frontier, passing eastward by Tabreez to Teheran, Shahrood, and Meshed, and then taking a southerly course through Herat, Kandahar, and the Bolan Pass to Shikarpoor and Sukkur in Sindh. This line would be about three thousand miles long, or rather less than the distance from New York to Sacramento. The second line would follow the telegraph route through Asia Minor, passing by Diarbekir and Moosul to the Persian frontier, thence through the "Gates of Zagross" to Kermanshah and Teheran. From the last-named point it would follow the ame course as the first line. This route is longer than the other, and would involve some difficult engineering; but it passes through a populous country and seems otherwise preferable to any of the other through routes. The third line we have already in part described, as passing from Scutari by Aleppo down the Euphrates Valley to Bagdad and Basrah. From thence however it would circle round the Persian Gulf to Bushire and Bunder Abbas, and finally reach Kurrachee by way of Mekran. The chief objection to this line is that along the shore of the Persian Gulf there is not one town of any importance except Bushire. Such an objection however need not count for much in any survey of the line taken as a whole. As far at any rate as the Persian Gulf, such a line would have much to recommend it from the commercial point of view. It would tend to develop a steady traffic between the Mediterranean and the chief towns of Mesopotamia, to say nothing of India herself. The greater part of the line moreover would run through Turkish ground, and it is not for Turkey in Asia that we have much reason to be afraid. It is also worth noting that much of this line is identical with Mr. Andrew's scheme for a railway from Scanderoon to the Persian Gulf, a scheme which appears to have found many supporters before the Select Committee. And when we add that this line forms part of the yet larger scheme propounded by Messrs. Low and Thomas for constructing a railway from Mont Cenis direct to Kurrachee, enough, we think, has been said to counterweigh the objections taken by Sir H. Rawlinson.

The idea of the projectors is to carry on the great line of railway which has now been completed as far as the Mont Cenis Tunnel. They would utilise the existing railroads to Trieste, in aid of a line which, passing through European and Asiatic Turkey, might ultimately reach Kurrachee by way of Persia and Belochistan.

The line in question would leave Trieste by way of Fiume, following the eastern shore of the Adriatic to a point nearly opposite Brindisi. Thence striking eastward across Turkey to Constantinople, it would overleap the Bosphorus at Scutari, take a southerly course to Adalia and Scanderoon, and then follow the track of Mr. Andrew's and the Turkish Government's lines by the Euphrates Valley and Beloochistan to Kurrachee. The whole distance from Kurrachee to London would be 5,311 miles by rail and the breadth of the "silver streak" of sea which divides the Continent from Dover. To cover this mileage at an average rate of forty miles an hour by rail would take no more than about five days seventeen hours—let us call it six days. Of the whole length of railway proposed, nearly a fourth is already constructed, and the remainder will probably cost, at the highest estimate, about 41 millions sterling, if the line be made for a guage of 4ft. 8½in. It is satisfactory to learn that the engineering difficulties will not be many or great; and the prospect of a daily mail to India will charm the imagination or soothe the commercial cravings of many readers. The daily through train from London would only stop at such stations as Paris, Turin, Trieste, Salonika, Constantinople, Bagdad, and Bushire; but each country on the way might start a similar train from its own local terminus, so that India would have no reason to complain of scant attention from her foreign customers. The intermediate trains would look after the local traffic; and the Mediterranean trade would find new outlets in the various stations along the seaboard of Asiatic Turkey.

Here at any rate is a tempting scheme for adventurous people, a scheme too which holds out much promise of ultimate success, if only the requisite millions can be obtained. For that purpose the projectors would divide the cost in due proportion between the several nations through whose country the line would pass; Austria for instance guaranteeing about six and a-half millions for her share, Turkey about twenty-two millions, and Persia nearly seven millions. Sindh would be liable for only £184,000; but how are £5,392,000 to be got from Beloochistan? It is further proposed that each nation might have a local company to look after all things needed for the local traffic, while a grand Anglo-Indian Company would undertake the construction and maintenance of the entire permanent way.

That some such scheme will ultimately be adopted we have little doubt. Nearly a fourth of the whole line is already fit for use, and a large section of the remainder, the Euphrates Valley Line, has secured the countenance of many competent judges. Part of that line would no doubt traverse a thinly peopled and unfruitful land, but in other parts there is reason to expect a large development of the local traffic, while in all likelihood a brisk trade would in due time spring up between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. South-Eastern Persia would also be likely to benefit, in times of local scarcity, from the new and improved means of intercourse with neighbouring countries. India in prosperous years might supply her Persian neighbour with surplus grain, and supplement at other times her own defective stores of food through the same channel. Much too might be expected in the way of through traffic between Europe and India. Mr. Burton indeed would prefer Tyre or Sidon to Scanderoon as the starting point of a railway to the Persian Gulf, but that after all is a question of detail, which the Select Committee will hardly fail to consider. What the evidence already before them appears to warrant, is the general expediency of a railway from somewhere on the Mediterranean to some point on the Persian Gulf, as being one more step towards the completion of a direct line of railway from Calais or Ostend to Kurrachee. Would it not be best to decide on taking this step first? Once taken, it would be easy to complete the chain by filling up the gaps between Scanderoon and Constantinople at one end, and the Persian Gulf and Kurrachee at the other.

THE SALT-TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In my last I omitted to allude to the enormous cost of conveying salt to districts where it is the chief ingredient of the soil, but which soil under the Revenue laws may not be used for any purpose of consumption.

In April 1858, when Sir Hope Grant's force entered Baiswara, for the purpose of causing the submission of the Rajpoot chieftains and their clansmen, we were surprised to find at Patun Behar hundreds of acres white with pure salt. These were the celebrated saltpans which supplied cheap salt to the country around. For many months the Government tried to impose an excise on the manufacture of this salt, but the smuggling was so great as to make necessary a prohibition to manufacture throughout the province. Since that time not only the people of Oudh, but also thousands within the Nepalese territory, have had to buy salt brought all the way from Rajpootana. Fortunately railroads have mitigated the evil effects which were being produced; salt merchants can no longer run up the price of salt during the rainy season (when salt is greatly required for man and beast) on the common excuse that the rain has been spoiling their supplies of salt. In two days abundant supplies, protected from the rain, can now be conveyed from Agra to Lucknow.

Many of your readers may be surprised to hear that quantities of Cheshire salt are consumed in the provinces of Behar and Benares. At first it was supposed that the Droitwich merchants could not compete with the Bengal Government monopoly, but as soon as the vexatious difficulties attending the bonding of salt in Calcutta were removed, pure Cheshire salt was poured into India, and not only successfully competed with the salt manufactured in Bengal, but penetrated more than 400 miles up country. But still the expense of conveying it to Liverpool, of conveying it round the Cape 14,000 miles, and up country to Ghazeepoor is considerable, and I believe the following estimate is not exaggerated:—

Cost of salt at the place of manufacture ...	1	0	a maund
Government tax	6	6	a maund
Cost of carriage, merchants' profits, &c., to the Baraitch and Goruckpore Divisions (a little less to other parts of Oudh, North-West Provinces, and Behar)...	3	6	a maund
Common salt	11	0	a maund.

Pure rock salt is much more expensive, sometimes costing 18s. a maund.

If there be any mistake in this calculation I beg that it may be corrected.

We thus have the Revenue Laws responsible for making the price of salt more than six times as expensive as it naturally would be, notwithstanding that the wages of the common agricultural labourer are only one-tenth of agricultural wages in England.

Tobacco to this day remains untaxed, although it is a luxury and not a necessary of life. It is almost universally consumed, and is very cheap. A wise tax on tobacco, with a little economy in abstaining from building useless barracks, would enable Government to reduce the salt-tax very considerably, and would enable our Liverpool merchants to export twice as much salt to Calcutta to supply an increased demand.

What would be thought in this country if Mr. Lowe were to rise in his place next year and propose an income-tax of less than one per cent. on the rich, fifteen per cent. on the poor, and twenty per cent. on the very poor? I think that it is De Tocqueville who has shown that the French Revolution was effected by the desire of the rich to tax the poor; and that a Revolution in England was prevented by the desire of the rich to tax themselves for the purpose of releasing the poor from their burdens. This latter wise policy, which is identified with the name of Sir Robert Peel, is still the chief support of the British Constitution, and it is strange that enlightened England should permit in India an indirect income-tax, which presses on the poor with crushing severity. How long will such a tax, a melancholy monument of financial imbecility, be permitted to exist?

Next year will be the centenary of the salt monopoly farming in 1772 by the Bengal Government. Cannot it be commemorated by a health-restoring feast of salt?—Your obedient servant, T.

THE BRAHMO MARRIAGE BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In your comments last week upon the Brahmo Marriage Bill you observed that, "It is evident that the provisions of the Bill must be modified, so as to ensure the older Brahmos perfect freedom to marry in their own way; and the title and preamble of the Bill must be so altered as to leave them no fair ground for complaint."

If you examine the Bill you will find that it does not in any respect interfere with the freedom of the older Brahmos to marry in their own way. The preamble states:—"Whereas it is expedient to legalise marriages between the members of the sect called the Brahmo Somaj when solemnised according to the provisions of this Act," &c., thus leaving the question entirely open whether marriages between Brahmos solemnised in other ways require legalisation or not. Clearly the word "when," as used here, does not mean when only, but is to be construed in the sense of even when. It can never be supposed that this Act is intended to invalidate those numerous marriages, for instance, which have been celebrated between Brahmos according to the orthodox Hindu rites. The Bill is purely permissive, and applies only to those who act under it. Sect. 9, for instance, declares bigamy penal, not in Brahmos as such, but only in those Brahmos who have been once married under this Act. Sect. 2 declares every marriage between Brahmos to be valid which is solemnised according to the subsequent provisions, but there is not a word throughout the Bill which asserts any other kind of Brahmo marriage to be invalid. If, therefore, the marriages celebrated according to Babu D. N. Tagore's ritual are valid under the Hindu law, as is contended by the Adi Somaj, they will not cease to be so on the passing of this Act.

As to the grievance of the title, it is surely as puerile for the older body to complain that the name of Brahmo is incorporated in a public measure for the relief of the younger body, as it would be for Roman Catholics to complain that Protestants are habitually reckoned as Christians. "People will be apt to confound the Adi Somaj Brahmos [they say in their recent statement] with those of the so-called Somaj of India, and mistake the future proceedings with respect to marriage of the one party for those of the other, who have adopted a form of marriage revolting to the feelings of the Hindu community." There is no fear of this. When we hear that among the Brahmos, girls, are married at the mature ages of fourteen, sixteen, or even eighteen, that widows are allowed to remarry, and that members of different castes and races are joined in harmonious wedlock, we shall be quite sure that these proceedings do not take place among the Adi Brahmos, who are known to oppose them all, but among the members of "the so-called Somaj of India."—Yours faithfully, C.

[Is it fair however to give the Bill a misleading title? If a Bill in England were drawn up for the special benefit of the Free Kirk party, would it be right to call it a Bill for the benefit of the Presbyterians?—Ed. A. I. M.]

Notices of Books.

Peeps at the Far East. By Norman Macleod, D.D. Strahan and Co. 1871.

A great many books—good, bad, and indifferent—have been written about India; but we can think of none so thoroughly attractive as Dr. Macleod's unpretending "Peeps"—unpretending, that is, with reference to the title and the author's style; for the volume, as got up by the publisher, wants no charm of type, cuts, or binding to make it fit for any drawing-room table. But the highest charm after all lies in the writing, at once lively, graceful, picturesque, genial, and full of varied meaning. The Doctor has a peculiarly winsome way of carrying the reader along with him from the first page to the last. He writes with the frank simplicity of Boswell himself, but with more than Boswell's literary power, and with a manly kindliness all his own. Le style, cest de l'homme, and the portrait which Dr. Macleod unwittingly paints for us is very pleasant to behold. His very weaknesses, of which he has a few, appeal to our respectful sympathies. When he admits for instance that intelligent Parsees may worship fire only as a symbol, he cannot help ascribing their purer notions to the indirect influence of Christianity rather than the teaching of their own religious guides. The pretty little moral excuses with which he prefaces an account of the way he spent his second evening at Bombay in looking at the tricks of native jugglers may provoke a smile from some at least of his unclerical readers. But the book, as a whole, is eminently readable; and few even of those who know something of India will agree, we think, with the critic in the Athenæum, who damns it "as a faint and feeble repetition of many preceding works, with little or nothing that is novel and striking." To us the wonder is that an author whose brief visit to India was cut still shorter by "the doctor's orders" should have turned his scant opportunities to such excellent account. Dr. Macleod has worked up his materials in a way that gives a touch of freshness to the tritest passages of his book. His skill in describing what he actually saw or heard is equalled by his power of reproducing the results of his own reading or of other men's researches into Indian subjects. He is not the first by many who has written about caste in India; but nowhere else shall we find that well-worn but curiously perplexing subject handled on the whole with so much clearness, comprehensive insight, and illustrative power. Perhaps the Doctor has exaggerated the obstructive force of caste-rules in the present day, nor was he likely to regard the system with an eye so favourable as Mr. Elliot, the Mysore planter, whose volumes we hope to notice erelong. But seeing how little we really know about caste, its workings, and the changes it has continually undergone, we may be thankful to Dr. Macleod for his effective and generally truthful picture of caste as it appeared to his eyes.

In describing scenes and incidents Dr. Macleod has a happy knack of filling in his outlines with just enough and not too much detail. Except when he brings in a moral tag or two, he never dwells too long on the matter in hand. His sketches are touched in with a light but clear and skilful pen. After all that has been written about the Taj, Calcutta, or Delhi, the reader can hardly fail to extract new enjoyment from the descriptions given of them in these pages, aided as they are by excellent illustrations taken mostly from good photographs. Bombay too is capitally described, and bits of Indian history are wrought in here and there with masterly effect. Dr. Macleod seems fairly accurate in his sketches of historical scenes. But there is a little error in his account of Hodson's daring seizure of the Delhi princes at Humayoon's Tomb, which he will do well to correct in his next edition, along with the inevitable blunder about the "Jumna Musjid." It is not the Jumna but the Jama (or Jumma) Musjid; and the name of the officer who accompanied Hodson on that perilous journey was not Macdonald, but Macdowell, of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, then Second in Command of Hodson's Horse, afterwards mortally wounded on the march to Lucknow.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE RESULTS OF AMALGAMATION.

The Times of India remarks that Sir Charles Wood, though shrewd enough in most matters, was ignorant in regard to Indian army organisation. But Indian officers had not that excuse. They could foresee, though the Minister could not, that chaos, discontent, and wasteful expenditure would inevitably follow the disruption of the old system; and though warned and entreated in these columns, and those of several other journals, they rushed on to seize the surface advantages offered. In thus taking the Secretary of State at his word, they have sorely embarrassed both that high functionary and the Indian finances. Some may say "what were we to do?" The reply is obvious—"stand fast." Had that very simple strategy been adopted seven and ten years ago, how different would have been the position of Indian army affairs, both military and financial! There would have been a national grandeur about such a united act of self-denial; and the relief to every one now would have been immense, if all, or nine-tenths of the officers of only the Bombay army had acted up to their lights and declined the option of entering the Staff Corps. Sir Charles Wood might have stormed and denounced the officers who thus dared to prove themselves more loyal to the constitution than he was. He would have been sorely disappointed at being prevented from carrying out what will henceforth be remembered as the great fiasco of his career. But how grateful would Lord Halifax now feel, if he had thus been baulked by men standing firm on their constitutional rights and true to the traditions of their service. Then, too, had this example been followed in the other presidencies, the panic of the "white mutiny" would have been allayed, and a properly qualified and acclimatised Indian Local Army could have been developed in natural order from the Bombay nucleus. Though, perhaps, the officers would have been drawing somewhat less pay one with another, there would have been fewer extreme disparities; men would not have been divorced from their regiment, as now; and we should have had, what seems now impossible of attainment, a harmonised and contented military service, while the State would have been spared the terrible penalty, gradually pressing down upon us, of twenty million sterling for "non-effective" charges.

THE FALL IN THE VALUE OF SILVER.

The Englishman would point out the great fundamental and constantly intensifying source of financial difficulty in India, and would show that, apart from all merely fiscal questions, the English in India are inevitably in a position in which they must go on indefinitely increasing the public burdens. This, too, independently of the cost of increased efficiency in the administration. Without adding a single Judge, or Magistrate, or Officer of any sort to the Civil List, without undertaking a single one of the rural public works which a tropical country so urgently requires, without allowing a rupee for an additional soldier or for bringing our materiel of war up to the standard of the day, the Indian Government would nevertheless find, at the end of each ten years, the revenue which sufficed at the beginning of the decade altogether insufficient at the close of it. The truth is, that a lakh of rupees in 1850 represented a great deal more than a lakh of rupees in 1860, and a lakh of rupees in 1860 represented a great deal more than it did in 1870. Silver has lost its purchasing power to a degree that even careful observers do not appreciate, and which, without being able to produce irrefragable evidence, no one would venture to assert. The process has been going on ever since European trade began in the sixteenth century to pour its annual influx of silver into India. In the first place, we propose to examine the value of this metal at distant periods, and then to conclude our review by a few facts touching the history of prices during the past twenty years. The value of silver may be estimated either in gold, or in cowries, where these form the popular currency, or in the staple food of the country. From the gold and silver coins of Jalal-ud-din and Ala-ud-din in the thirteenth century, numismatists have established that the value of the two metals was ten of silver to one of gold. This rate continued with fluctuations till the time of Akbar, when it was officially fixed by the Mint officers at 9·4 of silver to one of gold; and when the East India Company made its first voyage in 1601-1610, the supercargoes found that the practical market value was exactly ten to one. This is the rate which the Rev. Samuel Purchas, the historiographer to the company, has recorded in his collection of its voyages published in 1625. As the Dutch, English, and Portuguese companies continued to send their yearly freights of silver to the East, the value of that metal gradually fell. A hundred years afterwards the rate accepted in mercantile calculations in Bengal was 14 of silver to 1 of gold, and in the middle of the eighteenth century even this was found to be too high. In 1766 the Indian authorities in fixing the exchange estimated it at 1 of pure gold to as near as may be 16 of pure silver. This, however, was on the other hand too high, and three years later they reduced the rate to 1 of gold to 14·8 of silver. This seems to have erred on the opposite side, and Sir James Steuart, in a little work written for the Company in 1772, severely criticised both the valuations. It became an accepted fact that the true rate was 1 of gold to 15 of silver, and this is the proportion which Adam Smith gave in 1784 as the one which practically obtained in Bengal. In the course of 250 years, therefore, the value of silver as expressed in gold had fallen fifty per cent. in India. This phenomenon was the more striking from the fact that in the Asiatic countries which had not been affected by the enormous importation of silver from Europe the ratio of the two metals remained almost stationary. When estimated in the staple food of the country, the decrease in the purchasing power of silver becomes still more marked. For it must not be lost sight of that gold had also fallen in value upon the opening of the European trade, and that the decrease in the ratio of the two metals does not, therefore, express the whole fall in the value of silver. In Northern India the Emperors from time to time officially promulgated the retail price of food, barley being the cheap staple of the country. Under Ala-ud-din (1303-1315) the rate thus authoritatively fixed for barley was 4 jitals per man of 28.8 lbs. avoirdupois, or a little under 6d. per hundredweight. The official rate remained the same in the tariffs of Firuz Shah (1351-1388). But no sooner did the tide of European trade set in than the purchasing power of silver fell, and barley under Akbar (1556-1605) rose to 9¼d. per hundredweight. The price has gone on steadily rising since then, till in the same localities to which these official tariffs applied, a fair and rather cheap average rate for barley is considered 3s. 6d. per hundredweight. Within five centuries, therefore, the purchasing power of silver, as estimated in the cheap food grain of Upper India, has fallen to one-seventh. That is to say, a labourer with a rupee of wage per mensem in the fourteenth century could buy as much barley for his family as a labourer earning seven rupees a month can now.

THE NEW WEIGHTS AND MEASURES BILL.

The Englishman understands it is proposed to re-enact the Bill so far as it applies to weights and measures of capacity. The Governor-General, we observe, entirely disavows any intention on the part of the Legislature to force the new weights and measures on the people, but hopes that the Bill "will practically lay the foundation of a system of uniform weights and measures throughout the Empire," and "will be found to arm companies, municipalities, and other bodies with adequate powers to facilitate the gradual and permissive adoption" of the new system. As it is extremely unlikely that any permissive measure will result in the adoption of the system before the people of the country themselves desire it, we may safely predict that the Bill will prove a dead letter as far as the general population of the country is concerned. As to railway companies and the like, we are not aware that they want any special powers to enable them to use any system of weights and measures they please; and if the powers to be conferred on them are really consistent with the desire expressed by the Governor-General, that the adoption of the new system should be purely permissive, we do not see that either they or the public can gain or lose anything by them. If, on the other hand, the powers go beyond this, all we can say is that the "Railway Companies, Municipalities and other bodies," who avail themselves of them, will, by doing so, prove sources of inconvenience to the great majority of those who have to deal with them, and in all probability will ultimately find the inconvenience recoil upon themselves. In short, the measure will be either nugatory or mischievous. The community at large do not wish for any change in the systems with which they are familiar, for those systems are specially convenient to ninety-nine out of a hundred of those using them; while to the hundredth the inconvenience is apparent rather than real, and trifling so far as real.

THE NATIVE ARMY.

The Bombay Gazette observes that any young gentleman, who has first purchased a commission in a line regiment, comes to India and passes an examination in a native language, is at once considered fit for the native service, and, though his object may be—as was common in the days before the mutiny—to merely make duty with a native regiment a stepping-stone to civil employment, he is accepted at once, and thrown as an additional deadweight on an army already over-weighted through the senility of its officers. Probably a worse system of recruiting than this could not be discovered. The system has become a mere private speculation for Anglo-Indian fathers with sons to provide for. The former buy young Hopeful a commission in the army, and cram the perhaps weakly Indian-born youth with Hindostani; then they pop him into the Staff Corps, receive the value of his commission, and play the same game over again, to the detriment of the public service, with Hopeful number two. And Hopeful himself, what is to be said of him? He enters a native regiment fresh from a British corps, and is at once disgusted with the change. No camaraderie welcomes him in his new corps. He finds the few officers in it probably all married men, and not improbably at daggers drawn with each other. His colonel is, perhaps, an old gentleman in a green old age, full of crabbed and antiquated fancies and crotchets, and not cognisant of anything passing beyond the limited area of his own little military Peddlington; the change is a bad one, and teases him into that frame of mind when he will think of native regiments as Pandemoniums on earth, and strive his best with such "interest" as is at his command to get out of them as quickly as possible. Perhaps he is right. We can hardly imagine a worse training school for service with a native corps than a British regiment may be, with its fine mess, esprit de corps, and contemptuous estimation of "black foot;" but the Native Army suffers none the less that its young English officers should be disgusted with its service at the off-set. That such is the case, however, we fancy there will be few found bold enough to gainsay; and yet these are the officers upon whom the Native Army will be dependent for efficiency in the future! The consideration again causes us to inquire—Will that army ever be vouchsafed a future? Positively the question seems rather problematical. Men cannot live for ever, and the commanding and wing officers of native corps are not uncommonly men approaching the bounds of life's tether; their juniors (?), too, are greyheaded not unfrequently, although their years be disguised under the official and euphuistic title of "wing subaltern;" and when the latter fill their places, and themselves pass away to that bourne, England, from which pensioners ne'er return, what is to become of the Native Army, officerless and uncared-for? Like some great avalanche set in motion—slowly progressing towards Avernus at first, but gaining impetus as it proceeds—it will probably, unless checked in time, get out of control altogether, and at last take the fatal plunge that will leave nought for a Government to do but to pick up its pieces.

UNFAIR.—At the present time, when stagnation of promotion in the junior grades of the Ordnance Corps is so frequently a subject of discussion, it may be useful to draw attention to one or two instances of the difference of treatment, not to say injustice, to which the Indian Artillery has been exposed when compared with that of the old Royal Artillery, now distinguished as the Imperial List. An officer of Horse Artillery whose brigade is in India, if invalided to England or taking leave on private affairs, if belonging to the Imperial List, draws Horse Artillery pay at the English rate during his leave in England; but if, on the contrary, he chance to belong to one of the old Indian Artilleries (Cadres), he is cut down to the Foot Artillery rate of pay. Secondly, a subaltern of the Imperial List on completing seven years' service at the higher rate of pay—6s. 10d. per diem—is allowed to draw 1s. a-day more, whether doing active duty at home or on leave from India or elsewhere; but should he unfortunately have belonged to the late Indian services, he may have served all his time in India—often twelve or thirteen years—and been invalided home from the effects of the climate, and yet he is never allowed to draw more than 6s. 10d. a-day. The injustice of these differences, after the "amalgamation" of the two services, is too manifest to require much comment.—Broad Arrow.

Bengal.

OFFICIAL VOLUNTEER CORPS.—The Viceroy has approved generally of the proposed Volunteer Corps to consist of the clerks and other officers of the Secretariat staffs under the Government of India.

LEGISLATIVE.—The Maharajah of Jaipur has been appointed an additional member of the Council of the Governor-General for making laws and regulations, and made the necessary declaration and took his seat on the 15th instant.

LORD MAYO.—It is reported that the Viceroy starts for the plains in the first week of October. We believe this rumour is altogether premature, and that so far as anything has yet been fixed, the contemplated departure of Government from the summer capital is to take place in the latter half of that month.—Englishman.

WIDOW MARRIAGE.—The Benares Akbar states that a rich Mahajun named Seth Thakarsee Devjee, has offered, as encouragement to widow marriage, that all widows of the Brahmin and Bhat, and of his own caste, who wish to marry again and are deterred by the expense, may have pecuniary help on applying to him. This is a sensible and practicable step, and we hope that he will have widows in scores to take advantage of his generosity.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS.—Speaking of confidential reports, the Englishman, we are glad to see, agrees with us that the cases in which they are made vehicles of a commanding officer's spite are "few, and that, as a whole, they are utterly harmless and worthless productions. They place commanding officers in a false position, and the consequence is, as a rule, that the confidential questions are answered favourably." We still hold, however, that the sooner the system is abolished altogether the better.—Pioneer.

A CALAMITY.—Advices from Jhangara, in the Sehwan talooka, state that about forty miles from the first named place, on the hills, a thunderbolt fell on the 22nd inst., after a heavy downpour; the ground was literally cut up in consequence, and the whole of the huts standing there with their inmates were swallowed by the chasms. Such a catastrophe was never known in Sind within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant. It is computed that some fifty or sixty individuals perished on the occasion.—Sindian.

ARAKAN.—The Committee for the Improvement and Advancement of Arakan appear to have obtained but scant satisfaction from the powers that be, in the matter of the proposed railway. The Chief Commissioner alone appears to have thought it worth while even to discuss the question, and courteously as he has done this, his answer contains but small comfort for the projectors. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal would not even grant the representative of the Committee an interview, and the Commissioner of Dacca declined to furnish them with any information. We do not wonder that their Secretary, in reporting the result of his efforts, expresses his opinion that it will require much exertion to move Government in the matter. The Chief Commissioner, however, appears to have held out some hope of the abolition of the capitation tax.—Englishman.

THE STAFF CORPS.—A rumour has reached us that the authorities at home have decided on throwing open the Staff Corps to the Indian Artillery as well as to the non-purchase corps still in India, i. e., to the officers of the latter corps who formerly belonged to the Indian Army. It is said that a correspondence of a voluminous description, and extending over a length of time, has been going on between the Home and Indian Governments, and that the former has agreed to remove the impediments it has hitherto placed in the way of officers of the old Indian Artillery and the officers of the twelve non-purchase regiments, who formerly belonged to the Indian Army, joining the Staff Corps. If this be true, and our information comes from a source likely to be well informed, the prospects of the present unemployed officers of the Staff Corps will not be improved. There are now in the Staff Corps of the three presidencies about six hundred unemployed officers, and to increase this military destitution by an influx of the Indian Artillery officers appears to us very strange policy indeed. We should have been more inclined to believe that the Home Government would do its best to get rid of the Staff Corps altogether—an institution which is generally allowed now to have been a gigantic blunder—an opinion which few military men who have studied the question will deny, except perhaps its clever originator, General Norman, and those who, like himself, benefited so largely by it.—Englishman.

THE ALLEGED OUTRAGE AT JHEEND.—Regarding the reported illegal detention of a British subject by the Rajah of Jheend, the Mofussilite explains that Mr. Davis was not an Englishman, but either a Christianised native or a Eurasian, and that he had given real offence to the Rajah. It appears that his Highness, having heard the bagpipes of a Highland regiment during the late durbar which was given to the Amir of Cabul, was greatly delighted "at the sonorous and melodious sounds," and shortly after negotiated with a piper named M'Gregor to enter his service. Mr. Davis wrote a letter to M'Gregor advising him not to do so. Nevertheless the piper came to judge for himself, and was surprised at the kindness of his treatment. Thereupon he told the Baboo that Mr. Davis had written to him and advised him not to enter the Rajah's service, as he would be badly fed, badly housed, and badly paid, confirming what he said by producing Mr. Davis's letter. and handing it to the Baboo for his perusal. The Baboo showed the letter to his Highness. Mr. Davis was then sent for, and confessed that he was the writer of the letter; and his motive for doing so was simply to deter Mr. M'Gregor from entering his Highness's service, as he was afraid lest his own services might be dispensed with. The Rajah on hearing this ordered a guard to be placed over Mr. Davis and his property, which was simply to impress on his mind that he was not worthy of the confidence which his Highness had reposed in him. The Rajah has since ordered Mr. Davis to be released, and his property to be restored to him.

THE FLOODS.—The Ganges, we observe, is still steadily rising, and there is every prospect that the railway line in the neighbourhood of Sahibgunge will soon be submerged. A special telegram received late on Monday evening from Umballa states that the railway beyond Saharunpore is completely interrupted, and will, in all probability, continue so till October next. The river Jumna, at Delhi, has, we learn, gone down to near its usual level, and no damage has been done by the rise, except a few mud villages melted away. It has been the highest flood, however, in remembrance.—Englishman, Aug. 23. The pontoon bridge at Muttra, only lately constructed, broke away on the morning of the 14th inst. Several natives who were crossing at the time and others who had been placed there to "watch" the struggles of the bridge gear against the furious current, were carried away on the runaway portions of the bridge. We believe no lives have been lost. The present high flood on the Ganges is, of course, making its mark on Chunar, where the country is peculiarly liable to encroachments from the river. The parade ground is under water, as also is much of the lower end of the cantonments. All the military buildings are as yet out of reach of the flood, but everything is ready for a general stampede to the fort. The Jurgo, a pestilent little river which describes a curb round the back of the city and joins the Ganges about a mile below cantonments, is now shut in by the Ganges just as at Allahabad the Ganges a fortnight ago was shut in by the superior flood of the Jumna, and is doing just what the Ganges here did under the circumstances, viz., flooding the country on both sides. The railway is all safe, the fine bridge over the Jurgo, about half-a mile from the Chunar station, being likely to remain so, let the Jurgo be never so pestilent.—Pioneer, August 23

IMPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Aug. 26.—The past week has been almost a blank as regards transactions in Piece Goods, and quotations have been more or less nominal. At closing, however, we are glad to report a rather better feeling in the market, though, so far, only manifest in an improved demand for Grey Shirtings and 40's Twist.

EXPORTS.—CALCUTTA, Aug. 26.—Jute: The new crop has continued to arrive in large quantities; prices have somewhat hardened for the finer sorts, but for inferior descriptions prices have fallen, say from one to two annas. Saltpetre: There has been very little business done during the week, and prices have a downward tendency. Rice: Owing to reports of damage to the winter crop by floods and too much rain, prices have been rather against the buyers, but quotations can hardly be said to have changed. Linseed has again shown a downward tendency, especially for the best descriptions. Rapeseed: The market has been more active during the week, and prices have advanced fully two annas for Brown. Raw Silk: It is now certain that the rainy bund will be a comparative failure, owing to inundations, but prices have not risen, owing to the small amount of business doing.

POST OFFICE.—We learn from a Madras paper that Colonel A. C. Pears, Postmaster-General, Madras, retires from the service at the end of this year, after holding his office for a period of about eight years, and that it is not at all improbable that Mr. Stuart, Postmaster of Bombay, will be Colonel Pears's successor.

LECTURE BY A HINDOO LADY.—We have been requested to state that Sowbhagiavathy Sree Rungamba Garu, in continuation of her lecture on "Human Being," will deliver another lecture in Telegoo on the 25th instant at the premises of P. Veerapperumal Pillay.—Madras Standard, Aug. 23.

THE WEATHER.—A correspondent at Marcara writes:—I mentioned in my last how heavy the rains were; it is still raining, and it is supposed this is the heaviest monsoon that has been known for years. For the last fourteen days we have scarcely had an hour without rain. A great many bridges between the coffee estates and Mercara have been washed away. The rains are causing a great deal of rot in coffee. Alas for Mercara, the rain is always either too little or too much!—Bangalore Herald, Aug. 19.

BHAMO.—The Political Resident at Bhamo reports unfavourably of the position of the Residency, which is situated on the summit of a low hill with marshy valleys on two sides and dense jungle in every direction except on the river bank, a site, as he had found, greatly conducive to fever. The diary from the end of May till the end of June is a catalogue of murders and dacoities. An attempt had been made by some Mienmaw Shans to induce their countrymen to emigrate to British Burma. The Resident looks upon the arrival as opportune, an unfortunate belief prevailing that the Shan emigrants to British Territory were made slaves.

THE BANGALORE RACE-COURSE AFFRAY.—We learn that Mr. Norris, not satisfied with the decision of the Cantonment magistrate in the late fracas at the Bangalore race course, has entered a civil action in the Commissioner's Court against Colonel Ramsay, laying damages at Rs. 1,000. Mr. Norris, being a gentleman of colour, some of our contemporaries have noticed the circumstance in connection with the inadequacy of the redress obtained by him on his appeal to the criminal tribunal. It is to be hoped he will now have the satisfaction of knowing that in matters of civil right her Majesty's subjects of all classes stand upon the same footing in the eye of the law. It would be better, nevertheless, for all parties if an amicable compromise were effected and the suit withdrawn before the day of hearing.—Madras Times.

A MAN-EATING TIGER.—A man-eating tiger is now causing great alarm to the inhabitants of that portion of the Parembalore Tulaq of the Trichinopoly District which borders on the Torriore Zemindary. It haunts the low hills which divide the Parembalore Taluq from the Torriore country, and every now and then descends into the plains on either side in search of prey. Between the 10th May last and 4th ultimo this animal killed four men. The Parembalore Tahsildar, although aware of the depredations of the tiger, abstained from making any report to the District Magistrate on the subject, and he now explains that he thought he would report the deaths after somebody had killed the tiger. The Superintendent of Police has drawn attention to the terror that the presence of this dangerous animal occasions the ryots of that locality; and in order to induce the native Shikarries to hunt out and kill it, the Government have sanctioned the disbursement of a reward of Rs. 300 on the production of satisfactory proof that the animal has been killed.—Madras Athenæum.

MILITARY ORPHAN ASYLUM.—One of the events of the week at the Presidency has been the departure of the first batch of pupils of the military male orphan asylum to the Lawrence Asylum, Ootacamund, just eighty-three years after the foundation of the local orphanage at Egmore in the year 1788. The district of Egmore has been so long associated with the institution in question—which has done so much good for the bereaved children of the British soldiers, and has turned out from time to time so many worthy men and useful members of society—that the transfer is looked upon with regret by many of the older residents of Madras. The Male Asylum press, we are told, will continue to work as usual under the superintendence of Mr. Thomas, and its profits be devoted, as before, to the benefit of the pupils.—Madras Times.

THE VANINGEN CASE.—We learn by telegram that yesterday afternoon, at the Court of the Cantonment Magistrate, Bangalore, the charges against Edwin VanIngen, senior, George VanIngen, and Charles VanIngen, the first, third, and fourth defendants, were not established, and that they have been discharged from custody; Edwin Charles VanIngen, junior, the second defendant, remains on bail. The decision of the magistrate is reserved.—Madras Mail, Aug. 22. One of the points already decided in the VanIngen case is, that the accused persons are British born subjects; it is consequently possible to discuss Captain Gompertz's treatment of the accused without exciting any race prejudices. We wish we could add that the matter could also be discussed without exciting any class prejudices—but Captain Gompertz has rendered that impossible. Although nothing is definitely known of the cause which originally took Messrs. Lambart and Frere into Mr. VanIngen's compound, a lady is said to be at the bottom of the affair; and it is clear enough that these officers and gentlemen were guilty of criminal trespass. "Had the VanIngens gone," observes the Madras Standard, "to the house of Messrs. Frere and Lambart with the same object that brought those two gentlemen to the defendants', and had the VanIngens been wounded by the Fusilier officers, we make bold to say that the former would have occupied as much the position of defendants as they do now." Startling as this statement may seem at first sight, we are afraid that it is scarcely untrue. We believe that if any intimacy with a female relative of either Mr. Lambart or Mr. Frere had induced one of the VanIngens to trespass by night on the premises occupied by those officers and gentlemen, he would have been regarded as a criminal offender, and that he would have been held responsible under the Penal Code for any evil consequences that may have resulted naturally from the original trespass. We believe this, because it is in conformity with the law of the land, as it is usually enforced in cases in which all the parties stand on the same social footing, and there is no particular sympathy between the judge and either party to the case. To understand the position, we have only to ask how any of us would act if any so-called gentleman intruded into his residence in search of a female relative, and how he would expect the judge to act if he whipped or shot the offender.—Indian Daily News, Aug. 22.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

FOR THE FORTNIGHT ENDING 15TH AUGUST.

DHARWAR COLLECTORATE.—There was very slight rain in almost all the talookas of the collectorate. The rice, jowaree, &c, crops were in middling condition. The sowing operations were retarded for want of rain. The state of public health was reported to be good.

COLABA COLLECTORATE.—The fall of rain had been sufficient, and the crops were in good condition throughout the collectorate, except in talooka Alibag, where, owing to an insufficient fall of rain, the rice crops in salt land were reported to have failed. The appearance of cattle disease was reported in talooka Penn; also fever in the talooka of Mangaon; and fever and an affliction of the eyes in that of Roba. With the above exception the public health was good.

TANNA COLLECTORATE.—The rain-fall had been favourable, excepting along the coast districts of petta Oomergaum, talooka Dhanoo, Mahim, and Bassein, where the fall had been scanty, by which agricultural operations have been impeded. At Bassein crops had suffered slightly for want of rain. In other talookas they were reported in good condition. The state of public health had been generally satisfactory. Fever prevailed slightly in the talookas of Shapoor, Moorbaur, and petta Khalapoor; cholera broke out in the town of Cullian on the 10th inst., and had not subsided. Cattle disease prevailed to a certain extent in talooka Shapoor, Moorbaur, Bnewuay, and petta Khalapoor.

NASSICK COLLECTORATE.—The fall of rain was fairly good in the southern and western talookas, but in the northern and eastern talookas it was very deficient. The state of matters in the Sawurgaum and Nandgaum talookas was very bad, as the fall of rain had not been sufficient to permit of sowing operations being carried on; and in the Malligaum and Baglan talookas matters were even worse, and the fields were all still unsown. Unless rain fall speedily in considerable quantities there would be no chance even of a fair crop. The state of public health was good. Cholera continued to prevail slightly in the talookas of Dindoree, Sinnur and Egutpoora, and a few cases of cattle disease were reported from the Chandoor talooka, Jykherra petta.

Miscellaneous.

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA.—Large quantities of rice have been exported from Bombay to Persia, and at present three ships are being loaded in Bombay harbour. Calcutta is also not backward in forwarding supplies. If a scarcity of food will continue for some time longer in Persia, it appears probable that further large quantities will be shipped from time to time.—Jam-e-Jamshed.

ADEN.—Major-General Tremenheere's news-report from Aden from 10th to 17th August says:—"The only news I can communicate is that the epidemic appears to be abating, but few of the inhabitants have escaped an attack. Supplies from the interior have become much cheaper during the past month, owing to the seasonable rain which has fallen in the hill districts. Shaikh Majabid bin Ali, of the Sharjabee tribe, is now on a visit to Aden."

THE SAUGOR BARRACKS.—We (Pioneer) hear that the whole of the Saugor barracks, as also the artillery stables, have been pronounced unsafe. In consequence of this they have been vacated, some of the men have been put into the old barracks and other Government buildings, and the cavalry have had to give up their hospital. In addition to this it has been found necessary to rent five or six private bungalows for the accommodation of those for whom Government buildings are not forthcoming.

TRAVELLING EXPENSES.—The Government of Bombay having referred to the Supreme Government the claim of an officer to receive travelling expenses on the occasion of his proceeding by rail from Kirkee to Bombay, to take up the command of a brigade, it has been ruled that as the officer aforesaid was proceeding to take up a position having higher emoluments attached to it, he is not entitled to travelling expenses; but that should he be transferred temporarily or otherwise (unless again to one of higher emoluments), he will receive a free passage.

A TRAGEDY AT KUNDOORNA.—We learn from Rajcote, by a letter dated 25th inst., that a great sensation was created at that place by the arrival on that day, in the Agency compound, of two carts freighted with the dead bodies of five men, Grassias of the village Peepundee under his Highness the Jam of Nowanuggur. It appears that these unfortunate men were shot dead, and five others mortally wounded, by order of the Nuggur authorities of village Kundoorna, owing to some disputes regarding boundaries. We are informed that none of these unfortunate men nor any of the villagers of P. epundee were armed, and the fact of the Nuggur people having rushed upon and butchered such a large number of these inoffensive people shows premeditation on their part and a reckless abuse of their powers towards helpless Grassias, who are powerless to resist the encroachments of their chiefs. An investigation into the circumstances connected with this tragedy is going on.—Bombay Gazette.

The Begum of Bhopal.—The Lucknow Times announces that the Begum of Bhopal has married a second husband. The happy man is her prime minister, Mahomed Siddeeck Hussan Khan.

Military Finance.—A committee is now sitting at Simla to make arrangements for the future constitution of the Military Finance Department. Surmises are rife as to whom they will recommend to succeed to the office held by the late Major-General Broome. In the department itself Colonel Atkinson and Major-General Barr are available, and General Frank Turner and Colonel Innes are named as likely outsiders. In the meantime the post is held by Mr. G. W. Kellner, who has already done good service in it. Unless it be decided that the appointment is to be held by a military officer, it is considered in some quarters that the Government could not do better for the public interests than to let Mr. Kellner remain in it. But then it must be remembered that Mr. Kellner is an Uncovenanted officer, and were he to be retained in one of the most important appointments in the Military Administrative Staff, merely because he is admirably fitted for the same, and that the public is likely to be the gainer, it would be a very severe shock to several sensitive minds, military and civilian, who would at once perceive that the country was going to the dogs. The country might, however, go on as usual.—Englishman.

Military.—The Friend of India points out that very considerable progress has been made in five months in supplying improved arms to the army in India. When General Norman presented his Military Budget, on the 24th March last, we had thirty out of fifty British infantry regiments armed in India with the snider ; we now have forty regiments so armed, and the Government has been able to give a supply of sniders to the Calcutta Volunteers. At the same period, there were thirty-one regiments of native infantry armed with Enfields ; there are now fifty-nine regiments so armed. Brigadier-General C. P. Keyes, C.B., commanding Punjab Frontier force, has, we learn from the Pioneer, been summoned to Simla, to take part, it is believed, in the discussion of certain matters relative to our frontier policy. The gallant officer in question, who is popularly credited with possessing an unflinching and war-like policy of his own for keeping the turbulent border tribes in order, will doubtless be prepared to carry out promptly and efficiently any scheme which may be devised for punishing the Wuzzerees and their neighbours. Except in Hazara and at Edwardesabad (Bunnoo), we believe the frontier is at present tolerably quiet. The Government of India have authorised the issue to every infantry regiment, British and native, of fifty picks and fifty shovels for instruction, in accordance with Part V. of the Field Exercise and Evolutions of Infantry. The general court-martial on Lieutenant-Colonel T. R. S. Lowe, Assistant Commissary-General, has not yet commenced its sittings, although that officer has been already over two months under arrest. It would appear that the authorities at Murree are waiting for fresh charges which are being framed at Simla.

The Weather.—Serious apprehensions begin to be awakened by the long continued drought in many parts of the Presidency. A friend at Jaulna writes :—" You will be sorry to hear that we have had very little rain in this part of the country, in many places not even sufficient for sowing purposes. This has already produced great distress amongst the poor people. Of course not a few belonging to my congregation are starving. Surely the Lord has a controversy with us. Ever since the Mutiny year we have had very few good seasons. We have been suffering sometimes from want of rain, as at present, and at other times, as last year, from excess of rain. Thus for two successive years the poor people have been losing their harvests. The cotton mania, so long encouraged in the country, has left very little grain. Already, people have nothing to live upon. I earnestly hope that we shall be preserved from the horrors of famine." Similar accounts come to us from the Ahmednuggur collectorate and from Sholapoor. At the latter place grain was at famine prices, and a relief fund to save the starving had been formed. Were we to have a general fall of rain in the next fortnight it would allow of the sowing of the later crops, such as jhondala, and we venture to recommend to our readers that they should make the coming week a week of special prayer with reference to this matter. In Bombay the fall of rain has been scantier than for twenty-five years, and there is ten feet of water in the Vehar Lake less than there was last year.—Bombay Guardian, Aug. 26. We learn from Cambay, that by the flood on the 2nd inst. about two hundred houses were levelled to the ground. Thousands of tons of fuel and much timber, with hundreds of drowned oxen, horses, camels, and other animals, were brought on shore. Many human bodies were also seen. It would seem from this that an entire village must have been carried away by the floods.—Guzerat Mitra.

Imports.—Bombay, Aug. 29.—A very small business has again been done in Piece Goods during the week, but the prices of some kinds of Grey Goods show a slight improvement, which may be taken as an indication of the existence of a better feeling. The demand for local consumption is extremely limited. In Grey and Coloured Yarns, also, a very small business has been done, and prices are somewhat lower, though the prices of Turkey Red are maintained. Metals firm, and a further advance of 4 to 8 annas has taken place in the prices of some descriptions.

Exports.—Bombay, Aug. 29.—Cotton : Owing to the receipt of unfavourable advices from America respecting the new crop, prices here have advanced Rs. 3 to 5 per candy ; but in other respects our market has not been affected by the advance at home, for, though more business has been done, the larger portion of it was done before the telegrams announcing the improvement came to hand. The purchases made in the week for export amount to about 4,600 bales, of which the principal were 400 bales of Dholleru, at Rs. 211 to 217 per candy ; 1,600 bales Dharwar Sawginned, at Rs. 208 to 215 ; 600 bales Broach, at Rs. 191 to 192, without selection ; and 860 bales Barsee, at Rs. 208 to 221 per candy. The market closes quiet, but steady.

Government Paper.—Bombay, Aug. 29.—We have again to report a large business done this week (about 25 lacs having changed hands), and, except for Fives, rates close steady.

Exchange.—Bombay, Aug. 29.—A very moderate business has been done this week, and rates close weak. The dull state of our import market, and the consequent absence of any demand for bank paper, continue. The high premium at which exchange in China is now ruling, is producing its natural effect here, and house bills can hardly be placed at the reduced rate of Rs. 219 per 100 dollars, 60 days' sight.

Money.—Bombay, Aug. 29.—The Bank's rates still stand nominally at 5 per cent. per annum for loans on Government Securities, and at 8 per cent. on mercantile bills, but loans on security are readily obtainable at lower rates. The money market is in the same easy state ; but the bank's balances are small, so that—with any activity arising in our export trade—a marked increase might any day take place in the value of money and the rates of exchange.

Shares.—Bombay, Aug. 29.—More business has been done this week, and the prices of several descriptions have improved. Land Companies' Shares have been in better request. Bank Shares are quieter. Spinning Companies's Shares remain firm, but there is less inquiry.

Medical Fees.

July 26.—The following order, received from the Government of India, in the home department, is published for general information :—

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, No. 1,652, under date Simla, June 30, 1871.

Read again—Financial Resolution of July 26, 1869, No. 2,208, ruling that when a medical officer other than a civil surgeon or officer in medical charge of the civil station is summoned to give evidence in a criminal court, touching the result of a post-mortem or other examination conducted by him in cases not falling within the ordinary discharge of his duties, he should receive a fee of Rs. 16, in addition to the usual expenses payable to witnesses.

Read—An office memorandum from the home department, No. 973, dated June 13, forwarding, for consideration and orders, an application from the Government of Bombay for sanction to an order issued by that Government "that in any exceptional case in which (in the presidency town of Bombay) it might be requisite to employ a medical witness not being the coroner's surgeon, a fee of Rs. 12 should be paid for evidence, and of Rs. 25 for a post-mortem examination ;" and remarking that if the charge for the witness in the present case, who is a substitute for an officer paid from provincial services, be not debited in the usual way to law and justice, the question seems clearly one for the local government to decide under the new financial system.

Read—An endorsement of the home department, No. 979, dated June 15, forwarding for information a copy of an order of the Madras Government ruling "that the performance of post-mortem examinations at coroner's inquests shall, as hitherto, be deemed to form part of the duties devolving upon the district surgeons at the presidency towns, and for which no fee shall be granted."

Resolution.—The Governor general in Council observes that if a private medical practitioner were summoned to give evidence, the remuneration for him would be charged to law and justice. In the present case, the view taken by the Government of Madras is correct. Failing the coroner's surgeon, presidency surgeons are available for the duty, and equally with civil surgeons of mofussil stations, they are debarred from fees for giving evidence touching the result of post-mortem examinations.

The fact of any presidency surgeons being paid from provincial services would not debar the Government of India from requiring their services for work which properly appertains to their offices.

Leave and Allowances.

Simla, Aug. 3, No. 2,567.—To all departments of the Government of India, all local governments and offices of account, and heads of department under Financial Department.

I am directed to invite attention to the distinctive use of the words "pay" and "salary" adopted in the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code, and in the Acting Allowance Code, and to request that, as far as may be convenient, the distinction may be observed in all official documents in future ; "pay" being used in the sense of "substantive pay," and "salary" as including "acting allowance."

2. I am also to suggest that the term "deputation allowance" be restricted to the case of an allowance given to an officer deputed on special duty, and that allowances given under the Acting Allowance Code be called "acting allowances."

Pensions and Gratuities.

July 31.—No. 2,505.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the abolition, in future, of the rule that, in calculating pensions, fractions less than a quarter of a rupee shall be omitted.

Aug. 1.—No. 2,518.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the abolition, from Sept. 1 next, of the rule which at present applies in the case of servants in ineligible grades that a single break in the continuity of their service, caused by resignation, and not exceeding twelve months in duration, is not fatal to their claim to compassionate allowance and gratuity on account of service previous to its occurrence. Any servant resigning on or after 1st September next will be deemed to have absolutely forfeited all claims to compassionate allowance or gratuity.

Aug. 2.—No. 2,519.—The Governor general in Council is pleased to extend to cases of service in grades ineligible for pension the resolution of this department, No. 2,197, dated April 24, 1868, permitting local Governments at their discretion to grant gratuities and pension (or compassionate allowances) to officers serving under certain local funds. The gratuities and pensions will be awardable only on the scale prescribed for ineligible service.

Aug. 3.—No. 2,520.—The Governor general in Council is pleased to declare that service in the regular settlement departments of the Punjab and Oudh shall be held to qualify for pension and gratuity in the same manner as service in regular stipendiary establishments under Government. This rule will apply to officers now in the service of Government, as well as to those entertained in future, but it will not apply to officers entertained on the understanding that their service is required only for a limited time, or that they will be liable to discharge after a short period of service.

WAR OFFICE CIRCULARS.

Head-quarters, Simla, July 31.—The attention of commanding officers is directed to Clause 61 of War Office Circular, 1871 (Surveys on Equipment and Clothing of regiments proceeding to or returning from India).

The attention of commanding officers is directed to the following Horse Guards' General Orders :—

No. 41 (Duties on board ship).—Officers embarked on board H.M.'s troop ships are to wear uniform at all times, except when in their own cabins.

No. 42 (Examinations for promotions).—Instances having occurred in which adjutants have not been examined when their turn for promotion has arrived, the attention of officers commanding regiments is particularly called to this subject, and they are reminded that adjutants are not exempted from examination.

POLICE SUPERANNUATION FUND.

July 19.—H.E. in Council has resolved that, in future, the following rules alone shall regulate the grant of pensions and gratuities to—

(1.) Members of the police forces constituted under the following Acts :—

Act XXIV. of 1859,
Act V. of 1861,
Act VII. of 1867, of the Governor of Bombay in Council.

(2.) Members of the Madras town police, constituted under Act XIII. of 1856.

I. To members of the police forces enumerated above, pensions and gratuities will hereafter be awarded under the rules applicable to uncovenanted servants of Government in other departments, except that service in the police forces in question counts as eligible service, even though the pay do not exceed Rs. 10.

II. Police officers, who at the time of taking pension or gratuity are on pay not exceeding Rs. 20, will enjoy, in addition, the following privileges :—

(1.) They can count their service in the police from the age of 18 upwards ;

(2.) In addition to the leave which may under ordinary rules count towards pension, they are permitted to count one year's leave in fifteen years' service, and two years' leave in thirty ;

(3.) If the Inspector-general deems them worthy of the concession, a break in continuity of service caused by resignation, and not exceeding twelve months in duration, will not affect their right.

III.—An officer who, through being promoted to pay exceeding Rs. 20, has lost any of the advantages conceded in the last section, has the option of taking pension or gratuity at the rates and under the conditions which would have applied to him had the promotion not taken place.

IV.—Present members of the police forces above enumerated, who, being on pay not exceeding Rs. 20, are entitled to pension and gratuity under the rules of the Superannuation Funds, are to elect whether they will continue to serve under the rules of their fund, or under the rules stated in Sections I., II., and III. above.

V.—If they elect the latter, they will be entitled to count for pension or gratuity under the ordinary rules all the service which would count towards pension or gratuity under the rules of the fund ; and if they have any service which does not count towards pension or gratuity under the Superannuation Fund Rules, but which is continuous with their present service, they will have the option of taking such pension or gratuity as may be admissible for that part of their service, which counts, or of taking for the whole of their service, eligible and ineligible, gratuity, or compassionate allowance, as follows :—

Gratuity—

One month's pay for every complete two years of service, not exceeding twelve months' pay in all.

Compassionate allowance—

After thirty years, if discharged on reduction, or after thirty-five years if certified unfit for further service—half-pay not exceeding Rs. 4 per mensem.

(NOTE.—The option at present allowed is between pension and gratuity under Superannuation Fund Rules for that service only which counts, and compassionate allowance or gratuity for the whole service on the following scale :—

Gratuity—

After 5 years'	service,	3 months'	pay.
„ 10	„	4	„
„ 15	„	5	„

Compassionate allowance—same as above stated.)

VI. The claims of members of the police forces above enumerated, who, before the date of this resolution, have become entitled to pension or gratuity, but whose pension or gratuity has not yet received the requisite sanction, will be regulated by the rules of their respective Superannuation Funds.

VII. Pensions and gratuities, under whatever rules awarded, are to be calculated upon the net or reduced pay, and not upon the gross pay (i.e., the rate of pay from which were deducted the subscriptions to the Funds).

Provided that this rule shall not be applied so as to reduce the rate at which any present member of the force is entitled by the rules of his Fund to have his gratuity or pension calculated, until he be either promoted to higher pay or degraded for misconduct to lower pay.

VIII. The Local Governments will direct the necessary arrangements for recording the election, which, under Section IV. is required to be made at once, and it should be understood that the election once made cannot be recalled.

EXAMINATION.—Mr. P. A. G. Cowley, assistant revenue surveyor of the 1st grade. attached to the 2nd division, Bhauwulpoor Survey, passed by the first or lower standard vernacular examination on Sept. 3.

INSPECTIONS.—With the concurrence of Government, the C. in C. has ruled that, when an officer of the Quartermaster General's Department accompanies a brigadier general on inspection duty, he will perform the duties of brigade major in addition to those of his own department.

OPIUM SALE.—Notice was given in the Calcutta Gazette of Aug. 21 that the ninth sale of opium, the provision of 1869-70, would be held at the Government Opium Sale-room on Monday, Sept. 4, 1871, and would comprise 4,330 chests.

NATIVE MEMBER OF COUNCIL.—H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-General, under the authority vested in him by 24 and 25 Vic., cap. 67, section 10, is pleased to nominate his Highness Saramade Rajahae Hindustan Raj Rajendir Sri Maharaja-dhiraj Sivai Ram Sing Bahadur Jaypur, G.C.S.I., to be an additional member of the Council of the Governor-General for making laws and regulations.

EDUCATIONAL.—The following gentlemen to be members of the local committee of public instruction at Gya :—Mr. F. T. Platts, Mr. H. S. A. Reza. Mr. A. Blair to be a member of the local committee of public instruction at Bancoorah. Mr. S. H. C. Tayler to be secretary to the committee. Mr. J. N. McQueen to be a municipal commissioner for the town of Purneah.

PENSION.—Officers in command of brigades of Royal Artillery and the New Line Cavalry and Infantry Regiments will transmit regularly to the Horse Guards, simultaneously with the usual records of service which they forward annually on the 1st April, statements of service, in the subjoined form (form omitted), of all officers of those corps entitled to Indian pension, who may be on leave or on duty in England. The foregoing G.O. cancels a previous one, dated in 1870, on the same subject.

PASSAGES TO OFFICERS' SERVANTS.—In a G.G.O., dated Aug. 4, publishing clause 136 of Army Circulars, dated 1st September, 1870, regarding the grants of passages to officers' servants, for the words at the end of the order, "which is in the case of general officers, married or unmarried, two, and of others married and above the rank of subaltern one female servant," read, "which will follow the rule for officers proceeding to India as laid down in the Royal Warrant now published."

MUNICIPAL, &c.—The following gentlemen to be municipal commissioners for the towns of Hooghly and Chinsurah (dated Aug. 20) :—Mr. D. O. Meiklejohn, Mr. W. aC. Beadon, Moulvie Obedoollah. The following gentlemen to be members of the committee for the management of the charitable dispensary at Bancoorah :—Mr. A. Blair, Baboo Joggeshur Moorkerjee, M.A. and B.L. The following gentlemen to be members f the committee for the management of the charitable dispensary at Debrooghur :—Mr. J. Davidson, Baboo Anuntram Augurwalla.

TITLES.—In compliance with the recommendation of H.H. the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council has conferred the title of "Maharanee" upon Ranee Shurnomoyee, of Cossimbazar, in the district of Moorshedabad, and that of "Rai Bahadoor" upon Baboo Rajib Lochun Roy, the manager of the Ranee's estates, as personal distinctions, and as marks of the appreciation by Government of the munificent charity and liberality which characterises the management of those estates.

CIVIL SERVICE LEAVE.—The Governor general in Council has directed the insertion of the following rule under section 15 of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code :—Except on medical certificate, or on very urgent private affairs, furlough or special leave may not be granted by any local Government, if one-fifth of the total number of covenanted civil servants serving under its orders are already absent on furlough or special leave. This rule will not apply to Oude, the Central Provinces, British Burmah, Ajmere, Mysore, and Coorg, and the Berars, where furlough or special leave may be granted so long as of the whole number of officers, covenanted, military, and uncovenanted, serving in the commission, the number absent on furlough or special leave does not exceed one-fifth.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS, &c.—The following officers have obtained furloughs and leave of absence (in August), under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified :—Lieut. J. M. Alves, F battery 20th brigade R.A., to, England for fifteen months, from date of embarkation, on private affairs. Lieut. B. N. Anley, adjutant 41st foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation. Major and Brevet Lieut. col. W. Tedlie, 3rd battalion 60th foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation. Lieut. T. J. FitzSimon, 62nd foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation. Major W. G. Graves, 63rd foot, to England, for six months from date of embarkation, on private affairs. Ensign D. D. C. M'C. M'Donald, 76th foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation. Ensign W. H. Smith, 79th foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation. Capt. M. T. Carmichael, 92nd foot, to Mussoorie, from July 24 to date of retirement from the service. Ensign R. P. Gallwey, to England, overland, from date of embarkation. The leave granted to Capt. A. H. Warner, 41st foot, on March 27 last, is cancelled. Capt. F. H. Hood, Bengal staff corps, to remain in India for two years, on private affairs, from the date of his quitting his station.

Major-Generals in India.—Under the authority of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, the following clause of the Royal Warrant of December 27, 1870, is declared applicable to major-generals of the British service, employed on the divisional staff in India; and its provisions are also to be considered applicable to major-generals of the India Army or Staff Corps holding similar situations:—A major-general employed on the staff as such, who shall be promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general during the tenure of his staff appointment, shall not be required to vacate such appointment until the 31st March following the date of his promotion, provided such tenure shall not have expired in the meantime.

Messing Contributions.—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to notify that the provisions of G.G.O. of Dec. 22, 1868, prescribing a revised scale of messing contributions to be recovered from officers provided with a free passage on board sea-going vessels from port to port in India, shall in future be applicable to all cases of sea passages provided to officers from port to port in India, whether under the circumstances authorised in G.G.O. of April 8, 1864, or in the case of those officers who, having no regiment or department to join, on return from furlough on medical certificate, are provided with sea passages to proceed to any stations to which they may be ordered. This order is applicable to the three Presidencies.

Colonels' Allowances.—The following letter from the Government of India, in the military department, to the Adjutant-General, No. 1, dated Aug. 1, is published for information:—"With reference to your letter, No. 1,427E, dated the 15th ult., I am desired to acquaint you, for the information of the C. in C., that the rank of brevet lieutenant-colonel granted under Lord Cranborne's despatch, referred to in paragraph 60 of the G.G.O. No. 808, of Sept. 26, 1866, does not reckon towards the twelve years' service for colonel's allowances, in the case of officers of the local service, but applies only to officers of the staff corps, or who entered it under that order. 2. This was the view always taken by the Government of India, but that there should be no doubt in the matter, it was referred to the Secretary of State, who has confirmed this opinion, that it was not intended to apply to officers of the local service."

Civil Furloughs.—The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained (in August) leave of absence and furlough to Europe on medical certificate, under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Mr. W. J. Ellis, civil surgeon of Humeerpore, furlough for one year, together with thirty days' subsidiary leave, with effect from Oct. 1. Mr. W. J. Money, C.S.I., reported his departure from India on board the China on July 30. Capt. W. Hopkinson, assistant commissioner of Hazareebaugh, having returned to duty on Aug. 5, the unexpired portion of the leave granted to him under the orders of May 30 last is cancelled. Mr. C. E. Livesay, assistant engineer, attached to Debree division, six weeks. Mr. C. Lane, deputy superintendent, 2nd grade, great trigonometrical survey, privilege leave for one month from Aug. 1. Mr. R. M. Adam, assistant commissioner of inland customs, Sambhur Lake division, is allowed two months and fifteen days' privilege leave from such date as he may avail himself of it. Mr. G. H. M. Batten, C.S., is allowed subsidiary leave from April 9 to July 8. Mr. F. G. Maclean, has one month's privilege leave, under the Uncovenanted Service Absentee Rules, with effect from May 16. Mr. G. E. Makgill, of the Bengal civil service, having produced the necessary medical certificate, has been granted by the Secretary of State for India an extension of leave for six months. Mr. T. W. Wood, officiating superintendent of police, British Burmah, was a passenger on board the steamer China, which vessel was left by the pilot at sea on July 30. Mr. A. Tween, curator and registrar of the Geological Museum at Calcutta, is granted three months' privilege leave from such date, after the 14th Aug., as he may avail himself of it. Mr. J. W. Alexander, assistant geological survey of India, is permitted to resign his appointment, with effect from Aug. 1. Mr. E. J. Connor, assistant surveyor, 3rd grade, is granted privilege leave of absence for one month, with effect from Sept. 16. Three months' leave of absence is granted to Mr. R. A. Gibson, probationary assistant, attached to No. 6 topographical survey party, commencing from June 21.

Courts-Martial.—At a district court-martial, assembled at Meerut, June 24, Asst. Apothecary J. H. Reid, of the subordinate medical department, attached to the Royal Artillery at Meerut, was arraigned on the following charge:—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in the following instances—1, in having, at Meerut, on May 31, been absent without leave when required for duty in the Royal Artillery Hospital, at six o'clock in the evening, and so continued absent until about nine o'clock at night; 2, in having, at Meerut, on May 31, been drunk for duty; and 3, in having, at Meerut, on June 2, been drunk in his quarters while in arrest, and when required to attend at the orderly-room. The court found that the prisoner was guilty of the charge in all its instances, and sentenced him to be dismissed from the service. The sentence, having been confirmed, was to take effect from date of publication at Meerut. At a district court martial, assembled at Dinapore, on Tuesday, June 13, Private W. Dobson, of the 96th regiment, was arraigned on the following charge:—With insubordination, in having, at Dinapore, on the thirty-first (31st) day of May, 1871, disobeyed the lawful command of his superior officer, Lance corporal I. Dickins, of the same regiment, to close up when at marching order drill, instead thereof having then and there taken off his accoutrements and knapsack, and dashed them on the ground, saying, "I will not drill for you or any others"—or used words to that effect. The court found that Private W. Dobson was guilty of the charge, and sentenced the prisoner to be imprisoned with hard labour for six hundred and seventy-two (672 days), to commence at the expiration of the sentence which he is now undergoing; and the court do further sentence him to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's service, and also to be marked with the letters B.C. Confirmed, to the extent of 672 days' imprisonment with hard labour, to commence at the expiration of the sentence which the prisoner is undergoing. Private W. Dobson is to be sent to the European Penitentiary at Hazareebaugh to undergo his imprisonment. At a general court-martial, assembled at Meean Meer, on Saturday, June 10, Private and Lance Corporal T. Mace, of the 37th regiment, was arraigned on the following charges:—First, having, at Meean Meer, on May 14, 1871, been drunk; second, insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Meean Meer, on May 14, struck with his clenched fist No. 1,138, Colour sergeant J. Mole, 37th regiment, the said colour sergeant being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his duty. The court finds that the prisoner, No. 834, Private and Lance Corporal T. Mace, 37th regiment, is "guilty" of the first charge, and "not guilty" of the second charge. The court sentenced the prisoner to be imprisoned with hard labour for one hundred and sixty-eight (168) days. Approved and confirmed by the C. in C. Private T. Mace is to be sent to the military prison at Sealkote to undergo his sentence. At a general court martial, assembled at Dugshaie, on Friday, June 30, No. 1,218, Private John Keenan, of the 85th regiment King's L.I., was arraigned on the following charges:—First, with conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in having, at Dugshaie, on May 31, when warned by Corporal G. Harris, of the same regiment, his superior officer, to parade the following day for the inspection of the adjutant, used highly insubordinate language to the said Corporal G. Harris, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say, "To hell with you and the colour sergeant;" second, with insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having, at Dugshaie, on May 31, offered violence against Corporal G. Harris, of the said regiment, by throwing a rifle at him, and saying at the time, "You may confine me, but I will do for you when I come out," the said Corporal G. Harris being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. Finding: Guilty of both the charges. Sentence: To suffer penal servitude for a term of five (5) years. Approved and confirmed—Headquarters, Simla, July 8. The prisoner is to be retained in military custody until the season of the year admits of his removal from Dugshaie, when he is to be forwarded under military escort, and handed over to the civil authorities at Lahore for the purpose of undergoing in India the sentence of penal servitude.—At a general court martial, assembled at Dinapore, on Tuesday, June 27, Private James Battin, 96th Regiment, was arraigned on the following charges:—Charges—1st. With insubordination, in having, at Dinapore, on the third (3rd) day of June, when refused permission by Sergeant major J. D. Sharp, of the same regiment, his superior officer, to be absent from tea roll call of that day, answered as follows—"I will take it;" or used words to that effect. 2nd. With insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having at Dinapore, on the third (3rd) day of June, used violence against No. 1,485, Sergeant J. Keill, of the same regiment, by striking him in the face, the said Sergeant J. Keill being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. 3rd. With insubordination, in having, at Dinapore, on the third (3rd) day of June, used threatening language to his superior officer, No. 221, Colour serg. Sturges, of the same regiment, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say—"You are not on guard now, I wish you was; I would hit you on the nose." Finding:—Guilty of all the charges. Sentence:—The court sentenced the prisoner to penal servitude for the term of seven (7) years. The court do further sentence him to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's service, and also to be marked with the letters B.C. Approved and confirmed, with the exception of marking with the letters B.C. The first five years of penal servitude to be carried out in India. The ceremony of drumming out is dispensed with. The prisoner is to be retained in military custody until the season of the year admits of his removal from Dinapore, when he is to be forwarded under military escort, and handed over to the civil authorities at Calcutta, for the purpose of undergoing in India the first five years of the sentence of penal servitude.

Adj. gen.'s Office, Head Quarters, Poona, Aug. 12.—No. 490.—The following G.O., by H.E. the C. in C. in India, is published for information and guidance :—

No. 121.

Head Quarters, Simla, June 14.

The following extract of a Letter No. 431, dated May 27, from the Sec. to the Govt. of India, is published for general information :—

"I am also to take this opportunity of soliciting attention to the orders [a] * * * which, with other similar instructions, have from time to time been issued by the C. in C. and the Govt. of India, with the view both of reducing the bulk of official correspondence when this can be done, and, especially, of facilitating to the utmost the consideration of any cases submitted for orders by placing them properly before the authority with whom the decision rests.

"It is evidently the bounden duty of the officer who has to submit any representation to H.E. the C. in C., or to the Government, to make himself first of all thoroughly acquainted with the circumstances of the case; which he will, therefore, be in a position, and may reasonably be expected, properly to explain, and, by doing so, to lighten very considerably in many cases the labour of the office he addresses, by rendering unnecessary a repetition there of the labour he has had himself to undergo, in collating the facts and forming a clear conception of what they represent.

"The Governor general in Council, therefore, desires that, whenever any officer has to submit any correspondence to the C. in C. or to Government, he may be required to see that the whole case is clearly and succinctly stated in one communication; in the margin of which reference by number and date should be made to each enclosure of importance, opposite the statement or opinion which is based upon or supported by it. When more than a few enclosures or annexures are submitted, they should, for greater convenience, be conspicuously numbered or lettered; and in all cases the submission of unnecessary enclosures should be carefully avoided.

"It is needless to point out how desirable and even necessary it is that the above course should be adopted in submitting cases to Government, to enable it to deal satisfactorily and promptly with the very numerous questions which—sometimes in an unnecessarily confused state—come before it, and the disposal of which the want of such method tends materially to retard."

2. With reference to the above extract, the C. in C. directs that the above-quoted orders, which have in many recent instances been lost sight of, may be strictly adhered to in future.

3. When the whole or any portion of a previous letter is referred to, its distinctive mark must be entered in the margin.

4. All correspondence which may not be submitted to head quarters in strict accordance with the above instructions will be returned.

Extension of Leave.—With reference to G.O., dated Oct. 5, 1870, the Government of India have extended the limitation of leave taken in England after their arrival in that country, by officers ordered to proceed there on duty, to six months; any leave in excess of such period will disqualify them from the grant of a free return passage.

Military Furloughs, &c.—The following officers have obtained furlough and leave of absence (in August) to Europe, on medical certificate, under the Rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified :—The furlough to Europe, on private affairs, for six months, granted to Colonel J. S. Gell, Quartermaster-General of the Army, of the 15th April last, is extended to the 31st of December next. Official Papers.

MINUTE ON JAILS BY THE LIEUT. GOVERNOR.

A principal object which I have had in appointing a judicial officer of experience to officiate as inspector general of jails is, that he should look into the subject from what I may call a judicial point of view; that is, he should ascertain whether the objects for which judicial sentences are passed—viz., the due punishment of crime and prevention of future crime, are attained; or if there are defects in this respect, he should devise a remedy. No doubt very much has been done in the Bengal jails towards some of the objects which must be kept in view in all jail management; especially much has been achieved towards giving the prisoners useful employment, securing their willing labour, and making that labour profitable. But I may say, without disparagement to the excellent officers employed, that both the general superintendence and the charge of district jails have been of late years so exclusively in the hands of non-judicial officers, that there is some danger that judicial considerations may be lost to sight. In fact, to some extent, it is already clear to me that these considerations have not been sufficiently attended to.

Since medical officers have had all the jail offices, I incline to think that manufactures and sanitary considerations have been too exclusively looked to. Assuredly the latter—i.e., sanitary considerations—cannot be too much kept in view; the mortality in our jails has been horrible, and is still much too high. But in all the jails which I have yet seen, except the Presidency Jail, partly from original defects of construction, and, partly, I believe, because walls and partitions have been knocked down to let in air, there is an extreme want of separation and classification of prisoners, such as I have seen in no other part of India of late years, and had not expected to see. Long-term men and short, hardened criminals and young men convicted of most petty offences, are all herded together in the same yards and workshops. The great jail at Allipore is no exception to this observation, and the female jail at Russa is the most conspicuous instance of all; murderesses and misdemeanants, and women under trial, being all kept promiscuously together.

The above is due to deficiencies of jail accommodation, and cannot be remedied till the central jails are completed and the district jails improved. But there are other defects, which I think may be more immediately remedied. Foremost, and far exceeding in evil all the others, I place the neglect of the proper punishment of short-term prisoners, who are not in jail long enough to learn and make a profit from manufactures. I have on another occasion remarked on this feature of the Alipore Jail. I have since been at a sub-divisional station far from the head-quarters of the district, and where there is a very tolerable little jail; prisoners sentenced for very short periods undergo their sentence there. I asked how they were employed. The reply was—"Oh! formerly when there was a larger guard they had to work on the roads, but now we are only allowed four men, who cannot leave the jail; the prisoners cannot go out, and there is nothing for them to do inside; so they do nothing." Prisoners sentenced to short terms of rigorous imprisonment were simply locked up without an attempt to make them work!

It is quite clear that in the case of prisoners who have not before them the terror of mere length of sentence, or the prospect of industrial reformation, it is of all things most necessary that imprisonment should be rigorous and stinging. It is only by sharp punishment that any effect can be produced on short-term prisoners. I beg, therefore, that the officiating inspector general will apply himself to introduce at once effective means of so treating this class of prisoners.

In the case of long-term prisoners, the mere prolonged seclusion may go far in the way of punishment, and careful discipline and industry may in some degree reform; but here, too, I fear that the necessities of a manufacturing system sometimes lead to undesirable indulgence. To make a man a useful and profitable workman you must keep him in good humour, and men are most profitable in the occupations for which they are best fitted.

Accordingly, I have found that sometimes prisoners are promoted without due regard to the enormity and turpitude of the offences for which they were sentenced, and very lately I discovered that educated prisoners convicted of crimes of the deepest dye were at once put into high office as jail writers. Tobacco, too, was at one time all but permitted; and sometimes the system followed seems to be too much that of a manufactory, and too little that of a jail. Wherever this is so it should be remedied.

A most successful economy has, under this system, been effected in regard to establishments. On consideration, I am satisfied that there are great advantages in the employment of prisoners as warders, overseers, and the like, in preference to the corrupt and careless paid warders of former days, provided the system is not abused by the neglect of all those considerations which I call judicial. But with increased strictness of practice I fear that some increase of establishments may be required. I shall trust to the officiating inspector general to look into such necessities with great care, and to pass no increase of expense which is not really necessary and beneficial.

I have had the advantage of an excellent report on the Alipore and Presidency Jails by Mr. Bernard and Dr. Payne. The Presidency Jail may, I believe, be taken (comparatively, at least) as a model of system, discipline, and punishment, while it may learn something in the art of profitable manufacture from Alipore and the Mofussil Jails. These latter may, I am sure, learn many lessons of prison management and punishment from the Presidency Jail. A copy of the report of Messrs. Bernard and Payne, with my orders thereupon, will be communicated to the new inspector general with this minute, and I will thank him to report from time to time the measures which he may take to carry out the reforms suggested, and any others which he may find to be necessary. I should like him to visit as many jails as possible, including some of the sub-divisional lock-ups, as soon as he can. G. CAMPBELL.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, REVENUE, AND COMMERCE.

From R. H. Wilson, Esq., Officiating Under Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce.

Fort William, July 24, 1871.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 59, dated the 7th inst., and in reply to state that the Lieut. governor is gratified to learn that the principles of administration which he has laid down have the concurrence and approval of the Government of India. His Honour will endeavour to introduce them gradually.

2. The Lieutenant governor most heartily concurs in the observation made in paragraph 4 of your letter, that the officers serving under this Government are a most able, experienced, and industrious body of men, and he has no doubt whatever that he is receiving, and will receive from them all, high and low, that loyal and full assistance without which all efforts of the Government would be worse than useless. They are undoubtedly in no way to blame for any deficiencies resulting from the want of permanence in their appointments, nor for any part of the system which has hitherto existed, and which it may now be desired in some degree to modify; and the Lieutenant governor feels confident that as soon as any change in the policy of Government comes to be known and understood by them, it will be accepted and acted upon in a zealous and efficient manner.

3. With reference to paragraph 3 of your letter, I am to observe that the statement of the board regarding the frequent changes of officers is not only not refuted, but that it is undoubtedly the fact; and the necessity for devising a remedy for this evil has the Lieutenant governor's most anxious attention. Something may be done by keeping this object steadily in view in all administrative arrangements. At the same time, his Honour thinks that the difficulties under the present system are so great that sufficient permanency will not be attained without some considerable change in the distribution of civil offices and emoluments. His Honour is carefully considering and maturing the means by which this can be effected in such a manner as to remedy several defects, of which the frequent transfer of officers is perhaps the most striking. Important changes must, of course, be very fully weighed in all their bearings before they can be safely matured, and they will necessitate a further reference to the Government of India.

4. Another fact may be noticed as very material. The duties now required of district officers in Bengal are to the full as enormous and important as in any other part of India. The salaries of the civil servants so employed (fixed at a time when they were only collectors, and were neither magistrates nor charged with the general administration of the district) are, however, far below those enjoyed by similar officers in any other province. The Lieutenant Governor fears that the financial department might possibly not easily permit of an increase of expenditure to meet this want, but at any rate he feels that in any rearrangement it will be desirable to utilise any savings which can be effected in other quarters, to increase the allowances of the officers in charge of great districts in Bengal.—I have, &c., R. H. WILSON

MILITARY STATISTICS.

The population returns of the last census, now tabulated by the Registrar-General (Major G. Graham), include the following statistics regarding the British Army:—During the year 1869 the average strength of the British Army at home and abroad, as shown by the returns with which the Registrar-General has been favoured by his Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief, was 186,668.

At home the average strength was 86,278 officers and men; and the deaths from all causes 903, of which 28 occurred among officers, and 875 among non-commissioned officers and men. The ratio of deaths per 1,000 of the mean strength at home was 5·91 in the former and 10·73 in the latter.

In Great Britain the death-rate of officers was 5·83, and of non-commissioned officers and men 11·62 per 1,000 of the mean strength. In Ireland the respective rates were 6·18 and 8·06 per 1,000. Compared with the results for the previous year the ratios showed a great reduction in the mortality of all ranks at home, the only increase being among officers stationed in Ireland.

The average strength of the army abroad in 1869 was 100,390; the deaths were 2,347—viz., 65 officers and 2,282 non-commissioned officers and men, yielding a death-rate per 1,000 of the mean strength of 11·88 in the former and 24·04 in the latter. Compared with the results for 1868 there is a decrease in the mortality of officers and a large increase in that of non-commissioned officers and men of the British army abroad.

An opportune publication of a similar official statistical paper to the above, by the Russian Minister of War (General Milutyn), enables us to contrast the strength of the Russian army with our own at the present time. The new organisation now being elaborated by the Minister of War, General Milutyn, is immediately to be carried into effect. It is found that if the principle of general liability to military service were literally carried out the number of men who would have to be draughted into the army would considerably exceed the requirements of the State, and that a fourth of the able-bodied males of the Empire who are within the prescribed limits of age would suffice to keep up the army at its prescribed strength. According to the calculations made by the Russian War-Office, even this proportion would, if the projected military reforms were introduced, provide Russia with an army of 2,000,000 men in ten years. At present the total force which would be at the disposal of the Czar in case of a war is only 627,434 men and 1,572 guns—which is 200,000 men less than that of the Austrian army, and 400,000 less than that of the German. This of course does not include the troops which must be kept in the country for garrison duty and to keep down the discontented populations of Poland, the Baltic Provinces, and Asiatic Russia.

Miscellaneous.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 20th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £355,000, and to Bombay, £45,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10⅞d. on all the Presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive in full; and on Bombay at 1s. 11d. about 33 per cent.

Departure of the First Indian Troop Ship.—(Portsmouth, Sept. 23.)—The Malabar 3, Indian screw relief troop ship, Captain Sholto Douglas, left Spithead to-day for Queenstown. She will proceed direct to Bombay, where she will arrive about the 1st November, and, leaving there after a fortnight's detention, will be due at this port on the 18th of December.

A New Egyptian Railway.—The Delta, which left Southampton on Sept. 16, with the Indian mail, took out 200 passengers, amongst whom were about twenty civil engineers, who were going out to make a survey for the Khedive of Egypt, for a line of railroad 600 miles long, through the Nubian desert, beginning at the second cataract on the Nile. This railroad, if formed, will, in connection with the navigable portions of the Nile, be the means of effecting a rapid communication between Lower and Upper Egypt. These engineers will be stationed along the whole line of survey at regular distances from each other. They will be lodged in tents, and each will have a guard of Egyptian soldiers and servants, furnished by the Khedive. They took out an immense quantity of stores, consisting of tents, clothing, and provisions in the Delta, including nearly 1,000 packages of preserved meats, flour, wines, spirits, &c. Each station will be numbered, and the stores are so ingeniously marked that they can hardly go astray. The chief rendezvous of the engineers on their outward journey will be Cairo. Thence they will be conveyed up the Nile to the second cataract, when camels will convey them across the desert. All the engineers are in the prime of life, and some have been in India. The survey will take about six months to accomplish, and if the report of the engineers be favourable the railway will, it is expected, be commenced at once, and completed in about ten years.

Legal.—Mr. John Lenton Pulling, solicitor, of No. 3, Adelaide-place, London Bridge, Perpetual Commissioner for Acknowledgments, London Commissioner for Oaths in Chancery, Probate, Common Law, Duchy of Lancaster and Stannaries Courts, has been appointed Commissioner for taking Acknowledgments by Married Women, in respect of Property in India; Commissioner for Affidavits to be used in Tasmania, South Australia, Ontario, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick; and Commissioner for Deeds, Oaths, and Depositions, to be used in California, Maine, Massachusetts, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina, United States.

Death of Colonel Caine, late Lieutenant-Governor of Hong Kong.—The death of Lieut.-Colonel William Caine, late Lieutenant-Governor of Hong Kong, in the seventy-second year of his age, is just announced. Passing through the Nepaul campaign of 1815, and the Deccan war of 1817 and 1818, including the action at Jubbulpore, he was brigade-major at the capture of Bhurtpore, and was there wounded in the foot when attempting to carry the guns of the enemy. At Chusan he commanded one of the companies of the 26th Regiment in July, 1840, and he was military magistrate of that city and British Commissioner until the evacuation in 1843.

Medical.—A fair day's pay for a fair day's work seems to be a rule that is easily avoided under the regulations applied to British Army Surgeons in India. Let us suppose a case. A.B., an Assistant-Surgeon of the British Army serving in Bengal, is in receipt of his pay of Rs. 451 per mensem, and being promoted to Surgeon is supposed to be entitled to increased pay corresponding to his rank. This, however, does not appear to be the case until he can enter by "absorption" the charmed circle of ten, which is the full complement of the Bengal Staff. In the meantime, it would be supposed, at least, that he enjoys with his former pay of Assistant-Surgeon his former amount of work; but again this does not appear to be the fact, for instances occur in which the full Surgeon does full Surgeon's work on Assistant-Surgeon's pay, owing to the stupid and unjust rules of the Indian Government. It may be that the facts have not been understood, but they lie in a nutshell. Promotion which carries with it the liability to more arduous and more responsible duties should also carry with it the equivalent in pay, or, if any exception could exist, it should be in cases where such increased duties are not imposed. For an officer to be treated as a supernumerary of his rank in regard to pay, and at the same time perform the duties which belong to those who are on the strength of the regiment, is a manifest injustice, which we cannot believe his Grace of Argyll would condescend to sanction if the facts were known.—Broad Arrow.

The New 16-Pounder.—After the fight was over on Tuesday, General Blumenthal and others of the foreign officers made a careful inspection of the new 16-pounder gun, seeing it unlimbered and worked in every way. There were exclamations of high approval of the piece, its carriage, and the handling of the eight-horse team as the gun was turned sharply to and fro at a trot, taken through narrow openings and over ditches. The piece itself weighs about 11cwt. 3qrs., or 1cwt. 3qrs. less than the old smooth-bore 9-pounder, with which even some Horse Artillery batteries were armed in the Crimea, and yet is of much greater power. It was really useless to fire the 9-pounder at ranges above 1,600 yards, or at most 1,800. The 16-pounder sends its projectile of nearly twice the weight 4,000 yards with great accuracy, and with an elevation of only 11deg. 22min., time of flight not quite 14 secs. The gun on its carriage, with 28 rounds of ammunition, weighs but little more than the old 9-pounder, and considerably less than the old 24-pounder howitzer, two of which formed part of each 9-pounder battery. The force of the 16-pounder projectile is great, for the velocity is high and elongated projectiles strike hard. It has also been found to give extraordinary results in accuracy when loaded with small charges and elevated like a mortar, so that men are not safe from it even in rifle-pits. The iron carriage is a vast improvement on the old wooden one, and the seats on the axletree boxes enable five men altogether to be carried with the piece to work it in action even when the wagons are left behind. As a muzzleloader it has none of the complications necessary with breechloaders, both in gun and ammunition. Its accuracy is most remarkable. Its only fault is, that it is rather light for the charge fired, the result being that the recoil is great. But the strength of the carriage is so much in excess of what is necessary, that there can be no harm in adjusting a break to the wheels if after trial the recoil is found to be inconvenient. It may be so in some cases, but as a rule, recoil matters nothing to guns in the open.—Times' Correspondent.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Napoleon III., Bates, from Rangoon to Glasgow, put into St. Helena, Aug. 23, with loss of bulwarks, rails, &c., and skylight stove, having experienced a hurricane, July 23, in lat. 35 S., lon. 27 E.; her crew refused duty, and a survey has been held by which she is reported seaworthy, and that the trifling repairs recommended can be effected during the passage, except the fitting of a tiller to the rudder head, which entails a little blacksmiths' work. Nine of the vessel's crew were sentenced to imprisonment, for terms varying from four to ten weeks, and the vessel will have to wait until substitutes can be obtained.

The Bengal, Paynter, from Cardiff to Aden, which put into Milford leaky on Sept. 9, has been obliged to discharge part of her cargo at Pembroke Dock, and is still under repair.

A fire occurred on board the Danube (str.), for Singapore, &c., in the West India Docks, on the morning of Sept. 17; a quantity of coal was damaged by fire in bunker, deck by fire and cutting away. A survey was held, and the cargo found to be undamaged; vessel ordered to proceed.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Gujerat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss [which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d., postage, 1s. 10d.

NEW PATENT.
ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. 18s. each; postage, 6d.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
PALPITATION OF THE HEART is frequently not only felt but heard, prevents sleep, and begets the utmost dread of impending suffocation. These Pills are particularly recommended for removing this affection, because they strengthen the nervous and the debilitated, who are much more liable to this malady than other persons. Holloway's Pills so improve the digestion, increase the action of the liver, and give activity to the bowels, that giddiness, headache, and nausea depart as the palpitation diminishes, and the sufferer at once experiences the most indescribable relief from anxiety. Holloway's Pills form the best alterative and aperient in all cases of convalescence from fevers, inflammations, neuralgia, and all chronic diseases which have impoverished the blood and brain.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Sept. 5; Agra and Madras, Sept. 3; Calcutta, Sept. 2.

THE Bengal Revenue Board has thrown some light on the returns whence Mr. Campbell derived his statement as to the non-existence of any medical income above Rs. 10,000 a-year. We are now told that any doctor or lawyer who derived any income from Bank Shares or Government Securities was entered under the head of "Commerce, Miscellaneous," instead of his own profession. It appears that fourteen medical men thus registered were assessed on incomes of the value above-named; some of them indeed having reported themselves as worth much more than Rs. 10,000 a-year. Instead of only 17 lawyers, 62 were really assessed at the higher rate. The 58 ministers of religion assessed at Rs. 10,000 and upwards were all, it seems, clergymen of the Hindu or Mohammedan faith.

A GOOD deal of angry murmuring is reported in the Bombay papers against an order issued from the India Office for the shelving of certain unemployed officers in the Indian Army. It is said that sixty Bengal and sixteen Bombay officers have been directed to "send in their papers," with an added threat that if they will not go willingly, they will find themselves placed on the pension-list without their consent. Both Local and Staff Corps officers, have been addressed to this purport, and the indignation aroused thereby is naturally very great. The aggrieved officers complain of the order in question as a gross violation of the Parliamentary Guarantee, and threats of determined resistance may be heard in all directions. If such an order has been issued, we can only trust that nothing like unfairness will be shown in carrying it out. With regard to the Parliamentary Guarantee, we doubt whether it can be brought up to bar the right of the Crown to dispense with an officer's services at its own discretion.

WE learn from the Indian papers that Jaishi Ram, Judge of the Small Cause Court at Lahore, has been murdered by one Kooka Bishen Singh. This man at any rate is no Mohammedan.

ON the last day of August Lord Mayo held at Simlah a grand durbar, at which twenty-two Hill Chiefs of the Protected Sikh States on the Sutlej were formally received. His Lordship spoke at some length of the peace and prosperity which the Chiefs and their people had enjoyed for half a century under our rule, and he treated his hearers to some wholesome advice as to the duties of good governors, especially in the observance of justice and moderation. The durbar is said to have gone off without a hitch.

SOME of the natives in Calcutta seem to have rushed into one of those panics to which the world of commerce is peculiarly prone. A pamphlet professing to reveal a secret treaty between Russia and Prussia had been announced in one of Reuter's telegrams, and at once a number of large holders of Government paper began to "reduce their holdings as quickly as possible." We hope that the announcement of the Gastein and Salzburg meetings will cause these foolish people to repent of their headlong cowardice. They may rest assured that Germany will bar the way to any unpleasant stirring of the "Eastern Question" by her Northern neighbour.

THE mail from India announces the sudden death at Mussoorie of Major-General R. Kinleside, of the Bengal Artillery. The deceased officer entered the Indian Army in 1827, was a full Captain in 1845, a Major in 1857, Lieutenant-Colonel in the following year, and a Major-General in 1867. He obtained a brevet-majority for his services in the Punjab campaign, where he commanded a battery at Sadoolapore and Goojrat. For his services in the Mutiny he gained another medal and his brevet-colonelcy.

IN his latest report from the Persian Gulf, Colonel Pelly, writing on Aug. 14, states that the cholera had somewhat abated at Bushire, after carrying off many people in the previous fortnight. The unhealthiness of Bushire is traceable in part to the bad air from the surrounding plain, which is "flooded for miles at every spring tide." Cholera still prevailed at Lingah and along the coast to Congoon, as well as in some places inland, and at several villages in the islands of Bahrein, and in Guttur. All was quiet on the Gulf, and the pearl fishery was expected to yield a very large outturn. A cargo of wheat and rice for Bushire and Basrah had arrived on the 9th August from Bombay. H.M. steamer Magpie started on a cruise at the beginning of the month, and the gunboat Hugh Rose arrived from her cruise on the 8th.

STILL later advices report a fresh outbreak of cholera at Bushire. According to a Kurrachee paper, the weather there was "something fearful." Besides cholera, the people were suffering from typhus, Gulf fever, and were threatened with "a sort of plague." The Residency-surgeon and several other Europeans had been compelled by severe illness to leave the place. As for the famine in Southern Persia, the attempt of the Persian Minister in London to deny its prevalence is generally scouted as futile by the Indian Press. That great suffering has prevailed and was still prevailing in Persia is the general belief. And the worst of it is that the future looks no brighter than the present, for official letters from Teheran of August 21 assert that there is every prospect of renewed famine in the winter.

IN Western and Southern India the season had at length taken an auspicious turn for the wetter. After a fortnight of close hot weather in Bombay heavy showers were falling daily. Rain had also begun falling all over the Dakhan and in the Berars, just in time to save the crops in many places, and to allay the fears of an impending famine. Prices, which had been steadily rising, began once more to fall, as the rain gave new life to the drooping crops. In Sindh however so little rain had fallen by the end of August, that the prospect there was still one of deep gloom. On the Bengal side the rains have stopped the traffic of the Eastern Bengal Railway beyond Ranaghat. At Monghyr the flood had risen within three inches of its height in 1857, the highest ever known. In Patna, Burdwan, Hooghly, Rajshahye, Midnapore, Jessore, and several other districts, the crops had suffered from the floods; while in Dinajpore, Julpigoree, Goalparah, and Darjeeling, they were drooping for want of rain.

Out of evil cometh good. We are sorry for the Indian taxpayer whose back has to bear the burden of one experimental blunder after another. But he may comfort himself with the knowledge that millions of money will not again be lightly spent on a grand system of double-storied barracks, which let in the rain, are many degrees hotter than those of a less philanthropic age, and have a trick of threatening to fall in upon their inmates. These beautiful palaces, ordered during the sanitary panic that followed a period of unusual mortality, are revealing their true demerits one by one. The last exposure took place at Saugor, where a committee of enquiry has condemned the barracks. It is not unlikely that the costly failures at Peshawar will soon be officially doomed to the same fate. According to the Delhi Gazette they have already been condemned by their present occupants. It appears that when the old barracks where vacated the other day by a regiment bound for Cherat, the new Sanitarium in the neighbouring hills, the soldiers who were then living in the new two-storied barracks begged leave to exchange them for the old buildings, which are much cooler, if not quite so grand to look at. As the old buildings were not less healthy than the new, their request was granted, and the comfort if not the health of those concerned will be not a little promoted by their removal to barracks some ten degrees cooler than those they are leaving tenantless.

From various telegrams received last week, we learn that Mr. Justice Norman's murderer was tried on the 28th September, and found guilty, after a sitting of only two hours. Of course he was sentenced to death, and his doom was to be carried out in a fortnight. He appears to have denied his crime, pleading that he was only presenting a petition, when Mr. Norman became angry, and that he himself had no further knowledge of what took place. As we surmised last week, he turns out to have been a Pathan or Afghan from Kabul, who had lately been living in the Mosque at Calcutta. It is also admitted that he was not insane. The sentence, we are told, was received with cheers by the dense crowd assembled at his trial, and the murderer himself was greeted with a burst of execration from the yet larger crowd outside. No further clue to the motive for his crime has yet been discovered. It is not at all unlikely that his own version of the matter was substantially the true one, and that he stabbed his victim in a sudden phrenzy caused by Mr. Norman's rejection of his suit. A contemporary indeed reminds us that it was Mr. Norman who lately rejected Ameer Khan's application for a writ of habeas corpus. But we do not see the utter necessity of the inference he would draw from that fact, even though it be coupled with the sudden flight of Wahabees from Calcutta. These gentry knew that popular suspicion would at once be turned against them, whatever might have been the real cause of the murder. But a suspicious circumstance is not in itself evidence, and it would be as well to wait for more information before accepting the popular theory regarding this particular case. At the same time we cannot quite agree with the "Mohammedan" who in a letter to the Times maintains the general loyalty of his fellow worshippers in India. At the best he can only speak for certain sections of the entire body, and he allows nothing for marked national differences between Mohammedans settled in different parts of the country.

In his Abstract of Indian Survey Reports for 1869-70 Mr. Clements Markham continues the good work begun in his admirable Memoir to which we drew attention some weeks ago. We are glad to see that he can tell us of some little progress made in Marine Surveys, the records of which had remained a perfect blank ever since the unlucky abolition of the old Indian Navy. In 1869 the creeks and harbours of Orissa, the mouths of the Jumboo and Mahanuddy, the neighbourhood of False Point, and the Coast of Chittagong, were thoroughly examined. Next comes the progress of the Great Trigonometrical Survey. The Brahmaputra Series was carried well forward under Lieutenant Thuillier. Mr. Shelverton, in the Godavery Valley, was struck down in the midst of his labours by the same deadly climate which half a century earlier had disabled Everest's party working in the same place. Ninety-five miles of the Bilaspur Series were surveyed by Mr. Keelan, while Major Branfill and Lieutenant Rogers pushed on the two sections of the Bangalore Series. Major Montgomerie made good progress in Kemaon and Gurhwal, working sometimes at a height of 17,000 feet above the sea. Ranikhet and the Khosi Valley were also explored and mapped out. In Kattiwar and Gujerat much useful work was begun or completed by Lieutenant Trotter and Colonel Nasmyth. Latitude observations were taken on the meridians of 75 and 78 by Lieutenants Heaviside and Herschel. In this year also it was that poor Major Basevi, whose death we lately reported, carried out those pendulum observations along the coast and at Minicoy Island, which went to prove that gravity on the coast was greater than inland, and greatest of all in mid-ocean.

Good progress was also made with the Revenue Surveys, the ground measured in the Upper and Lower Circles alone amounting to more than 21,000 square miles, at a total cost of £84,376. In Raipore the whole surveying party suffered from fever, and Mr. Hutcheson, a surveyor of high attainments, died at his post. The work done in Nimar saved the engineers of the Indore State Railway from making fresh surveys of their own. In British Burmah nothing was done, beyond the survey of Kamree and Cheduba Islands, but Mr. O'Donel finished the measurement of Kooch Behar, where the rivers have changed their courses in the last twelve years, and Captain Sconce entered on the survey of Hazaribagh. On the Topographical Survey, adopted for wild and thinly-peopled regions and for Native States, seven parties were out, working over an area of nearly 30,000 square miles, hitherto unmapped or but imperfectly explored. After sixteen years' labour in "a difficult region" of the Central Provinces, Mr. Girdlestone's party was at length broken up. It had mapped out 26,580 square miles, and one of the party, Mr. Scanlan, drew up an interesting note on the Bharias, a Gond tribe in the Satpoora Hills. Colonel Saxton, in the Ganjam Agency, made his way into the Saora Hills, a wild country where no stranger had ever before been allowed to set foot. These hills are cultivated to their summits, 3,500 feet high, by means of terraces faced with stone work, which terraces are built by women, who smoke as they work. The process of engraving the sheets of the Indian Atlas in Calcutta has proved to Colonel Thuillier's satisfaction that the work done by Indian engravers will challenge comparison with that produced at home.

In the field of geological survey, a field so perilous that those employed in it cannot insure their lives, much work was also got through, not without loss of precious lives. Messrs. Oldham and Ormsby both died from "illness contracted in the field," and several officers had to take sick leave. Mr. Hughes and Dr. Oldham ascertained the true position and extent of the coalbeds in Chanda and East Berar. Other fields were explored by Mr. Medlicott in Jhansi, Sagar, and the neighbourhood of Mopani, by Mr. Ball in Chota Nagpore, and Mr. Blanford in Bilaspur. It is pleasant to learn that the existence of coal in Chanda was first pointed out in 1830 by the versatile James Prinsep. Mr. Mallet examined the mineral-bearing districts in Rewah and Southern Mirzapore. Mr. Foote in the Valley of the Upper Kistna, Mr. Hackett in Jubbulpore, and Mr. Willson in the country about Kalpee were also busy gathering fresh stores of geological facts. A promising lead vein at Chicholi, near Raipore, was examined by Mr. Blanford. Dr. Oldham has finished a beautiful geological map of Cutch. The first two quarter-sheets of a grand geological atlas are nearly ready for publication.

After sketching the progress of meteorological research in India under Messrs. Blanford, Chambers, and others, Mr. Markham closes his interesting review with a summary of geographical results obtained by Major Montgomerie's "Mirza" in Central Asia, Mr. Shaw in Yarkand, Captain Miles and Mr. Munzinger in Arabia, and by Lieutenent St. John in Persia. The Mirza's journey, much of it over new ground, enabled his employer to fix more accurately the positions of Kashgar and Yarkand, and the direction of the Pamir watershed. Major Sladen's journey to Momein from Bhamo cleared up the darkness hanging over the country between the Irrawaddy and Yunan, and proved the existence of three parallel hill ranges between Bhamo and Momein.

We have to thank the editor of "The Phœnix, a monthly Magazine for China, Japan, and Eastern Asia," for the first volume of a very noteworthy serial, full of varied information and scholarly research. Its main purpose appears to be the dissemination of just ideas regarding the manners and customs of China, Japan, and other kindred nations. To treat thoroughly however of Chinese subjects involves frequent reference to matters which concern India also. Buddhism for example grew out of a specially Indian source, flourished for centuries over great part of India, and is still the religion of one British-Indian province. Then again some millions of our Indian subjects are nearly allied both by origin and in speech to the Mongolian peoples of China and Japan. Anglo-Indians therefore of studious habits will find much to interest them in Mr. Brian Hodgson's papers on Buddhism and Buddhists, in the Rev. J. Summer's Summary of Burmese History, in Mr. Hyde Clarke's Essay on the Caucaso-Tibetan Languages, and Dr. Campbell's Notes on Eastern Thibet. The Editor hopes in the next volume of the "Phœnix" to throw some light upon the Himalayan dialects, and to gather fresh information from Indian sources. Will he or any of his friends explain to us what affinity, if any, exists between the Dravidian languages of India and those spoken by the Mongol races?

A Calcutta telegram of September 25 informs us that "the rebel Mohammed Keyes arrived at Edwardesabad on the morning of September 21, with women, children, and property, and laid down his arms at the feet of the Deputy-Commissioner. Eleven of the ringleaders were arrested." According to this curious piece of news Colonel Keyes has not only turned Mohammedan, but has also added rebellion to his other offences, to say nothing of a harem full of women and children which he must have collected by some miracle of cleverness within the last few weeks. By way of comfort to his friends however we venture to suggest that the rebel in question was a body of Mohammed Kheils, a frontier tribe which has often given us trouble, but has at length sent in its leading men, with a number of women and children and a stock of household goods, in proof of its entire submission to the British power. This reading is justified at any rate by the reported arrest of eleven of the ringleaders.

We note that Sir Richard Couch, Chief Justice of Bengal, will start for Bombay by way of Brindisi to catch the mail which leaves Southampton on the 7th inst.

The next Overland Mail is due here on Saturday.

Nagode.—A Court of Enquiry, the Pioneer reports, has been ordered by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to assemble at Nagode at an early date, to inquire into and report upon the facts connected with the dismissal from civil employ of an officer lately holding an appointment on the Boundary Commission. It will depend upon the facts elicited whether the officer in question is to be permitted to return to military duty.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s Forces.—Capt. D. Macdonald, 70th Highlanders, at Kamptee, Aug. 28. Major A. Darroch, late 51st Foot, at Worthing, Sept. 20.

Bengal.—Capt. W. Sevenoaks, late of the Irrawaddie Flotilla, British Burmah, aged 46, at Liverpool, Sept. 13. Mr. H. B. Weston, late of Fort William, Calcutta, at Brighton, Sept. 20, aged 60. P. B. Doyle, Esq., superintendent of police, at Rangoon, Aug. 12. Major gen. R. R. Kinleside, R.A., at Mussoorie, Aug. 27. Lieut. Teed, 18th Bengal N.I., at Domungurh, drowned by the capsizing of a boat on the Domungurh lake. Capt. F. M. M. Harris, 8th Bengal N.I., aged 26, at Alipore, Aug. 21. Asst. surg. D. J. Walsh, Indian Medical Service, offic. garrison surg., at Chunar, Aug. 20.

Bombay.—Lieut. gen. J. S. Down, Bombay Army, at Kilburn, Sept. 25.

PASSENGERS ARRIVED AT BRINDISI.

Per str. Nyanza, Sept. 26.—From Bombay.—Hon. C. Turner, Mr. Macune, Capt. Johnstone, Mr. Watson, Capt. Soady. From Galle.—Mr. Browne.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, October 3, 1871.

INDIA IN 1869-70.—IV.

British Burmah, with a population of about two and a-half millions, covers an area of 93,881 square miles, or only one square mile to every twenty-five persons. Of its three chief divisions Tenasserim is at once the largest and the most thinly peopled, although it contains the second largest city in the province, Maulmain. Unlike other provinces, British Burmah derives less than a fourth of its gross revenue from the land-tax. Nearly one-fifth is obtained from the poll-tax. In the customs receipts there was a serious falling off, ascribed to the diminished trade at the end of the Abyssinian War. The foreign trade for the year fell off by a million and a quarter, chiefly in the exports of rice and timber. This, we are told, was owing less to the enhanced duty on rice than to the cause already named, and to some of the grain being kept back in expectation of lower rates to come. Be that as it may, the customs receipts were equal to these for any former year save the exceptional 1868-9, and more land was planted with rice during the year under review than ever before. The whole value of the seaborne trade for the year was £7,219,253, while the inland trade amounted to nearly two and one-fifth millions sterling. In November, 1869, the first British steamer passed beyond Mandalay to Bhamo, carrying the newly appointed Assistant Political Agent and a party of merchants laden with their first stock of goods for the new market. It was in this year also that a good road was opened from Tounghoo to the Shan States and the Karennee country, and that a court was established at Mandalay for the trial of civil causes between British and Burman subjects. The first efforts of the new Political Agent were employed in friendly negotiations with the Shan and Kakyen Hill chiefs and the Panthay Chief of Momein. His efforts in the former direction were quite successful, and when matters have quieted down at Momein, as they bid fair to do, the route over the hills from Bhamo will be comparatively safe.

The Burman peasantry object, as a rule, to take leases even for a few years, in spite of the liberal terms offered. Those however who wish to do so are free to cultivate the waste lands rent-free for a certain period, after which the land so cultivated is rented at one-half the rates levied on the older farms. Crime in British Burmah increased by 14 per cent. of non-bailable and 22 per cent. of bailable offences. The increase in the former was chiefly owing to thefts. Of 41,555 persons tried, 52·50 per cent. were convicted. Cattle-stealing was unusually rife in the Pegu Division. There was an increase also in civil suits, whose average value was from £7 to £7. 10s., and their average cost 18s. The want of a Judicial Commissioner to relieve the Chief Commissioner of many small details is widely felt. There were 17,630 prisoners in six jails and seven lock-ups. Their increased number is ascribed to the growing prosperity of the people, which leads them to aid in putting down the dacoits instead of regarding them as local heroes. There is no class of boy criminals in British Burmah, thanks to the moral effects of the monastic teaching there, and to the general well-doing of the lower orders in a province where unskilled labour is worth a shilling a-day. Barring one great outbreak in the Rangoon Jail, the behaviour of the convicts was generally good, and the ticket-of-leave system worked well. The average cost of each prisoner was £5. 16s. only, or 19s. below the average for the five previous years. Highway robberies were less frequent than usual, although the 5,703 policemen employed in Burmah are said to be too few for the growing population. There is a great deal of gambling in the country, which the local authorities would check by extending the range of an Act now confined to towns. We hope the authorities will not be gratified. Our way of meddling with native habits and vices savours more of Mrs. Grundy than of wise statesmanship.

Three lighthouses were built during the year out of imperial and three more with local funds. The Henzadah Embankment was finished, and good progress made in the building of jails. Plans and estimates were provided for a railway from Rangoon to Prome; and a scheme for carrying out a complete system of roads in a province which, being thrice the size of Scotland, can boast of only 655 miles of road in all, was laid before the Government. In 14 dispensaries 38,564 persons were treated. A medical college is much wanted for the instruction of the native Burmese. In 182 schools 6,347 pupils were taught at a cost of £18,620. It must however be remembered that few Burman boys are unable to read and write, for at least 50,000 boys are taught in the 4,000 monastic schools, which the Government proposes to bring into connection with its own school system when it can see its way thereto.

Madras has a population of about 27 millions within an area considerably larger than that of the British Islands, divided for administrative purposes into 21 districts. Its total revenue in 1869 was a little over eight millions, of which nearly four and a half millions were derived from the land. Salt yielded £1,164,736, Excise duties £570,022, Customs £276,485, and Stamps £406,482. The year in question was a fairly prosperous one, with regard to weather; but the value of the foreign trade, £12,442,979, fell short by £400,000 of that for 1868-9; cotton and wool being the chief causes of the decline. Of the money spent on public works part went to the deepening of the tanks for supplying Madras with water, part to the diverting of the Peryaur river from its westward outlet into the Vigay on the Eastern coast, and a good deal more to the making of roads from Wynaad inland and to the coast. Several canals for navigation were also completed or brought nearer completion. The Madras Pier was repaired, and some little progress was made in deepening the Paumben Channel through the Gulf of Manaar.

Crime increased during the year, but chiefly in the direction of petty offences and contempts of legal process. In the graver crimes of murder and robbery there was a marked decrease. Of all offences committed, 65·4 per cent. were brought to trial, and of these 78 per cent. ended in convictions. In 37 jails 9,933 prisoners were daily confined. The system of enabling convicts to earn some remissions of their sentences has worked well. The 3,134 schools in Madras were attended by 105,455 scholars, or one to every 251 of the people. Of towns under municipal government there were 44, three of which were added in 1869. The people are beginning, it appears, to appreciate the benefits of improved conservancy, and of keeping roads in good repair. The feudatory State of Travancore was well-managed during the year by its Rajah and his able vizier, Sir Madava Rao.

Bombay, with an area of 206,000 square miles, about the size of France, has a population of about fourteen millions, and the native States around it about six millions more. Of the 39,868 crimes committed, 36,573 were tried, and out of 75,468 prisoners, 34,233 were acquitted. A daily average of 6,378 prisoners were confined at a net cost of £5. 18s. 4d. for the year. In Sind, where the people are less wealthy than in Bombay proper, the criminal offences were more than twice as numerous as the civil suits. In the southern division of Bombay the crops were damaged by unseasonable rains. The famine relief works in Kandeish had to be kept up during most part of the year, and the immigration from Rajpootana caused some distress in Ahmedabad. The land-revenue for the whole province amounted to £3,796,373, an excess of more than £100,000 on the previous year. A slight decrease in the salt-revenue was owing to the enhanced rate of duty. This frequent raising of the salt-tax seems to us an unpardonable blunder. In 1837 it was only a shilling a maund; in 1859 the tax was doubled; tripled in 1865, it has now risen to 3s. 7½d. a maund, a rate which cannot be justified either on economical or other grounds. The only possible justification for such a tax is that it should not be felt by the masses; but the present rates manifestly tend to check consumption of a universal necessary of life. A rupee a maund would probably represent the value of eight annas thirty years ago; but perhaps an eight-anna duty would in the long run yield as much, if not more.

The opium revenue of Bombay was half a million higher than the year before, and higher on the whole than any previous year except 1860 and 1862. The great bulk of the opium came from Indore. The foreign trade of Sindh for the year was worth £4,157,044, or £100,000 less than in 1868. The year's outlay on public works from Imperial funds amounted to £1,380,584, a good deal of which was spent on "fine public buildings" at Bombay, and on agricultural works. In 2,717 schools and colleges 167,904 pupils were educated during the year. As seven or eight different languages have to be taught in the Bombay schools, the cost of instruction must be greatly enhanced. The area of land under cotton in Bombay was 4,544,702 acres, or eleven hundred thousand more than in 1868. Of cotton exported from Bombay there were 1,017,290 bales out of one and a-half million actually raised.

Four of the Kattiwar Chiefs died during the year, leaving the British Government in charge of three out of the four States during the minority of the respective heirs. The mischief done by the locusts in Kattiwar was greatly compensated by the large imports of grain from Persia; and later in the year a heavy winter-crop made full amends for the previous scarcity. There was a general decrease of crime in the province, and some useful public works were finished during the year. In Kutch also and Pahlanpore the crops suffered much from locusts. The chief event connected with the flourishing Mahratta State of Kolhapore was the untimely death of its promising young Rajah.

PAPER MONEY IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—I beg to invite your attention to the Paper Currency in India. Its enormous increase is by many attributed to the increase in trade, and to the confidence of natives in Government Securities.

The chief cause of the increase has been overlooked, viz., the employment of currency notes all over India in lieu of bills of exchange.

Previous to the Mutiny in 1857 exchange operations were carried on by bills called hoondees, issued by native bankers and merchants. These queer little rectangular pieces of paper, written in Mahajunee, a language unknown to thousands of those who bought them, were in great demand. But our imperfect bankruptcy laws and our laws regarding oaths have tempted many eminent native firms to declare themselves bankrupt, though their creditors feel assured that they have fradulently concealed some of their assets. I cannot recall to memory a single instance of a native bankrupt having been punished in the Mofussil for fraud; no assistance is offered to creditors to prosecute them, and the form of oath prescribed by Government is worse than useless in checking perjury. The Indian Government has authoritatively prohibited the administering of those oaths which bind the conscience of the natives, and by breaking which the perjurer loses the respect of his kinsmen and neighbours. In London a Mahommedan is sworn on the Koran. In India a judge would be liable to be dismissed if he were to dare to administer an oath in this form.

The result of native perjury and fraud has been the loss of the credit of many native banks; their hoondees do not circulate either widely or freely, and both Europeans and Natives prefer to buy Government currency notes for the purpose of remitting money from one part of India to another.

But this is not the proper use to which currency notes should be applied. Commercial bills bearing interest, and payable on fixed dates, are the legitimate means of exchange operations. Currency notes which bear no interest, and are exchangeable for silver on demand, are sure to be forced back upon Government, whenever political or commercial affairs may check their quick circulation. A panic may cause notes to the value of several millions sterling to be suddenly presented at the Government Treasuries to be exchanged for silver. Has Government a sufficient quantity of silver coin in readiness? In India a stoppage of payment in coin for only a few weeks would cause irretrievable injury to the credit of the Imperial Exchequer.—Your obedient servant, T.

INDIAN VOLUNTEERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—It might benefit those interested in the defence of India to see the volunteers of the different Presidencies enumerated and classified, say once in twelve months, in the columns of your paper. Not a line on the subject ever appears to be communicated to you.—Yours faithfully, Gwalior.

PORT BLAIR.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—In your last paper you gave us the fag end of a correspondence regarding fisheries at Port Blair, and not one line leading to the subject in question have any of us seen in your columns. Do not think me exacting if I ask for the first part, as well as for some little insight into the habits and customs of the convicts on that settlement during the last six or seven years. If you wish for it I can give you interesting data regarding them from private visitors before that period; but they are such a curious race that I am sure some few words regarding them will always be acceptable to your readers.

Appointing a brilliant man like General Stewart to manage such a colony is simply an insult to a man who deserves so well of his country. It is a hard case if he cannot have a Division found for him, and I am quite sure Government can find plenty of men fitted to take charge of convicts.—Yours faithfully, Gwalior.

25th Sept., 1871.

[We gave the general conclusions drawn by Lord Mayo from the correspondence in question. It was impossible to print the preceding letters at full length. With regard to convict life in Port Blair we shall be happy to hear again from "Gwalior;" but the subject has not been entirely overlooked in our columns. —Ed. A. I. M.]

Spirit of the Indian Press.

PROMOTIONS BY SENIORITY.

The Indian Daily News observes that Mr. Campbell is at the present moment, and promises for some time to come, to be the cause of some unpleasant feeling in the Bengal Civil Service; and it has been found convenient to hold him responsible for some departures from the rule of regulating promotions by seniority, which has been openly and repeatedly infringed with impunity by his predecessors. As a matter of fact, no rule of this description actually exists; although, in the absence of any hard and fast legal provision for the regulation of promotions in the Civil Service, seniority has undeniably been allowed to stratify mediocrities, whenever special merit has not forced itself upwards through them. The effort to prove that, in cases of this kind prescription has assumed the force of law, can at best but land us in a mere assumption; in all other respects it is apt to appear ridiculous in the eyes of those who believe that, in the absence of any definite rule possessing the force of law, frequent departures from mere routine may fairly be accepted as evidence of an earnest desire on the part of the ruler, during whose incumbency they occur, to realise his personal responsibilities. At any rate, it is obviously unfair to tax with jobbery a ruler who, being personally unacquainted with the majority of his subordinates, selects those for preferment who have furnished him with some proof of the possession of exceptional ability. And we hold it to be unjust to condemn any ruler who, being responsible for his own administration, selects his own instruments; at all events, any such condemnation is premature, until the instruments preferentially selected have proved failures. We understand that Mr. Campbell is not enamoured of Bengal, and that he suspects those who have been nourished on her traditions, and there is reason to fear that his aversion from Bengal civilianism may occasionally lead him to commit serious indiscretions; but his position is altogether a peculiar one, in which the honest fulfilment of duty has been rendered very difficult by the obstruction which he has encountered in several quarters; and he may fairly expect the public to hold aloof from any agitation that may be started by disappointed candidates for office, and to judge him, not by their woes, but by his own failure or success.

GOVERNMENT IN THE HILLS.

Indian Public Opinion hold that the example of resisting the enervating effects of the climate and steady adherence to duty must be shown by the superior officers of the State, not preached from cool sanitaria. The Commander-in-Chief emphatically should be with his men, knowing what they have to bear, and feeling with them the trials of India, and so give force to exhortations which come with very little effect from a climate which has no trials whatever. It is not willingly that we have come to this conclusion. At first sight, and for many years, it seemed to us that the country really gained by the hill system, but the more we know of the country, of official life, of the feeling of the natives, the more persuaded do we feel that the best apologies for it are the points in which it most fails. We do not want that frightful energy which paralyses the natives with its shocks. If there is any lack of energy, a most abundant reserve lay in the India Office in England, and it is to check that influence rather than increase it which is the duty of the Indian Imperial Government. There has been too much zeal, too much theory, a great deal too many of the refinements of civilisation forced on the people which they cannot appreciate or even understand, and when it is applied the general effect is like a couple of camels harnessed to an English barouche to go over a rough village road. It goes a few miles and then breaks down, and the old hackery with two bullocks has to do the business after all. First improve your roads, and then you may try and put a better article to run on them, or rather the natives will put it on for themselves; but it is nonsense, wondering while you stand on a macadamised road and never go to the right or left of it, why natives will stick to their old customs. Changes must grow up gradually, and amongst the natives themselves; it is no good "nagging" at them and trying to trip them up here, there, and everywhere by laws and regulations. Let there be no doubt that they will not progress at the five-year rate, and if possible let those who hold office for that period forget it. Let them take the work that comes to hand, do it and be content with that. But let it be done in the midst of the people, not behind their backs as it were, and let relaxation be taken in a bond-fide manner for two or three months when required. Do not let there be an opportunity for an unconscientious Viceroy or Lieutenant-Governor to make his five years' tour of office a series of pleasure trips and shooting tours. Let them live amongst the people, and set an example to the officials whom they control, and who in their turn are an example to the people, for like begets like.

THE EVIDENCE ACT.

The Englishman thinks that on the whole this Evidence Code will greatly increase the chances of the real facts of a case coming to light. It gets rid of an infinite number of impediments in the way of a searching judicial inquiry, and tears down the screens which at present stand between the judge and the truth. It clearly defines the duties of the presiding officer, and it recognises the true facts of his position in an Indian court. His functions have hitherto been exercised de facto rather than de jure. In many cases the special character of these functions has been exaggerated and overstepped by district officers; in many, they have not been properly appreciated by them. The present Act will put a stop to such errors, whether they are mistakes of excess or defect. Its provisions do not appear to have been designed, either to give the maximum chance of escape to criminals, as the English rules of evidence do, or to unduly strengthen the hands of the public prosecutor as in France. Their one principle seems to be to get at the truth. They instruct a judge what he should exclude and what he should admit; and, taken as a whole, the Code will form the most memorable effort towards the simplification of justice which the Indian Legislature has yet produced.

Bengal.

MANNERS AND CUSTOMS IN ORISSA.

The peasants have a curious explanation for the absence of garden cultivation and fruit trees, which forms a salient feature of the country. In the regular settled districts of Orissa, every homestead has its little ring of vegetable ground about it; but in Khurdha such green spots are seldom met with, except in the villages of the p'oughing Brahmins. The common cultivators say that from time immemorial they have considered it lucky at a certain festival, answering to the Lakshmi-puja, in Bengal, to be abused by one's neighbour. With a view to giving ample cause of offence they have been accustomed to cut the fruit trees, and trample the gardens which may be in their vicinity, and so court fortune by bringing down the wrath of the injured owner. The Brahmans highly approved of this superstition, as it practically left them the sole possessors of garden stuff, and accordingly raised the value of their produce. In other parts of Orissa, under native rule, no one but a Brahman might plant a cocoa-nut tree, and this profitable fruit was accordingly added to the monopolies of the priestly class.

The whole Orissa population have an era of their own, equally distinct from the Christian, or the Mussulman, or the Hindu modes of reckoning time. They date all documents, from the most important to the most trivial, according to the year of the reign of the Rajah—now a private young gentleman living in the English headquarters of Puri district. The first, sixth, tenth, and twenty-sixth year, and so on, are deemed unlucky, and never counted in the era. A new Rajah accordingly begins in his second ank or year to reign in the affections of his people, and throughout three great British districts our subjects go on reckoning events in this curious fashion.

Orissa has always been prolific of prophecies; prophecies in which the people firmly believe, and which sometimes bring about their own fulfilment. Such predictions often cause, not only widespread discomfort and alarm, but a very serious loss of actual wealth. The Vaishnabs, or Vishnuvite mendicants and devotees, keep the manufacture and spread of these predictions in their own hands, and work them for their own purposes. For example, the income-tax touched in an unprecedented manner their math or monastery lands, and the unsettled feeling arising from the bewildering succession of a licence, and certificate, and an income-tax, the rate of which was changed from year to year, prepared the peasantry for portents and omens of the most extravagant sort. Among the spawn of prophecies which accordingly spread like wildfire through Orissa, one had eventually the honour of being noticed in the supplement to the Gazette at the end of last year. It ran somewhat as follows: "Take heed of the 13th ank (or year of the Raja's accession). In the 14th a great battle will take place. In the 15th there will be none left to eat. In the 17th the truth will come." Half a million of peasants went in fear and trembling for many months at the sound of these solemn words. The prediction of the general extermination of the people in the 15th year actually held some of the husbandmen back, at a very critical time, from giving the necessary amount of labour to their fields.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

Allahabad, Aug. 24.—The Maharajah of Gwalior has passed through, but not without having met with an accident. His Highness, it appears, had a conveyance with a pair of spirited horses waiting for him at the station. They, it is said, not appreciating the honour conferred on them, attempted to give his Highness a bath in the nearest ditch; they succeeded so far, I am told, as to get into water themselves, but the Maharajah was saved a ducking—perhaps something more serious—by the people about the place, among whom was a European employé of the railway company, who, I believe, lost a gold ring in his endeavours to be of service to the Maharajah, and all the recompense he got for his trouble and loss was a certificate to the effect that the man had been useful.—Delhi, Aug.—Lieutenant-Colonel Dickens, C.B., Assistant Commissary General, 1st class, has been appointed principal Commissariat Officer of the Camp of Exercise; Lieutenant-Colonel Sibley, who did not retire, but has returned from leave, is to be Deputy of the Lower Circle; Major McKenzie, Executive Officer, Fort William, goes home on leave. The Commissariat Department is at present preparing for the expedition against the Looshais. Ensign Cooper and Conductor Smith are, I believe, to be tried by Court-martial in connection with the Peshawur Court-martial.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Lahore, Aug. 28.—The men committed by Colonel Hall, deputy commissioner of Umritsur, to the sessions for the late butcher outrage at Umritsur, are to be tried to-day and to-morrow by Major Davies, the officiating commissioner. There is very little doubt that conviction will result. The accused are chiefly Kukas, the followers of Ram Sing, a Guru who sets himself up as the exponent of the orthodox principles of the Sikh religion as laid down by the Guru Nanuck, the founder of the Sikh religion. These Kukas are scattered all over the Punjab, but are chiefly to be found in the Ludiana, Jullunder, Ferozepur, and Lahore districts. The Guru's headquarters are at a village some little distance from Ludiana. It is said in many quarters that both the Umritsur and Raikote murders were committed at the instigation of the said Ram Sing, and should such be proved to be the case, it will be a matter of, I fancy, peculiar difficulty for the Government to know how to act. A prosecution and conviction of the Guru would in all probability incense his followers and cause disaffection, if not more, on their part, whereas, should he really be guilty, and no proceedings be taken against him, the Mussulman community, who are the aggrieved in this case, would very probably show signs of resentment by taking the law into their own hands, and wreaking their vengeance on the whole body of Sikhs, whether Kukas or not.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Death of General Kinleside.—We regret to hear of the sudden death of Major-General R. Raikes Kinleside, R.A., at Mussoorie, on Sunday, Aug. 27.

A Wise Move.—The Viceroy in Council, Indian Daily News says, has approved of the proposal made by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief for diminishing the charge for the carriage of camp equipage by rail when regiments are marching in relief.

Baboos going to England.—Baboo Sree Nath Dutt and Aghor Nath Chatterjee, of the Presidency College, and formerly of the Dacca College, leave Calcutta early to-morrow morning by the P. and O. steamer Sumatra, for England. They are going out as Gilchrist scholars, and they intend to compete for the Civil Service. Both belong to the Brahmo Somaj.—Indian Mirror, Aug. 26.

Oudh and Rohilkund Railway.—We learn that the directors of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway intend to set up a new line in conjunction with the Benares line. This line will pass through all the agricultural districts. The termination will be at Ghazeepore. Mr. Mr. W. Hunt, the present assistant engineer of Akburpore, is appointed resident engineer of the new line.—Fyzabad Advertiser.

Distress caused by the Overflow of the Ganges.—A correspondent of a contemporary, writing from Monghyr, gives a painful account of the distress being caused by the overflow of the Ganges in that neighbourhood. In some parts the country is like an open sea. Laul Durwasa, a part of Mongnyr lying on the north-east side of the city, has fallen a victim to the fury of the stream; and the destruction of houses, cattle, and property generally has been very great.—Examiner.

The Coming Eclipse.—It is said that Lieutenant-Colonel Tennant, of the Royal Engineers, at present officiating Mint master of Calcutta, is to be deputed to Madras to make observations, and to take photographs, of the solar eclipse in December next, and that the Government of India has sanctioned an expenditure of about Rs. 15,000 for the purpose. The above-mentioned officer is to make his observations from the Neilgherry hills. The Surveyor-general has been instructed to place all the necessary instruments at the disposal of the gallant officer.

Native Buyers of Tea.—Native traders enter into tea speculation briskly, as evidenced by the fact of more than 200,000 lbs. of last season's out-turn having been purchased by them direct from planters. This circumstance, coupled with the increased demand for Indian tea at home, are sure indications of a favourable prospect and healthy competition. We are inclined to believe cultivation will be further developed by the stimulus afforded by a direct trade with Russia, which is likely to open soon to our planters, the Suez Canal offering facilities which were not known before. Altogether, there appear to be great hopes of future success.—Bengal Times.

Mr. Campbell in Assam.—Advices have reached us from Gowalpara that Mr. Campbell arrived there on the afternoon of the 11th August, and, with his private secretary, made a hurried inspection of the treasury, and a few other public offices, as well as of the European quarter of the station, leaving for Gowhatty the following morning. The opulent and respectable native residents who, it appears, expected to receive his Honour at their houses, felt greatly disappointed at his not staying with them longer. We think similar disappointment will be felt throughout the province of Assam, as Mr. Campbell's tour promises to be even much shorter than was originally anticipated. We cannot expect that a flying visit will result in any great good.—Bengal Times.

Third Class Fares.—Baboo Siva Prasad, C.S.I., wrote in December last a memorandum (which we noticed at the time) on the accommodation for Indian ladies in third-class, railway carriages. From this has resulted a correspondence which is now published in the N. W. P. Gazette. It commences with a letter from the local Government asking for material improvements in third-class accommodation, and ends with the following expression of opinion by the Government of Bengal:—"The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the accommodation provided for native third-class females is sufficient, and the better class of females can always secure seclusion and bath-room accommodation by travelling second-class as befits their rank and position." The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is undoubtedly right. Third-class accommodation is intended for third-class females.—Pioneer.

A Conspiracy in the Punjab.—There is every reason to believe that the movement which resulted in the recent Kooka outrages was much more widespread than appeared on the surface. At all points of the investigation traces of a conspiracy crop up which seems to have come to a premature denouement. It is quite true, as a down country paper remarked recently, that warning letters have been received by certain officials and others in the Punjab, and though this of itself may prove nothing more than that a certain excitement (perhaps fear) exists among some classes of natives—even the Baboo class, if you will, as the Indian Daily News suggests—the old proverb that "where there is smoke there is fire" should not be forgotten or despised. We propose to return to the subject on the conclusion of the trials at Umritsur. In the meantime we call attention to the fact that the Arch Kooka Ram Singh, though compromised by the recent trials, does not seem to be even placed under surveillance. There is a strong feeling that this man should be included in the inquiry.—Indian Public Opinion.

The Death of Lieutenant Teed.—Our readers will have read of the name of Lieutenant Teed, a young officer of much promise serving with the 18th Native Infantry at Goruckpore, who was accidentally drowned while boating on the lake at Domingurh, a favourite place for pleasure parties, about three miles from Goruckpore. On this occasion three gentlemen, their wives, and Mr. Teed embarked in two boats late in the afternoon. In the boat with Mr. Teed there were the joint magistrate and his wife, but the former went over into the other boat as soon as they reached it, leaving the lady and Mr. Teed in the smaller craft, which was almost immediately after upset in a sudden and violent squall of wind and rain. There was a life-buoy in the boat, which the poor young fellow generously made ever to his companion, and thus saved her life at the cost of his own. Every possible effort was made by the remainder of the party to find him as soon as it was ascertained that he was missing, but the rain was so heavy that this was for a long time impossible. The search was continued to a late hour, but the body was not recovered till the following day, when it was committed to the grave with military honours.—Pioneer.

Game in the Central Provinces.—The Central Provinces offer great attractions to the sportsman, as both the forests and plains abound with game of all varieties. The best districts for shooting are Bandara (to the east of Nagpoor, where deer and jungle pigs are so numerous that great injury is caused by them to the crops), Chattisgarh, Nimar, Upper Godavari, and Wardha. In the Chattisgarh district tigers and leopards are found in the hot weather months in the vicinity of the several streams and rivers which intersect the country; in the hills bears also are numerous. In the hills to the north the elephant, till lately sole master of the position, ranged over a picturesque tract of country, and so serious had the devastations of these animals become, that in 1864 a Government kheda was established for their capture. Up to 1867, 117 elephants were caught. To the east of the district the wild buffalo may be pursued over plains stretching as far as the eye can reach, and in every direction the antelope, the spotted deer, and other game may be met with. Several fine specimens of wild buffalo heads are to be seen in the Nagpur Museum; some of them were shot at Chattisgarh. The buffalo—a distinct animal from the bison—is also found in Mandla, a district partly inhabited by the Baigas, an aboriginal race, who are good sportsman, and capital shots with their bows and arrows. Their skill in the use of the axe is extraordinary, and they often knock over small deer, hares, and peacocks with it. In the rains they run down sambar and spotted deer with their dogs, killing them in the water with their axes, when brought to bay. In Nimar, the most western district of the Central Provinces, tigers are numerous, but game and cattle being easily procurable, seldom become man-eaters. Bears, panthers, and wolves abound, and the Upper Tapti valley is a favourite haunt of the bison. In Upper Godavari bears, bison, and wild buffalo are found. The bulls frequently follow the herds of tame buffaloes, and instances are known of their having bred with the domesticated cow-buffaloes. In the Wardha districts, the bustard, black partridge, and two descriptions of grouse abound.—Star of India.

IMPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 2.—A considerable business was done early in the week in Grey Goods and Twist; prices, however, remain much the same as last quoted. Printed Cambrics: The season has commenced, but so far only a moderate business has been done, and prices for the most part have not been satisfactory. Turkey Red Goods are very dull, and prices are weak. Coloured Twist is unchanged.

EXPORTS.—Calcutta, Sept. 2.—Jute: Floods have stopped all traffic on the Eastern Bengal Railway this week; the supply of the new crop has been nearly exhausted, and prices have generally risen. Serajgunge, good to fine, Rs. 4-8 to 5-8; Naraingunge, Rs. 4 to 4-12; Dourah, Rs. 3-10 to 3-14. Saltpetre: Towards the end of the week there has been a slight fall in prices, though a fair amount of business has been done for shipment to Europe. Rice: For inferior sorts for shipment to England the demand has been large at Rs. 1-12. Linseed: There is but little demand, and prices remain as quoted last week. Rapeseed: There has been rather a better demand, and prices have somewhat hardened. Raw Silk: Stocks are nearly exhausted, and what little business has been done has been chiefly at lower rates.—say 4 to 8 annas, owing to the banks having raised their rates of exchange. The holders of the best stock, however, stand out for full prices.

Money and Share Markets, Sept. 2.—The Bank of Bengal has made no change in the rates of interest or discount. Money is easy. Government Paper has slightly advanced. Exchange has been rather unsettled, and closes ¼ per cent. below last mail's quotations.

Madras.

A Rumour.—There is a rumour in Madras at present—very likely to be incorrect, we should think—that all the British cavalry regiments of the Madras Presidency are to be sent home next year, and that for the future only infantry regiments will garrison that part of India.

Death of a Princess.—We learn from Malabar that her Highness the Padinjare Kovilagom Tamburatti, or the Western Palace Princess of Calicut, died on the 22nd August. This is one of the two Royal houses of Malabar whence the ancient and still existing Zamorin dynasty is drawn, and the greatest and most wealthy landlords of Malabar would appear to be the Eastern, or Veyake, and Western or Podinjare Kovilagom, families.

An Application for a Situation.—Amongst the 600 applications for the post of enumerators under the Madras Census was the following:—

Go humble lines and plead my defence,
Arm your request with my obedience,
Gain an acceptance, joy will abound,
To find my writing with your liking crowned.
My master unto me has shown his skill,
Here is the product of my hand and quill,
All my benefactors who wish to see,
Here is the piece of writing thus performed by me.

—Madras Athenæum. A. Sabapathy Naicker.

Capture of a Gang of Dacoits.—Government have rewarded Police Inspector Verdarajooloo, of the North Arcot District, with the sum of Rs. 50, for having captured a gang of sixteen dacoits, who were for a long time the terror of the people about, by committing great depredations in the districts of Salem and North and South Arcot. Two villagers also of the North Arcot District, who displayed great bravery in resisting the sixteen dacoits, are to be rewarded, each with a silver bangle of the value of Rs. 25.

Indent for Cats.—Pussy's prospects are looking up in Mysore, as we understand that two cats have been budgeted for, for the destruction of rats in the Divisional Cutcherry. Their official duties will, we are assured, be anything but light at first, and we accordingly trust their batta and allowances will be commensurate with the heavy responsibility entailed on them. We fear it will be hard work for the cats on their official assumption of office, but after a time their duties will no doubt insensibly get lighter.—Bangalore Herald.

Mutiny at Pondicherry.—There has been a mutiny amongst the sepoys at Pondicherry. Taking advantage of the absence of the commandant, who had gone on a tour of inspection to Karikal, the soldiers broke into the orderly room and destroyed the punishment roll. The corps was confined to barracks until the offenders should be delivered up, and the wives of the Mussulmans, furious at being deprived of the society of their husbands, attempted to carry the barracks by storm. They were repulsed by the second officer in command, Captain Castellini, and the revolt has now been entirely quelled.—Madras Mail.

Madras Irrigation Company.—The main canal of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company was completed and inspected about two months ago by the Government engineers, and 188 miles of canal, with three feet of water, are open to the public. It was, we believe, at first proposed to let in water to the full depth of eight feet, but it was feared that the embankments would not stand the pressure. The canal extends from Soonkasala, off Kurnool, to within three miles of Cuddapah town. The ryots are disposed to utilise the water, but we hear that proper arrangements have not as yet been made to supply them with it. The whole staff of engineers has been thrown out of employ, with the exception of those who are to be retained for what is called conservancy purposes.—Madras Standard.

Lecture by a Hindu Lady.—We learn that there was a respectable gathering in the house of Mr. Veerapermall Pillai at Tondiarpett, on the evening of Friday last, when Sowbagiavathe Sreerungammal delivered a lecture in Telugu, her subject being "Human Being." Among the gentlemen present were Mr. D. Carmichael, Mr. R. P. Campbell, the Hon. Gagapathi Row, Mr. Ramachendra Row, Mr. Ranganada Shastri, &c. After alluding to the works and attributes of God, the lecturer passed on to the subject of native female education, and impressed on her hearers the necessity there was for the education of the females of this country. We are also informed that, agreeably to a suggestion by Mr. Streenavasa Row, when the lady delivered her second lecture, there was a gathering of native ladies who assembled in a room adjoining the hall in which the lecture was delivered.—Madras Times, Aug. 28.

War amongst the Karennees of Burmah.—From recent intelligence communicated to us from a quarter which we have no reason to doubt, we understand that affairs in Karannee are in a state of ferment. The chiefs are up in arms, and have commenced to wage an internecine war, which may prove disastrous, not only to these native states but to those who are connected with them in trade. The now disturbed state of the frontier, partly by these hostile feuds and partly by dacoities, only strengthens the suggestion made some time ago, that the establishment of a residency at Zimmay is a necessity which cannot be overlooked without imperilling in a serious manner the trade of the province and the safety of the people. Foresters who have advanced heavy sums of money for timber are unable to get delivery in consequence of these hostilities; and unless protection is afforded them by the Government all forest operations must come to a standstill. We trust therefore that some stringent measures will be adopted to avert the impending evil.—Moulmein Advertiser.

Coal Mine in the Nizam's Territory.—The Supplement to the Gazette of India of Sept. 2 contains copies of a correspondence regarding the discovery of a coal mine in the territories of the Nizam, about 224 miles from Juggiapet, and ninety-six from Budracholum. A tehsildar who went to inspect the mine reports that it is situated in the rocky bed of the forest stream called Goondralawag, which, flowing from the border of Dewurlah towards Goondral, in the Talooncha estate, falls into the Godavery river. The coal is reported to crop out and lie very near the surface and on the bank of the river in large masses or heaps. Where the tehsildar had caused the bed of the river to be dug, a stratum of coal was found so near as one yard below the surface, occupying a space of ten yards. He also traced a vein of coal extending along the bank of the stream to a distance of a quarter of a mile. The report gives further interesting details, and, judging from those details, and from the specimens of coal produced, there seems to be no doubt of the discovery of a real and extensive coal mine. With a view to its being worked and utilised hereafter, the Minister has given orders for the locality to be visited and examined by a competent and experienced person; but it is to be regretted that the coal viewer, Mr. Coulson, whose services he obtained about a year ago from England, died a short time since. The Nizam's Government has consented to give a reward of Rs. 2,000 to the fortunate discoverer.

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA.

We (Eastern Budget) have received the following interesting letter from a correspondent at Teheran, dated Aug. 7:—"At Mesched, the capital of the province of Khorassan—a town of 120,000 inhabitants—80,000 people have perished of disease and hunger, 20,000 have fled, and the remainder have for the most part been seized and carried away into slavery by the numerous Turcoman and Affghan hordes who are perambulating the country. There are neither enough men nor cattle left for cultivating the fields, and this once flourishing province is now a wilderness. In other parts of the country, the harvest, notwithstanding the drought, has on the whole turned out pretty good; but the price of provisions is enormous, and much higher than last year, when there was still a quantity of food in store from former years. The chief cause of the evil is, that the monopoly of the sale of corn is in the hands of the grandees; yet the Government makes no attempt to disturb this monopoly, and carries its extraordinary indifference so far as even to refuse the offers of assistance made by Russia and the Government of British India. Such conduct can only have one result, and it is more than probable that when the winter comes, and this year's scanty stock of food is consumed, the starving people will revenge themselves on their selfish rulers by acts of pillage and murder. Already there have been some small outbreaks in various provinces. In Shiraz there has been an insurrection against the governor, Prince Yenim-ed-Daole, one of the Shah's sons, and the insurgents loudly demanded, with arms in their hands, his instant dismissal. In Tabriz a similar insurrection has taken place against the Crown Prince, Muzaffired-Din Mirza, and two parties have been formed, one demanding a Russian occupation of the province of Adherbeidschan; the other the removal of the Crown Prince and the appointment of Prince Abbas Mirza, brother to the Shah, in his place. Abbas Mirza has for the last twenty years been in exile at Bagdad, and although the Shah has pardoned him and permitted him to return to Teheran, he has not taken advantage of the permission, fearing to be poisoned. Should he now return as Governor of Tabriz, he would probably prove a dangerous rival to the Shah, with whom he formerly competed for the Persian throne. Under these circumstances, the Emperor of Russia invited the Shah to an interview at Tiflis; but there was a difficulty in arranging the preliminaries, and the interview did not take place. Meanwhile, the Shah went on his usual hunting expedition, leaving behind him an unpopular regent, a detested Government, and a mutinous army. The general discontent increased during his absence, and when the news arrived that he was about to return, several thousands of people assembled, with their heads covered with dust and ashes, before the gate of the palace, uttering seditious cries and loading his name with abusive epithets. This so alarmed the Shah that, instead of coming back to his capital, he withdrew to his country seat in the vicinity. The mob was dispersed by the troops, and a decree was posted up in the streets ordering bread to be sold at a fixed price; but this only increased the popular indignation, as there was no bread to be had. The Shah then ordered the Vizier of the town to be put in irons, tied to a donkey's tail, and dragged bare-headed and bare-footed through the bazaar at mid-day. After this sentence had been executed the head baker and several of his subordinates were burnt to death in their own ovens. These executions appeased the people for the time, but they are still without food, and we are in momentary expectation of another riot. The intelligence has just arrived here that the greater part of the town of Tabriz, which is already devastated by the cholera, has been destroyed by an inundation."

STATION TALK.

Callian, Aug. 29.—Cholera has been raging at Callian for the last fortnight, and out of 131 cases which occurred up to the end of the last week, seventy-six proved fatal. The municipality is engaged in cleansing the place; and Callian is very fortunate in having the assistance of the present sub-assistant surgeon, Mr. Nusserwanjee Dhunjeebhoy, who has been most painstaking, and has incessantly been rendering his assistance (even without being called) to all who have unfortunately been attacked. Though the people have been terribly alarmed at the epidemic, the presence of the worthy doctor inspires the people with some confidence, inasmuch as they are sure of getting timely medical assistance readily. This is a great consolation to the people at this critical time.

Aurungabad, Aug. 27.—It is now three o'clock, and no signs of the Bombay mail, which usually arrives at six A.M. A trooper came in at eleven this morning and reported that it had been robbed at a distance of fourteen coss from this, and that two passengers as well as the driver had been beaten. The mail contractor's son (Cowasjee) started off on a fresh cart to the spot to bring in the mail, and I suppose it will be six o'clock or later perhaps before it arrives. Seven P.M.—Cowasjee has just returned with his wounded driver, who had received two sword-cuts on the arm. There was only one passenger; he is dangerously wounded about the head, and is being brought in on a charpoy. He is a rich native from Hindustan, and has been robbed of many hundred rupees. He is not expected to live. No trace of the mail-bags and a banghy parcel. General Abbott has sent out some of the cavalry to look for the robbers and mail-bags, &c. This letter, which will be posted now, will leave about six o'clock tomorrow morning.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Kurrachee, Aug. 29.—An accident happened yesterday morning. Dr. John Robert Miller, the deputy inspector-general of hospitals, was out inspecting the several hospitals under his control at Kurrachee, and on his way home in a dog-cart the horse took fright, and suddenly swerving round the wheel went over a wall. The cart upset, and Dr. Miller was throw out with such force that he lay insensible for some time, until he was picked up by our civil surgeon, Mr. Hopkins. On being conveyed to his residence in camp—a distance of more than a mile from the gaol—he was examined, and it was discovered that several parts of his body were much bruised, especially his right shoulder, while his collar-bone was broken. He was promptly attended to by the Staff Surgeon (Dr. Thorpe), assisted by Doctors Keelan and Carswell, and he is now progressing as favourably as can be expected under the circumstances. As anticipated by me in a previous letter, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has confirmed Dr. Keelan in the medical charge of her Majesty's 2nd Belooch Regiment. I known but little of this gentleman personally, but the members of his profession speak highly of him and his abilities. The announcement that lately appeared in the Times of India about Colonel Widdicombe, Judge of the District Court of Kurrachee, having determined to go home for the benefit of his health, is correct. It is said that he intimated the other day to the members of the local Bar his intention of proceeding to England on two years' furlough by the first steamer in November next. Some people appear to think that on the Colonel's departure a member of the Civil Service will be sent from Bombay to act as Judge of the District Court, but in official circles it is confidently believed that Captain Grant, who holds a similar office at Hyderabad, will succeed him. Captain Grant has had considerable experience in the judicial branch of the service in Sind, and his appointment as Colonel Widdicombe's successor would be hailed with pleasure both by the Bar and the public.

Secunderabad, Aug. 23.—A sad accident happened this morning, Wednesday, being the day on which is usually held the division or brigade parades. All the troops in the station went out in brigades; the European infantry at Trimulgherry; the native infantry in the public parade-ground in front of the arsenal; the artillery in front of the old entrenchment; and a cavalry brigade out beyond the artillery butts. Owing to the rifle meeting, the races, and wet mornings, the European cavalry have not for some time past had their usual drills, and as for a cavalry brigade, there has not been one for at least twelve months. Therefore the officers commanding regiments had forgotten their drill, and the men were all out of hand; even the brigadier himself, I am told, gave a wrong word of command, which added to the confusion. At last the brigade got into line; it was then ordered to advance at a gallop, and then "charge" was sounded, when, alas, a horse in the centre squadron of the European cavalry fell. The horse got up immediately, the other horses had passed him, but the unfortunate rider in falling had got his foot jammed into the stirrup, so that when the horse rose the soldier was lying on the ground with one foot suspended in the stirrup. The horse, as soon as he got on his legs, seeing his companions galloping away, started off to rejoin them, when ensued a most horrible sight—at every stride the poor rider was sent hither and thither—the horse lashing out, and now and then catching the man's head with a "crash," sending the body off at a tangent; then for a short distance bump went the head on the hard rocks—for the charge took place over broken ground. The horse with his fearful burden galloped at least a quarter of a mile before he could be caught; the rider, it is needless to say, was dead. The back of his head, the two temples, were beaten in, and one eye knocked out.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

The Tragedy at Rajcote.—We learn that one of the five men wounded at Teeprea, in Rajcote, has died, and that the other four are still in a bad state. Colonel Anderson intends to report the matter to Government after getting reliable particulars.—Bombay Gazette.

The late Rajah of Kolhapoor's Diary.—We understand that Captain E. W. West, Assistant Political Agent, Kolhapoor, who accompanied the young Rajah to Europe, on the visit, which terminated in the death of that promising young chief at Florence, on the 29th November last, has submitted to the local authorities a proposal to publish the Rajah's Diary of his European tour.

Detention of the Mail Steamer "Columbian."—The mail steamer Columbian, which was timed to sail for Suez with the mails for England at five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon last, did not leave the harbour till Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock. The cause of the delay was that the steam-pipe gave way just as the steamer was about to start. Engineers from the Mazagon establishment were at once sent on board to assist the ship's engineers in repairing the damage, and it was only by their working hard all night that the vessel could be got off on Wednesday.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 5.

A Challenge Sent by the Ladies of Kirkee to the Ladies of Poona.—We understand that the ladies of Kirkee have sent a challenge to the ladies of Poona to row a four-oared race over a short course, on one of the regatta days. It is to be hoped that the Poona ladies will raise a crew and accept the challenge, treating the Kirkee ladies to a display of pretty figures and bewitching costumes. The Kirkee ladies crew is composed of No. 1 Mrs. Sadlier; No. 2 Mrs. Mathew; No. 3 Mrs. Eaton; No. 4 Mrs. Browne (stroke); (Cox. Captain Mathew, Royal Engineers). Their costume is as yet concealed from male eyes, but it is said to be white trimmed with the colours of the two ordnance corps,—red and blue—Poona Observer.

The Weather.—The weather, we are glad to report, has now taken a more seasonable turn. The stifling, muggy, October-like weather, entirely without rain, which we had had in Bombay for some time, culminated on Wednesday night last in a slight thunderstorm, and about seven o'clock on Thursday night another thunderstorm burst over the island, which continued for about three hours, accompanied by heavy rain. We have since then had a good deal of rain; and this change seems to support the prediction of nautical men that we shall have a good fall of rain in September. Berar has also, we are happy to learn, been visited by copious showers, so that the prospects of the cotton crop are now much better.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 5.

The Cotton Crop.—The following telegraphic information, regarding the state of the weather and the prospects of the cotton crop in the Central Provinces and the Berars, has been communicated to the Chamber of Commerce by Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac, Cotton Commissioner for those provinces:—"West Berar—From Deputy Commissioner, dated Akola, Sept. 4, 1871, 12 h. 21 min. Rainfall during the week 2·32 in.; agricultural prospects much better. East Berar (Oomrawuttee)—From Assistant to the Cotton Commissioner, dated Sept. 4, 1871, 13 h. 35 min. Rain has been falling more or less throughout the country since Wednesday last; the weather is very cloudy; rain is now falling here; the crops are all improving. West Berar (Sheagaum)—From Assistant to Cotton Commissioner, dated Sept. 4, 1871, 10·35 A.M. Since 31st 1·11 in. of rain has fallen here; rain has been general over the district, and more is expected; crops have made great progress in last few days, and if all continues well we may still get about an average outturn. Nagpore (Central Provinces)—From Assistant to Cotton Commissioner, dated Sept. 4, 1871, 12·30 P.M. During the last two days heavy showers have fallen; prospects good."

AN ENTERTAINMENT BY THE GAEKWAR'S SINGER.—An entertainment, unique in its kind, and of much excellence in its quality, was given in the Grant-road Theatre on Tuesday evening by Mowla Bux Beenkar, the chief singer at the Gaekwar's Court, and said to be the best native musician in Western India. Native music, as we are accustomed to hear it in Bombay, appears, to a European fresh from the operas, oratorios, and concerts of home, a most dismal and monotonous thing, though even at its worst we would back it against many English (so-called) "comic" songs, which have been well described as "most music-hall most melancholy." No strains of martial vigour, no sweetly attuned lays of love, greet the ear; but generally some low-pitched drawling air, of small compass, sung with a strong nasal twang, and sounding more like a lamentation over the dead than anything else. But beyond and above all this there appears to be a rich strata of native music apparently unknown to the commonalty here, which in the hands of a master—and Mowla Bux is one—is capable of producing strains of undoubted sweetness and melody. The entertainment on Tuesday night was put forward as an experiment, and succeeded beyond all expectation. The theatre was crowded in every part, chiefly with native gentlemen; and although a native audience is apt to be somewhat apathetic, yet the applause was at times most vociferous. A square piece of carpet was spread on the stage, and on this Mowla Bux and his accompanists sat cross-legged, and entertained the company for three hours with hardly any cessation, singing nearly all the time, and playing alternately on the satar, the been, and the jalataranga.—Times of India.

MUSCAT.—A Muscat news-report from Major Ross, Political Agent and acting Consul at Muscat, dated August 20, gives some interesting particulars of the recognition by the British Government of his Highness Syud Toorkee as the ruler of Muscat. The report states:—His Highness Syud Toorkee having returned on the 6th inst. from the Batinah coast, the recognition of his Highness as the ruler of Muscat by the British Government was intimated on the 8th. On the occasion the senior naval officers on the station and officers of H.M.S. Bullfinch, as well as the officers of H.M. schooner Constance, and other English residents accompanied the Political Agent to wait on his Highness, by whom they were received with due ceremony. The recognition having been intimated in the terms directed by the Government of India, his Highness was congratulated, after which a royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired from H.M.S. Bullfinch for his Highness the Sultan. The vessels in harbour were dressed, and the day kept as a holiday. His Highness entertained his European visitors at breakfast, and during the morning received congratulatory visits from deputations of the various classes. Many circumstances combined to render the event of the recognition of his Highness Syud Toorkee of special interest and importance for the people of Oman; and it is generally hoped and expected that it will mark the inauguration of a more peaceful era. The forts of Suweyk and Misnieh have been delivered to his Highness. No disturbances have occurred since the date of last report. On the 4th H.M.S. Bullfinch proceeded towards the Gulf, and H.M. surveying schooner proceeded on surveying duty.

RETIREMENT OF MR. R. H. SHOWELL.—At the close of a case in the Girgaum Police Court on the afternoon of 31st August, in which Mr. Cleveland had been engaged on behalf of the G. I. P. Railway Company, that gentleman rose, and, addressing the magistrate, Mr. Showell, said—Sir,—I have just been informed that this is the last day of your Worship's presiding in this Court. There being no other professional gentleman present, I take upon myself to say that your leaving Bombay will be a matter of regret to all of us. Speaking for myself, I have no hesitation in saying that, during the many years I have practised before you, I have met with the greatest courtesy on all occasions. I have always admired the patience which you have been enabled to bring to bear upon all cases taken before you, and I have envied the intimate knowledge you possess of the native languages and native character. For myself, therefore, and I venture to speak in their absence for other members of the profession, let me assure you that we wish you long life and happiness. The worthy magistrate replied that he felt flattered and gratified at the sentiments expressed by Mr. Cleveland, and assured him that he would not easily forget it. His Worship said he regretted leaving a place where he had spent so large a portion of his life, but he felt that he needed rest after thirty-seven years' service. He spoke with satisfaction of the way in which the professional gentlemen who appeared before him had acted, and his Worship said he had generally found them considerate and ready and willing to act in accordance with his suggestions, and that he should always have great pleasure in reflecting that, on leaving Bombay, he was on good terms with all members of the profession. His Worship said it was a curious circumstance that it was in the very next house that he first entered the Government service, forty-four years ago.

IMPORTS.—BOMBAY, Sept. 5.—A larger business has been done during the week in Grey Goods than we have had to report for several weeks back, and the prices of these descriptions are well maintained. The inquiry on account of the interior, which has been so long dormant, is now arising, and will, it is hoped, with the continued favourable rainfall, now become stronger. In Grey Yarns also a fair business has, from the same causes, been done at higher rates. Metals have been steady, except in Yellow Metal, which has declined about 4 to 8 annas per picul. Iron Nail Rod, round, Rs. 36-12. Coal: Market continues dull, and prices show a downward tendency.

EXPORTS.—BOMBAY, Sept. 5.—Cotton: An advance of about Rs. 2 per candy in Dhollera, and of about Rs. 5 to 7 per candy in Dharwar Sawginned, which has been chiefly dealt in, has taken place. But the business for export done in Bombay in this week—as indeed in the previous week—has again been very small, amounting to about 5,300 bales.

EXCHANGE.—Bombay, Sept. 5.—The transactions in sterling exchange for the present mail have been to a fair extent. At the departure of the last steamer an advance of ¼ per cent. on Bank bills was established; but this improvement has not been sustained, and at the close the tendency has been decidedly in favour of drawers. There is very little doing in China exchange; 60 days' sight bills, Rs. 219 per 100 dollars.

GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.—Bombay, Sept. 5.—The transactions in Government Paper have been large, and rates have tended steadily upwards, closing ¼ to ⅜ per cent. above the rates of last mail.

THE NEW ACTING ALLOWANCE CODE.

The following orders, issued by the Government of India, in the Financial Department, are published for general information :—

Simla, Aug. 1.—No. 2,440.—The rules respecting acting allowances at present in force in the civil departments are herein arranged and published in the form of a Code.

All previous notifications and orders respecting acting allowances, except Section XXXI. of the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code, are hereby abrogated. Future rulings will take the form of additions and corrections to this Code.

The only alteration made in this Code to which attention need be directed is that Section VII. is slightly different in its effect from the order (No. 1,682, dated July 2, 1869, para. 4) on which it is based, clause (c) being entirely new.

Chapter I.—Definitions and Explanations.

Section I.—Unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, "Local Government" includes a department of the Government of India, a Chief Commissioner, and the Resident at Hyderabad.

Section II.—Appointments are said to be in the same "class" when they are in the same department and bear the same designation, or have been declared by the Government of India to be in the same class. Appointments in the same class are sometimes divided into "grades," according to pay.

Section III. (a.)—The "pay" of an officer is as follows :—

(1.) In the case of an officer with a substantive appointment : the amount which he would receive monthly under any of the following designations if he were doing the work of his substantive appointment : substantive pay, consolidated pay, military pay and allowances, and staff salary, staff corps pay, and staff salary.

(2.) In the case of an officer without a substantive appointment : his subsistence allowance (if a covenanted civil servant), and his military pay and allowances, or staff corps pay (if a military officer).

(c.)—"Salary" is the sum of "pay" and "acting allowance ;" it does not include personal allowances, travelling allowances, or the like.

(d.)—"Consolidated pay" includes military pay and allowances, or staff corps pay, which cannot be separately drawn.

(e.)—"Staff salary" is an allowance to a military officer in addition to the military pay and allowances, or the staff corps pay of his rank.

Section IV.—Unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, "appointment" means "appointment in which an officer is officiating for an absentee."

Section V.—An "absentee" is an officer absent, whether on leave or on duty, from an appointment on which he has a lien.

Chapter II.—General Rules.

Section VI. (a.)—The maximum salary of an officiating officer shall be the pay of the appointment.

(b.)—The minimum salary of an officiating officer shall be half the pay of the appointment.

Section VII. (a.)—If the pay of the appointment is progressive, the maximum salary of the officiating officer shall be the pay which he would from time to time receive if he held the appointment substantively, non-continuous periods of tenure being counted towards his increments ; and the minimum salary shall be half the mean pay.

(b.)—If the officer's pay is not less than the minimum pay of the appointment, he is entitled to the maximum salary stated in clause (a).

(c.)—The officer is entitled to count towards the increments any period in excess of one year, immediately preceding his officiating appointment during which his pay has been not less than the minimum pay thereof : Provided that not more than one year shall be so counted.

Note.—This section does not, without a special order of the Director general, apply to cases arising in the Post-office department.

Section VIII. (a.)—An officer on the maximum pay of his own appointment, officiating in another appointment of which the pay is progressive, and drawing salary not less than the minimum pay thereof, will, if he afterwards obtains it substantively, count the officiating service towards the increments of pay.

(b.)—In departments in which the pay is regulated according to classes, an officer on the maximum pay of his own class officiating in a higher class, and drawing salary not less than the minimum pay of the class immediately superior to his own, will, if he is afterwards promoted to the class last mentioned, count his officiating service towards the increments of pay.

Section IX.—Fractions and percentages of a pay which is progressive are calculated on the mean between the minimum and the maximum.

Section X.—If the pay of an appointment is increased upon an examination being passed, an officiating officer's allowances shall be calculated on the pay which he would from time to time receive if he held the appointment substantively.

Section XI.—If an absentee draws no part of the pay of his appointment another officer may be appointed thereto substantively, for a time only, on full pay, without disturbing the lien of the absentee.

Note.—An absentee who receives leave allowances draws, within the meaning of this section, "part of the pay of his appointment."

Chapter III.—The Covenanted Civil Service.

Section XII. (a.)—An officer with a substantive appointment, officiating in another appointment or in a higher grade, is entitled to an acting allowance of one-fifth of the pay of the appointment or grade.

Note.—In the case of an acting appointment made with effect from before Nov. 1, 1869, or of a reversion to an acting appointment held before that date, the officer is entitled to a further 10 per cent. on Rs. 2,000 of the pay of the appointment or grade.

(b.)—But the acting allowance shall not be less than two-thirds of the difference between the pay (or, in the case of a progressive pay, the minimum pay) of the appointment or grade and the pay of the officiating officer.

(d.)—An officer officiating in a class divided into grades will officiate in the lowest grade unless it be otherwise specially ordered.

[Illustration.—A is magistrate in the first grade of Nuddea. B is magistrate of Midnapore, the senior in the second grade. C is a joint magistrate. If A takes leave, then, in ordinary course of promotion, B would obtain officiating promotion to the first grade without leaving Midnapore, and C appointed to officiate as magistrate of Nuddea would officiate in the second grade.]

Section XIII. (a.)—An officer without a substantive appointment is entitled to an acting allowance of half the pay of any appointment in which he officiates, and to subsistence allowance.

Note.—In certain cases an acting allowance of 75 per cent. is given.—See Section XXXI. Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code.

(b.)—Subsistence allowance is admissible as follows :—

To officers of not more than eight years' residence in India	Rs. 250
To officers of more than eight, but less than twelve, years' residence in India	320
To officers of twelve or more years' residence in India	400

Chapter IV.—Military Officers in Civil Employ.

Section XIV.—The cases which may occur are these :—

(A.) An officer officiating in an appointment of which the pay is consolidated may be—

Case 1. An officer without a substantive appointment.

Case 2. An officer having a substantive appointment the pay of which is consolidated.

Case 3. An officer having a substantive appointment the pay of which is a staff salary.

(B.) An officer officiating in an appointment of which the pay is a staff salary may be—

Case 4. An officer without a substantive appointment.

Case 5. An officer having a substantive appointment the pay of which is consolidated.

Case 6. An officer having a substantive appointment the pay of which is a staff salary.

Note.—An appointment of which the pay is fixed with reference to its being held by a civil officer, covenanted or uncovenanted, is treated, for the purposes of this section, as if the pay of it were "consolidated."

Section XV. In case 1 the officer is entitled to his pay and to such acting allowance as will make the total equal to the sum of the assumed subsistence allowance stated below, plus half the pay of the appointment :—

Assumed Subsistence Allowance.
For the rank of captain or subaltern	Rs. 250
For the rank of major	320
For higher rank	400

Section XVI.—In cases 2 and 3 the acting allowance is regulated by Section XII.

Section XVII. (a.)—In cases 4, 5, and 6 the salaries are calculated by military rules ; any excess of the consolidated pay of the substantive appointment in case 5 over the military pay and allowances or the staff corps pay of the officer being treated as a staff salary.

(b.)—The military rules referred to are as follows :—

(1.) For officers who have elected the rules of 1868—

An officiating officer will draw half the staff salary of the appointment, and half the staff salary of his substantive appointment, if he possesses one, provided the whole staff salary thus drawn be not less than Rs. 100 per mensem.

(2.) For officers who have elected the rules of 1854 :—

An officiating officer will draw half the staff salary of the appointment. After acting for six months, whether continuously or not, in the same post or grade, he is entitled to the full staff salary, as soon as the absentee ceases to draw any part of it.

Section XVIII. (a.)—A medical appointment, the pay of which was fixed by General Order of the Government of India, Military Department, No. 370, dated April 4, 1867, is to be treated for the purposes of this chapter as if the pay thereof were a staff salary equal to the excess, if any, of the consolidated pay over the "unemployed pay" of the permanent incumbent :

(b.)—Provided that an officer appointed to the medical service before November 7, 1864, officiating in one of these appointments, shall receive an aggregate salary not less than his full batta pay.

Chapter V.—Public Works Department.

The following rules regulate the acting allowances of officers of the Engineer Establishment of the Public Works Department, and of the superior officers of the accounts branch of that Department :—

Section XIX. (a.)—No officer of a class divided into grades is allowed to officiate in that class in a grade higher than that which he holds permanently.

(b.)—An officer officiating in a rank which is divided into classes, or in a class divided into grades, will officiate in the lowest class or grade. This rule does not apply to officers officiating in appointments the substantive holders of which must belong to a particular class.

Section XX. (a.)—An officer with a substantive appointment, officiating in a higher class or in another appointment, is entitled to an acting allowance, in addition to his pay, of one-fifth of the civil pay of the class or appointment in which he officiates.

(b.)—A civil officer without a substantive appointment is entitled to an acting allowance of half the civil pay of the class or appointment in which he officiates. A military officer without an appointment is entitled to his pay and to such acting allowance as will make the total equal to the sum of the assumed subsistence allowance stated in Section XV., plus half the civil pay of the class or appointment in which he officiates.

(c.)—In the case of a graded class, the average civil pay of the grades (calculated without reference to the number of appointments in each grade) is deemed to be the civil pay of the class, provided that the officiating officer's salary shall not exceed the pay of the lowest grade.

(d.)—The net military pay of an officer of the Royal Engineers is not taken into account in calculating acting allowances. He is entitled to this pay independently of any other allowance.

Section XXI.—In the following cases special allowances are given, on sanction by the Local Government, or if the appointments are under a Chief Commissioner or an agent to the Governor general, or under the Resident of Hyderabad, or the Superintendent of Port Blair, by the Government of India.

(a.)—A subordinate officiating as an executive engineer is allowed Rs. 100 a month in addition to his pay, provided that the aggregate does not exceed the pay of an executive engineer of the fourth grade.

(b.)—A subordinate officiating as an assistant is allowed an addition of Rs. 50 a month to his pay. This allowance is not admissible on the mere circumstance of the subordinate holding a charge formerly held by an assistant, but only when the charge involves duties and responsibilities which, in character or extent, are such as are not usually imposed on subordinate officers.

(c.)—An accountant officiating for a controller or deputy controller is entitled to draw an allowance of Rs. 100 per month in addition to his pay, provided that the aggregate does not exceed the pay of a deputy controller.

Section XXII.—No increased allowances are admissible to an officer of the Upper Subordinate Establishment, or to a sub-overseer, for performing duties previously entrusted to one of a higher grade in either of the subordinate establishments.

Chapter VI.—The Survey Department.

The following special rules apply to officers not below the rank of assistant surveyor in the Survey Department under the Surveyor-General of India:—

Section XXIII.—An officer officiating in the grade immediately superior to his own is entitled to the same allowances as if he were confirmed in that grade.

Section XXIV.—An officer officiating in a grade higher than that immediately superior to his own is entitled to an acting allowance, in addition to his pay, of one-fifth of the civil pay of the grade in which he officiates.

Note.—The note to Section XII. (a) applies to this section also.

Section XXV.—An officer without a substantive appointment is entitled to an acting allowance in addition to his pay (if any) of half the civil pay of the grade in which he officiates.

Chapter VII.—Other Officers.

Section XXVI.—The following are the rules applicable to officers in civil employ who are not members of the Covenanted Civil Service, nor commissioned officers in the army; nor in the Public Works and Survey (India) Departments, unless they are officiating in appointments below the rank of assistant engineer, or assistant controller, or assistant surveyor; nor officers of the superior establishment of the Telegraph and Forest Departments, whose acting allowances are regulated by the special rules contained in the Appendix.

Section XXVII. (a.)—An officer with a substantive appointment officiating in an appointment which is open to, and may in practice be held by, a covenanted civil servant or an officer of the army, is entitled to the acting allowance prescribed in Section XII.

Postmaster generals, judge of a Small Cause Court, gazetted appointments in the police department.

(b.) An officer with a substantive appointment officiating in an appointment of which the pay is not less than Rs. 100 per mensem, is entitled to an acting allowance of one-fifth of the pay of the appointment. Provided that no officer may, under this clause, be appointed to officiate in a higher grade of his own class.

Section XXVIII.—An officer without a substantive appointment, officiating in an appointment the pay of which is not less than Rs. 100 per mensem, is entitled to an acting allowance of half the pay of the appointment.

Section XXIX.—If the appointment belongs to a graded class, the average pay of the grades (calculated without reference to the number of appointments in each grade) is deemed to be the pay of the appointment. Provided that the officiating officer's salary shall not exceed the pay of the lowest grade. This section does not apply to an officer who belongs to another department, and is specially appointed to officiate in a grade other than the lowest.

Section XXX.—If the pay of the appointment is less than Rs. 200, and the local government considers that the acting allowances admissible by rule are insufficient, it may grant to the officiating officer higher allowances not exceeding the difference between the pay of the appointment and the portion of it drawn by the absentee for whom he officiates.

Section XXXI.—The salary of an officer officiating in an appointment of which the pay is less than Rs. 100 per mensem, should, as far as practicable, be regulated by Sections XXVII. (b.) and XXVIII.; but the officer who appoints the substitute may allow him higher allowances not exceeding the difference between the pay of the appointment and the portion of it drawn by the absentee for whom he officiates.

Chapter VIII.—Plural Appointments.

Section XXXII.—The salary of an officer holding substantively, or officiating in, two or more independent appointments at one time, shall be regulated as follows:—

(a.)—He shall draw the highest salary to which he would be entitled if he held, or officiated in, any one of the appointments alone.

(b.)—For the other appointment or appointments, he shall draw such allowances as the local government may fix, not exceeding, for each appointment, half the salary which he would draw if he held or officiated in it alone.

(c.)—Provided that his aggregate salary shall not exceed the pay which he would draw in the most highly paid of the appointments, if he held it substantively and alone.

(d.)—This proviso may be dispensed with, if the local government declares that, for special reasons (to be communicated to the Supreme Government), it is necessary, on public grounds, to entrust to the one officer the duties of the several offices at once, and that the salary to which he would be limited by the proviso is insufficient.

[Illustration.—A covenanted civil servant holding a substantive appointment, A, of which the pay is Rs. 1,000, is appointed, without being relieved of his own duties, to officiate in two appointments, B, of which the pay is Rs. 1,600, and C, of which the pay is Rs. 2,200.

If he held A only, he would draw ... ... Rs. 1,000
If he officiated in B only, he would draw pay Rs. 1,000, and acting allowance Rs. 400 1,400
If he officiated in C only, he would draw pay Rs. 1,000, and acting allowance Rs. 800 1,800
He will, therefore, draw for C (which carries the highest salary) 1,800

And but for proviso (c) he would be entitled for B and A, to such allowances as the Local Government might fix, not exceeding Rs. $\frac{1,400}{2}$ — 700 for B, and Rs. $\frac{1,000}{2}$ = 500 for A.

But, in consequence of that proviso, his aggregate salary must be limited to Rs. 2,200 (the pay of appointment C), unless the declaration prescribed in clause (d) be made.]

Section XXXIII. (a.).—Section XXXII. does not apply to the case of an officer officiating at the same time in two or more appointments which are ordinarily held substantively by one individual. In such case the two appointments shall, for the purpose of calculating acting allowances, be treated as one appointment upon the aggregate pay.

(b.)—Nor to the case of an officer discharging the duties of more than one appointment in the same office, or on the same establishment.

Examples.—One under-secretary discharging the duties of a fellow under-secretary in the same office or department as well as his own.

A joint magistrate appointed, in addition to his own duties, to officiate as magistrate of the district. In this case, he gets allowances only as officiating magistrate of the district.

A district judge deprived of the help of an additional or assistant judge, and, therefore, doing the additional or assistant judge's work.

A joint magistrate doing the work of a second joint magistrate in the district, well as his own.

A clerk doing the duties of a fellow-clerk in his own office.

(c.)—Nor does that section affect "local allowances" given for the performance of separate duties.

Section XXXIV. (a.).—An officer appointed, without being relieved of his own duties, to be in charge of the current duties of an office, is not ordinarily entitled to acting allowance.

(b.)—But when an officer is appointed to be in charge of the current duties of a judicial office, or of a gazetted office in the police department, and the charge, in the opinion of the local government, entails a substantial increase of responsibility, besides some additional work, he is entitled to a charge allowance of one-tenth of the pay of the office. If the office is open to, and may in practice be held by, a covenanted civil servant or an officer of the army, the minimum charge allowance is Rs. 100 per mensem.

(c.)—An officer of the engineer establishment of the Public Works Department, appointed, without being relieved of his own duties, to be in charge of the current duties of an office of a higher class than his own, is entitled to a charge allowance of one-tenth of the civil pay of the class. But the cases must be reported to the Government of India for confirmation.

Chapter IX.—Exceptional Cases.

Section XXXV.—The allowances of an officiating ordinary member of the Executive Council of the Governor general, or of the Governor of Madras or Bombay, are regulated by Act of Parliament, section 27 of 24 and 25 Vic. cap. 67.

Section 27.—If any vacancy shall happen in the office of an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor general, or of the Council of either of the Presidencies, when no person provisionally appointed to succeed thereto shall be then present on the spot, then, and on every such occasion, such vacancy shall be supplied by the appointment of the Governor general in Council, or the Governor in Council, as the case may be, and until a successor shall arrive, the person so nominated shall execute the office to which he shall have been appointed, and shall have all the powers thereof, and shall have, and be entitled to, the salary and other emoluments and advantages appertaining to the said office during his continuance therein, every such temporary Member of Council foregoing all salaries and allowances by him held and enjoyed at the time of his being appointed to such office; and if any Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor general, or of the Council of either of the Presidencies, shall, by any infirmity or otherwise, be rendered incapable of acting or of attending to act as such, or if any such member shall be absent on leave, and if any person shall have been provisionally appointed as aforesaid, then the place of such member absent or unable to attend shall be supplied by such person, and if no person provisionally appointed to succeed to the office shall be then on the spot, the Governor general in Council, or Governor in Council, as the case may be, shall appoint some person to be a temporary Member of Council, and until the return of the member so absent or unable to attend, the person so provisionally appointed by the Secretary of State in Council, or so appointed by the Governor general in Council, or Governor in Council, as the case may be, shall execute the office to which he shall have been appointed, and shall have all the powers thereof, and shall receive half the salary of the Member of Council whose place he supplies, and also half the salary of his office under the Government of India, or the Government of either of the Presidencies, as the case may be, if he hold any such office, the remaining half of such last-named salary being at the disposal of the Government of India, or other Government, as aforesaid; provided always that no person shall be appointed a temporary Member of the said Council, who might not have been appointed as hereinbefore provided to fill the vacancy supplied by such temporary appointment.

Section XXXVI.—An officiating chief justice, or judge of any High Court, or of the Chief Court of the Punjab, is entitled to the full pay of the appointment.

Section XXXVII.—An officiating law officer draws as acting allowance the difference between the pay of the appointment and the portion of it drawn by the absentee for whom he officiates.

Section XXXVIII.—In the North-Western Provinces, when a settlement officer officiates in an appointment in another department, his salary shall be calculated on the basis of the pay of the ordinary grade next below the standing which he occupies in the settlement department.

Section XXXIX.—In Madras the Government may grant as acting allowance to an officer officiating as translator to Government the difference between the pay of the appointment and the portion of it drawn by the absentee for whom he officiates.

Section XL.—In Madras, the first, second, and third grades of moonsiffships are, for the purpose of this code, deemed to be distinct classes.

	Rs.
Accountant general in Madras, Bombay, or Bengal	1,500
Accountant general in North-Western Provinces or in the Punjab	1,200
Accountant general (or deputy accountant general in independent charge) in British Burmah	1,000
Deputy accountant general (in independent charge) in the Central Provinces, Hyderabad or Mysore	800
Uncovenanted medical officer in medical charge of a civil station	350
Supernumerary deputy collector in Sind	400
Extra assistant commissioner, 3rd class, in British Burmah ...	75
Extra assistant commissioner, except as above	200
Assistant superintendent of Police (except those promoted from lower grades	200

Appendix Referred to in Section XXVI.

Extract from the Telegraph Code, Chapter D.

82.—The following rules relate to the acting allowances of officers of the superior establishment, the expression "consolidated pay" being in all cases understood as the pay fixed for a civil officer holding an appointment, even though the officer affected in the calculation of acting allowance be a military officer.

I.—An officer officiating in the telegraph department, who does not hold any substantive appointment, shall receive an acting allowance of half the consolidated pay of the appointment in which he may officiate. In giving acting allowance under this rule to a military officer not holding any substantive appointment, who may officiate in the telegraph department, the allowance granted will be in addition to his military pay and allowances, up to an amount not exceeding what the officer would draw were he to be confirmed in the lowest grade of the class in which he may be appointed to officiate.

II.—An officer officiating as director general shall draw a salary not less than Rs. 2,500 per mensem.

III.—Except, as provided in Rules I. and V., an officer officiating in a grade immediately superior to his own shall draw the minimum consolidated pay of that grade; if he be a military officer, and the grade in which he is officiating carry staff allowances, he shall draw the same salary as he would draw were he permanently confirmed in the grade in which he officiates.

IV.—Except, as provided in Rules I. and V., an officer officiating in a grade higher than that immediately superior to his own shall draw an acting allowance of one-fifth of the mean consolidated pay of the grade in which he officiates, provided that the whole salary drawn by him shall not exceed the minimum pay of the grade in which he officiates. If, however, he be a military officer officiating in a grade carrying staff allowances, he shall draw, in addition to the staff allowances of his own grade, an acting allowance of one-fifth of the staff allowances of the grade in which he officiates, provided that the whole salary drawn by him shall not exceed the maximum pay fixed for the grade in which he officiates.

V.—No assistant superintendent, when officiating for another assistant superintendent of a higher grade, shall draw any acting allowance.

VI.—These Rules are to be applied to all officers, military or civil, officiating in the superior appointments of the Telegraph Department, in all cases, whether in an absolute vacancy or during the absence of the permanent incumbent on general or privilege leave, special duty, or field service.

VII.—The acting allowance to the substitute of an officer on privilege leave will be paid by the State.

VIII.—A superintendent holding charge of two divisions will receive an allowance of Rs. 100 a-month, and any assistant superintendent in charge of two sub-divisions Rs. 50 a-month. This, however, is only to be allowed under special circumstances, and as temporary arrangement, and must be reported to the Government of India for confirmation.

96. No increased allowances are payable to any officer of the upper or lower subordinate establishments, or to any sub-inspector, for performing duties previously entrusted to one of a higher grade in either of those subordinate establishments.

Extract from the Rules for the Appointments, &c., of Officers of the Forest Department under the Control of the Government of India.

XII.—As a rule, all officiating appointments will be made to the lowest grade of assistant or deputy conservator, and to the lowest class of conservator, and in such cases the salary of the officiating officer will be the pay of the lowest grade or class of the office in which he officiates. There being no fixed number in the different grades of the assistant conservator and deputy conservator, no officiating appointments in the higher grades within these classes will be permitted.

XIII.—If in any special case an officiating appointment is made otherwise than to the lowest grade or class of assistant of deputy conservator or conservator, the salary of the officiating officer will be regulated by the ordinary rules regarding acting allowance, or will be specially fixed by the Government of India.

Aug. 3, No. 2,567.—To all departments of the Government of India, all Local Governments and offices of account, and heads of department, under Financial Department.

I am directed to invite attention to the distinctive use of the words "pay" and "salary" adopted in the Covenanted Civil Service Leave Code, and in the Acting Allowance Code, and to request that, as far as may be convenient, the distinction may be observed in all official documents in future—"pay" being used in the sense of "substantive pay," and "salary" as including "acting allowance."

2. I am also to suggest that the term "deputation allowance" be restricted to the case of an allowance given to an officer deputed on special duty, and that allowances given under the Acting Allowance Code be called "acting allowances."

Judicial Appointments.—The Gazette of last Tuesday announces the appointment of Sir Walter Morgan, Knight, to be Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature at Madras; and of Mr. Robert Stuart, Q.C., to be Chief Justice of the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces of India.

A New Mountain Gun for India.—The Royal gun factories are again constructing bronze guns, but of a new description. Sixteen 9-pounders, of 3-inch bore, weighing 2 cwt., and about three feet in length, are ordered to be cast for mountain service, and one has been sent to the Indian arsenal at Cossipore, near Calcutta, as a pattern upon which Colonel Maxwell, the superintendent of the Royal gun factories there, will manufacture a supply for India. It may be remembered that the 9-pounder bronze field gun at present in use by the Royal Horse Artillery, but condemned after trial on account of the inability of the material to stand the wear of rifled projectiles, was introduced mainly on the strong recommendation of Colonel Maxwell, who is esteemed as a very able officer, and that they are still being made in India. It is thought remarkable, by some of the practical gun-makers of the Royal Arsenal, that after recent experience there should be a return to bronze, and that the Abyssinian mountain gun, a steel weapon, which has established its excellence in actual service, should have been apparently put into the shade.

Death of Lieutenant-General Down, Bombay Army.—We regret to record the death of Lieutenant-General J. S. Down, of the Bombay Army, which occurred on the 25th ult., at Kilburn. The late General proceeded to Bombay as a cadet of infantry in December, 1819, and continued to serve without a day's leave of absence or sick certificate from the country to the end of March, 1861, when he returned to England, after a service of forty-two years, and his services were neither few nor unmeritorious. He was in the campaign in the Persian Gulf, under General Sir Lionel Smith, G.C.B.; on the 10th of April, 1830, when a captain, he carried the town of Wankanier by storm, at the head of the detachments of the 7th, 16th, and 23rd Regiments, for which he received the thanks of the Government; and on the 13th of February, 1831, he surprised the camp of Pertaub Sing, on the banks of the Taptee, capturing the whole of his horse, camp equipage, arms, and correspondence. He obtained the medal for his share in the battles of Meeanee and Hyderabad, and as colonel commanded the Malligaum Brigade during the Mutiny.

Promotion in the Army.—We are informed that in arranging the promotions, after the 1st of November, every endeavour will be made to keep up the existing regimental system, whilst the claims of the senior and most deserving officers in each grade will be carefully considered. In selecting men to fill the vacancies amongst the lieutenant-colonels and majors, so many things will have to be weighed over it may be impossible to give promotions regimentally; but as regards the advancement of the junior officers, it is expected that after a while they will in a large measure get their steps in the corps in which they have served. There are a great number of officers who, although some way down the regimental lists, entered the service long before many of those standing before them. These men will be picked out, and given promotion much in the order in which they stand on the General Service Seniority List. In some corps promotion has been very rapid, in others it has been very slow during the past ten years. It will now be pretty much equalised, for as vacancies occur in such regiments as the 37th, 52nd, 75th, 83rd, and others we can name, men from corps which have complained of stagnation with some reason will very properly be brought in to fill them.—Army and Navy Gazette.

Experiments with Marine Torpedoes.—Some interesting experiments with marine torpedoes are at present being carried on in the Medway by the Royal Engineers. A wooden hut has been erected on the river bank, and inside the hut is placed an instrument which in appearance somewhat resembles an ordinary cottage pianoforte. The keys are all numbered, and each key when touched communicates by electric agency through a connecting wire with one of a string of torpedoes anchored across the river. There is no risk of injury to ships at present passing up and down the stream, for the torpedoes are not charged with gunpowder; and, indeed, if they were, the mere circumstance of a ship striking one would not of itself cause it to explode. When a ship runs against either of the torpedoes, it simply causes the movement of a lever, which by its action conveys to the operator on shore the number of the particular torpedo which is under the ship's bottom. The operator then, supposing the torpedo to be charged, may if he chooses touch the corresponding key on the instrument before him, and thereby cause the torpedo to explode and destroy the vessel which is passing over it. A distinction can consequently be at all times made between friendly ships and those of the enemy, provided that they can be seen from the shore. The object of the present experiments is chiefly to test the general working of the apparatus, and with this view a second hut is being erected, in which a duplicate instrument is to be placed, so that their accuracy may be effectually checked by comparison.—Broad Arrow.

Military Engineering.—During the approaching winter a course of lectures, similar to those which have proved so successful in former years, will be delivered by order of the War Department to the officers and men of the School of Military Engineering at Chatham. The lecturers selected by the Secretary of State for War to deliver the lectures are Mr. A. H. Green, Mr. T. Laslett, Admiralty timber inspector, Mr. W. Y. Dent, Mr. R. Aitken, C.E., and Dr. de Chaumont, assistant professor of hygiene at Netley Hospital. The authorities at the War Department having directed the formation of a class of volunteer officers for the study of military engineering, at Chatham, the following officers of volunteers have joined for that purpose at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham :—Captain J. Nash, M.D., 1st Somerset Engineer Volunteers ; Captain A. T. Arrol, 1st Lanarkshire Engineer Volunteers ; Lieutenant H. J. P. Parry, Lieutenant W. W. Roberts, Lieutenant B. Wontner, and Lieutenant B. M. Courage, 1st Middlesex Engineer Volunteers.

The Suez Canal.—The Viceroy, a new auxiliary screw steamship, 2,225 tons burthen, belonging to and built by Messrs. Green and Company, of Blackwall, left her moorings off Gravesend on Wednesday, bound for Madras and Calcutta, via the Suez Canal. This ship may be described as the first of a new line of steamers intended to ply regularly between London and Calcutta. That she supplies a want may be gathered from the fact that the one hundred first-class berths her accommodation affords have all been engaged for several weeks past, and when she left Plymouth on Friday not a berth nor a yard of cargo space was unfilled. The Viceroy is rigged as a three-masted schooner, and whenever a favourable wind prevails every stitch of canvas will be set. Her engines, on the compound principle, have been supplied by Messrs. Ravenhill ; Mr. Colman, a man of large experience, whose latest duty was to take the turret-ship Magdala to Bombay for the English Government, having been appointed chief engineer. The ship is commanded by Capt. J. H. Taylor, late of the Renown, formerly of the Trafalgar, both ships belonging to Messrs. Green's fleet, and it is understood that so great is his confidence in his new command that he has pledged himself to make Calcutta within thirty-four days.

Progress of the Cholera.—The announcement which we made a few days ago relative to the outbreak and spread of cholera in Arabia is unhappily too true. The disease is making its way steadily towards Egypt in pretty much the same manner as it did a few years ago. Egypt usually imports the disease to the Mediterranean ports direct, and hence the anxiety with which the presence of the cholera at the present time in Arabia is regarded by epidemiologists. The Lancet infers, from certain facts which it publishes, that the danger to this kingdom of a renewed invasion of cholera has been rather underrated than overstated. These facts show that since the middle of June last the cholera has been widely prevalent in the central, the northern, and the north-eastern parts of Persia ; that starting a few weeks ago from Meshed Hussein in the pashalik of Bagdad, it spread as an epidemic to Khayber, a village about three days' journey from Medina, and situated on an important route to the town. The [illegible]e of the Mecca pilgrimage is at hand, and the Ottoman authorities are most anxious lest the cholera should break out among them, for the pilgrims would as usual spread it far and wide. The danger to Europe as regards an invasion by cholera is of course greatly augmented now that the disease is approaching Egypt and the Mediterranean afresh by the same route as in 1865. Our contemporary says that the disease is extending from the pashalik of Bagdad into the Hedjaz, from the Black Sea to the Bosphorus, upon the sea-board provinces of Germany to the central provinces of the empire, and that in the presence of a widely-spread extending epidemic of cholera, which has effected a lodgment in the westernmost parts of Europe and is increasing there, the danger of the epidemic invading Great Britain can hardly be called remote or the precautionary measures premature which are now being so strongly urged upon the local authorities.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The New Indian Loan.—The following note in the Times condemns the process by which the Indian Government propose to effect the conversion of the £16,000,000 5 per cent. loan of 1857 into a new 4½ per cent. loan, as being indefensible in principle and dangerous in practice—a view which is unequivocally shared by the leading persons in London connected with Indian commerce and finance, and which is strengthened by several minor objectionable features which the writer has foreborne to touch upon :—"Sir,—In your city article of Sept. 23, when alluding to the notice of the Secretary of State for India regarding the conversion of the 5 per cent. loan of 1857, you omitted to comment upon one important part of the scheme. I allude to the simultaneous investment of a portion of the paper currency reserve. The action of the Indian Government in this matter has a dangerous tendency. Last year an Act was passed by the Legislative Council increasing the limit of investment and reducing to the same extent the amount of cash to be held as currency reserve. And Sir Richard Temple apparently is taking advantage of this altered limit to assist the conversion of the 5 into a 4 per cent. loan. No objection could be taken to his reducing the rate of interest at the expiration of the term guaranteed, as the improved credit of the Indian Government enables him to do. But it is wrong that he should make use of his position as guardian of the currency reserves to facilitate his financial transactions. The improper use of the paper currency reserves requires to be most jealously guarded against, and, although the present matter may not in itself be of much consequence, an important principle is at stake. If the currency department has £2,700,000 which it can safely invest, let it be invested by all means ; but do not make the investment subservient to other financial considerations. The effect of the measure will depend on whether the holders of the loan take advantage of the Government offer of conversion to the extent limited (£13,500,000), or not. If the offers are in excess of the limit, then the holders whose offers are rejected will have reason to complain of their interests having been injuriously affected by a preference having been given to the currency department. If, on the other hand, the offers are less than the limit, then the Government will, practically, only have succeeded in converting its loan by making use of the funds at its disposal as custodian of the currency reserves. In the one case, there will be an injury to the public ; in the other, I venture to think, to the credit of the currency department. But with either result the action of the Government is indefensible in principle and dangerous in practice. Absence from town has prevented my addressing you earlier on the subject.—A. C. S."

TO INDIA IN SIX DAYS.

The Daily News remarks that neither of the three great lines now used offers any substantial advantage over the other; it is a question of 5,675 miles of sea by Marseilles, against 4,524 by Brindisi, and 4,843 by Trieste, any little item filched from seafaring being made up in each case by a disproportionate distance of additional railway. The time occupied varies only by a few hours, whichever route be taken, and there is no escaping the twenty days which, by the finest passage, must be passed by the voyagers to or from India, chiefly on a wilderness of waters. The very first stroke of work on the proposed railway might might be made an immediate gain in time. Mr. Andrew, Chairman of the Scinde Railway, some time ago proposed a railway between Seleucia, on the eastern verge of the Mediterranean and Bussorah, on the Gulf of Persia. By the insertion of this 900 miles of railroad the time occupied by a journey to India would be brought within thirteen days. The line proposed by Mr. Andrew exactly coincides, so far as it goes, with that indicated in Messrs. Low and Thomas's pamphlet, and might well be secured as a preliminary advantage. Of course, we shall have all the usual hobgoblins rise up. Chimæras dire will resist the Indian engine on every mile of its progress before it starts. And very likely there will be some obstacles not phantasmal. There may, very probably, be greater difficulties than our sanguine engineers anticipate in the way of the financial and political co-operation between the various nations concerned, which such a project implies. But, after all, the optimists are oftener proved right than the pessimists in such matters. As we passed in our vision one city on our way, we may take comfort from a saying of a sage who once dwelt there, "The Tigris will run by Bagdat after the race of Califs is extinct." And what Saadi foresaw of the Califs we may assume of the cavillers. The current of material progress and human civilisation will find its channel, and wear away many impediments. It is the fortunate characteristic of great undertakings that they gradually turn foes into friends, and even in the end find Nature herself an ally. In this very pamphlet, for example, which was published just before the triumphal opening of the Mont Cenis Tunnel, we find the authors anticipating trouble in it for want of ventilation. May they take courage from the illusoriness of that apprehension, and find every fierce-looking lion on their path similarly chained!

THE INDIAN PROBLEM.

The Times says:—It is but a few years since the chief of Mussulman sovereigns in India, and the representative of one of the greatest houses of Asia, saw the last relics of authority and State torn from him, and was sent to die a prisoner under English guards for treason to the British power. The tradition of supremacy is still fresh, and will hardly die out from the breasts of the present generation. But such feelings are likely to yield in time to the new influences which British rule brings with it. The Mussulman malcontents, whatever they may say, desire change only that it may restore their own religious and political sovereignty. When the craving for this dies out by the growth of a generation which has nowhere known it, the very object of agitation and conspiracy will have passed away. What the Indian Government has now to do is to keep a firm, cool hand on these people, showing neither alarm nor anger, but making an example of every offender. This, with perfect justice to the native population and the development of the Empire's vast resources, will dissipate the dangers which seem to many to loom in the future.

KNIGHTHOOD.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to make the following, among other Colonial appointments, to the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, viz., Charles Peter Layard, Esq., Government Agent for the Western Province of the Island of Ceylon.

CONSULAR.—The subjoined Consular appointments have been approved of, viz., Mr. J. H. Bandon, as Consul at Bassein, Pegu; Mr. T. F. M. Kramer, as Consul at Colombo, Ceylon; Mr. A. J. W. Arnott, as Consul at Port Louis, Mauritius; Mr. O. Mooyer, as Consul at Singapore. (All the above Consuls represent his Majesty the Emperor of Germany, King of Prussia.)

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, VIA SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those VIA BRINDISI every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the date of the next despatch will be:—
VIA SOUTHAMPTON, on the Saturday, Oct. 14.
VIA BRINDISI, on the Friday, Oct. 6.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

TRANSMISSION OF INDIAN, &c., MAILS, VIA THE BRENNER PASS AND BRINDISI.

The several lines of mail communication through France being exposed, by the operations of the War, to sudden interruption, the Postmaster-General considers that it has become absolutely necessary to divert the course of the British Overland Indian Mails, and to send them, for the present, through Belgium and Germany, and over the Brenner Pass, to Brindisi.

As the mails despatched on Friday evening will only reach Brindisi, under existing arrangements, a short time before the departure of the Packet, the Supplementary Mails hitherto despatched on Saturday morning will be discontinued.—By command of the Postmaster-General.—General Post-office, October 19, 1870.
